Tighten Rules for Their Deferment.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 24 (AP).—Selective service tonight ordered increased drafting of men 30 thru 33 years old by permitting their deferment only if they are "necessary to" an essential industry.

Heretofore men of that age only had to be "engaged in" such a industry.

Mounting Man Power Needs.

The new instructions to draft boards mean that a larger number of the approximately 1,500,000 men in that age bracket holding occupational deferments will enter military service this year, a selective service spokesman said.

While unable to estimate how many of the men 30 thru 33 will be needed to fill the army's mounting man power demand, the spokesman called attention to testimony of Maj. Gen. Hershey, draft director, last week that men over 30 would make up 30 per cent of the entire draft call by the end of this year.

"If all other factors are equal, a father should be given greater consideration for occupational deferment than a nonfather in this age group," Hershey's memorandum to draft boards directed.

Instructions to Boards.

The local boards were instructed that the 30-33 registrants, to be eligible for deferment, must be "necessary to and regularly engaged in an activity in war production or in support of the national health, safety, or interest."

Being "regularly engaged in" such activity continues to be the deferment rule for men aged 34 thru 37.

The selective service announcement emphasized the heavy demand for combat replacements, the virtual exhaustion of physically fit men in the 18-25 age group, and the "extremely limited" supply of men 26 thru 29.

Prospect for Those 18-29.

"The prospect for registrants 18 thru 29 is that they will be inducted unless the information submitted to local boards by employers indicates that they are indispensable and irreplaceable in an activity in war production or in support of the national health, safety, and interest."

The announcement gave details of the method by which a limited number of men under 30 holding key positions in war industries will be considered for deferment.

Fifteen government agencies were designated to certify whether registrants should get strong consideration, as an aid to the decisions of local boards. The new procedure also calls for the filing of a new form, called "form 42a [special revised]" for men under 30 whose deferment is sought. The use of this form is compulsory.

Employers may file the form with the local board even tho the federal agency having jurisdiction refuses to issue a certificate or if the employer does not come within the jurisdiction of any federal agency, selective service said. In such cases the local board will use its best judgment.

For Government Employes.

Similar procedure is set up for federal government employes under 30.

The list of agencies which may issue certificates follows: Army service forces, navy department, army air forces, war production board, maritime commission, petroleum administration for war, office of defense transportation, war food administration, coördinator of fisheries, rubber reserve, solid fuels administration for war, review committee on deferment of government employes, national roster of scientific and specialized personnel, office of scientific research and development, and the procurement and assignment service.

Kelly Pledges Aid to WMC in Cafe Curfew

Compliance with the federal midnight curfew will be sought in Chicago with the use of police if necessary, Mayor Kelly said yesterday after the war man power commission adopted a policy that can put a night spot out of business if it violates the curfew, which goes into effect tomorrow. The WMC had asked area directors to obtain the assistance of mayors and sheriffs as a means of learning of violations.

WMC listed four means of punishment that may be invoked by the WMC area director on reports of violations transmitted to him by a mayor or a sheriff.

Both Kelly and Sheriff Mulcahy said they believed most entertainment places in the curfew category would observe the early closing willingly, but added that they were ready to do whatever federal officials asked.

"Only for Emergency."

"I have every confidence that most operators will comply as a patriotic duty," said the mayor. "They understand this is only for the emergency. But if the WMC wishes the police to report on places open after midnight, the police will be instructed to do so."

The mayor said he had talked on the phone with Mayor La Guardia of New York, who had been quoted as somewhat defiant of War Mobilization Director Byrnes' curfew request. La Guardia told him, Kelly said, that he had intended to say the night clubs might delay their curfew preparations until Washington had clarified procedure. This the WMC attempted to do in its statement yesterday. La Guardia said he would abide by WMC's wishes, Kelly reported. Byrnes has described the curfew as a means of conserving electricity, fuel, man power, and transportation facilities.

Measures which WMC said could be applied to violators are:

1. Placing of a "zero" employment ceiling on an establishment, which means the proprietor may not hire any one except maintenance employes, such as a janitor.

Fuel Can Be Cut Off.

2. Withdrawal of power and fuel by the war production board.

3. Withholding of rationed food and other commodities by the office of price administration.

4. A ban on deliveries by the office of defense transportation.

Two groups were exempted. They are entertainments for military personnel arranged by "responsible agencies," and the service of food, but not liquor, in established all-night restaurants.

All other entertainment places, public and private, are expected to dismiss the customers, turn off the lights and heat at the stroke of 12 starting tomorrow night, both Byrnes and WMC said.

Types of Places Affected.

The following types of places are affected:

"Night clubs, sport arenas, theaters, dance halls, road houses, saloons, bars, shooting galleries, bowling, billiard and pool establishments, amusement parks, carnivals, circuses, coin operated amusement device parlors, ice skating and roller skating rinks, entertainment activity of yacht, country, and other clubs, dance studios and schools, and gambling establishments."

Package liquor stores, which sell liquor in bottles only, and not by the drink, would not be affected by the order, in the opinion of Jack Russell, public relations executive for the regional WMC office. He

Premier Slain After Egypt Declares War

CAIRO, Egypt, Feb. 24 (AP).—Prime Minister Ahmed Maher of Egypt was shot and killed in the chamber of deputies tonight shortly after he had read a royal decree declaring war on the axis.

The prime minister had just completed his reading of the decree by King Farouk and was leaving the chamber when three shots were fired at him from close range.

Witnesses said the assailant was a 22-year-old member of the extremist party and some identified him as a young lawyer. He was arrested immediately.

The parliament was convened at 5:30 p. m., and Ahmed Maher made a brief statement reviewing the reasons for the government action, then formally read the royal decree.

He was heard in absolute silence. Concluding, he stepped from the speaker's dais and walked toward a corridor.

Assassin Steps Close.

A newspaper photographer halted him, asking that he pose in the doorway. At that instant a young man stepped close, produced a pistol and fired.

Tumult ensued. Scores of deputies rushed into the corridor as the premier sank to the floor. The premier's daughter was present in the chamber. Fighting her way to his side, she was overcome by hysteria and collapsed.

The king was notified immediately and reached the chamber before his chief minister died.

A government statement later said the assassin was considered to be pro-axis but "it is understood the crime is not connected in any way with Egypt's declaration of war."

It was learned, however, that there was no connection between the assassination and the death sentences passed recently on the slayers of A. E. Guinness [Lord Moyne].

Big Three Influence.

Government sources said the decision to join the allies was the consequence of recent conferences with middle eastern leaders near here by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

The decision of Egypt and other nations of the middle east, like that of Turkey yesterday, is explained in diplomatic circles to be the result of the Big Three agreement making a declaration of war on the axis a condition of participation in the allied nations meeting at San Francisco, April 25.

Ahmed Maher was head of the Saadist party which swept the polls in the Egyptian elections last month. He subsequently formed a coalition government.

POINT REQUIREMENTS FOR MARGARINE, OILS, SHORTENING BOOSTED

Ration points required for lard, shortening, salad, and cooking oils and margarine were boosted last midnight by the office of price administration. Margarine value went to five red points a pound, while the ration cost of the other products was set at four points, making an over-all boost of two points per pound on each item. The OPA said the increases were necessary because of a tight supply condition, but added that butter would remain at 24 points a pound.

Hail 2 Women as Heroines in Airlines Crash

Marion, Va., Feb. 24 [Special].—The heroism and fortitude of two women emerged today as enthralling features of yesterday's crash of an American Airlines plane, which killed 17 of 22 persons aboard. They are Mrs. Frances Ulen, Washington, D. C., a passenger, and Sarah Padgett, Nashville, Tenn., the plane's stewardess.

Mrs. Ulen, altho suffering a severe ankle injury, traveled two miles down a mountainside to bring aid to the wrecked plane, while Miss Padgett, herself injured and suffering from exposure, ministered to the other three survivors and kept them alive until help came.

Drags Self Over Rocks.

Part of the story of Mrs. Ulen's dramatic journey for help was told by Wiley Vaught, a farmer of Rural Retreat, Va., who found her at 3 p. m. yesterday as she was dragging herself over the rocky terrain.

"That woman had taken six hours to travel those two miles, and had fainted several times but each time she revived and kept on going," Vaught said.

"She had been imprisoned in the wreckage for several hours unable to extricate herself because a mortally wounded marine colonel was pinned above her," Vaught said.

"Both Were Swell."

He said the injured woman told him she found that her attempts to climb from the wreckage brought so much pain to the colonel that she desisted and lay quiet. The crash took place about 2:25 a. m., and Mrs. Ulen estimated that it was about 9 a. m. when the colonel died. She then pulled herself out of the plane and started for help.

Lt. Erwin Schwartz, U. S. M. C., of Syracuse, N. Y., one of the other survivors, was unstinting in his praise of Mrs. Ulen and Miss Padgett. He said the stewardess insisted on caring for the injured and suffered exposure after at first refusing to use some of the coats taken from the plane for protection against the bitter cold.

"They were both swell," he said.

1,600 PLANES IN RAID; YANKS WIN HALF IWO FIELD

Marines Gain 300 to 500 Yards on Isle.

BULLETIN.

Adm. Nimitz announced in a special bulletin that the carrier aircraft were attacking military, naval, and air installations "in and around Tokyo."

A Tokyo broadcast, made while the raid was in progress, described it as even in greater strength than those of Feb. 16 and 17 which destroyed or damaged 659 Jap planes and 36 ships, including an escort carrier and three destroyers.

Aid Operations on Iwo.

"This time the enemy raided our mainland with a sum total of about 1,600 planes," the broadcast said. "It is believed that these planes had been giving aid to the operations now going on over Iwo Island. Our air forces are continuing to corner these carrier planes at each opportunity, and at this moment fierce aerial interceptive battles are taking place."

The broadcast said the raid was concentrated on the Kanto district which embraces Tokyo and Yokohama. It includes 10 neighboring prefectures.

Tokyo said the attack on the city began at 7 a. m.

Tokyo's claims drew no immediate navy comment. The headquarters bulletin reported the raid without elaboration.

Adm. Nimitz disclosed in his regular bulletin that the marines now own almost half of Iwo Island thru advances up to 500 yards Saturday.

[The purpose of the new attack most likely is to keep cut up and pinned down any enemy home air fleet which could be sent 750 miles south to support the Nipponese garrison being pushed back into the north half of Iwo.]

Gain 300 Yards on Iwo.

They are encountering some of the most modern weapons Japan has employed in the war.

Pushing their lines north to encompass nearly the whole south half of the island, they ground out gains of 300 to 500 yards. But it was paid for in blood every inch of the way past pillboxes, blockhouses, and fortified caves. On one flank alone 100 caves, 30 to 40 feet deep, had to be knocked out.

Headquarters in its bulletin spoke of interlocking underground strongholds; it described pillboxes with bulkheads four feet thick; it mentioned enemy rockets weighing around 1,000 pounds.

Lt. Comdr. J. Mutrie, a coast guard officer, flew 1,500 feet above the smoking island today. He said he saw only two bits of color against the drab battleground—"the Stars and Stripes over Mount Suribachi and the red emblem of Japan on a broken wing plane on the airport."

Fighting for Suribachi crater was still going on with the leathernecks ranged along the rim directing their fire toward what appeared to be a trench inside the crater's western edge, Mutrie said. An American cruiser was throwing shells into caves in the sides of the peak.

Manila Freed of Japs; Count 12,000 Dead

MANILA, Feb. 25 [Sunday]—(AP).—Manila, strewn with the bodies of more than 12,000 Japanese, was completely liberated Saturday—three weeks to a day after Yanks first entered it.

The death gasp of the enemy's garrison was emitted within the walls of the Intramuros, where 3,000 frightened and tortured civilians were rescued yesterday.

Maj. Gen. Robert S. Beightler's 37th and Maj. Gen. Verne D. Mudge's 1st cavalry divisions, the first to enter Manila, slaughtered the last remnants of an enemy garrison once estimated at 20,000.

Many Dead Uncounted.

Many enemy dead remain to be counted in the fire scarred city where "the enemy apparently expected to turn the tide of battle in a supreme effort," Gen. MacArthur announced today. Final victory crowned a battle so bitter that at times Americans were fighting on one floor of a building against Japanese above them or in the basement.

Its last stages were marred by Japanese practice of murder and rapine against unarmed civilians. Contrary to all expectations, American casualties in the Intramuros fighting were light.

Most of the 3,000 rescued were women and children. Few male civilians escaped death. Many of the freed, the bulk Filipinos, had been wounded or burned. There were a number of priests and nuns.

Japs Dynamited Out.

The last Japanese were dynamited in caves and tunnels under the walled city.

Manila's famed waterfront pier seven, one of the longest concrete piers in the world, was captured yesterday by the cavalrymen, but the Japanese had wrecked the port terminal.

Gen. MacArthur's bulletin disclosed a 10th division, the 33d, is in action on Luzon, operating in mountains east of the central plain.

Japs' Plans Doomed.

"This operation and the tremendous and disproportionate losses in men and material sustained during the progress of our advance thru Luzon following the catastrophic defeat in Leyte dooms Gen. Yamashita's Philippine campaign and presages the early clearance of the entire archipelago," said Gen. MacArthur.

Manila was first entered Feb. 3. The slugging match started a few days later when the Japanese devastated a square mile of the main business district on the north side, blew up all bridges over the Pasig river, and then put up a street fight on the south.

East of Manila, where the 1st cavalry division and the 6th infantry division are driving into the Marikina watershed, elements penetrated to within two miles of Montalban. Southeastward they reached Angono on the north shore of Laguna de Bay.

Gain in East Luzon.

On the east side of the Luzon central plain, 25th division infantrymen captured Pantabangan in the Caraballo mountains, 100 miles north of Rizal. Pantabangan is in the heart of the Abalio and Ilongot head-hunting country.

In addition to the 12,000 Japanese bodies in Manila, MacArthur reported that on captured Corregidor in Manila bay 2,300 enemy dead had been counted.

He added "several thousand have been destroyed underground by the blasting and closing of 132 tunnels."

FIND EVIDENCE GERMANS STOLE RED CROSS FOOD

BY JOHN THOMPSON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUEREN, Germany, Feb. 24.—Three empty food cartons, of the type sent by the International Red Cross to French prisoners of war, were found today in Dueren by Lt. Col. Mark Plaisted of Springfield, Ill.

"There never were any French war prisoners in Dueren," said Plaisted. "This is conclusive evidence that the German soldiers have broken open Red Cross parcels intended for prisoners of war."

The parcels were found in a building of the N. D. S. K., Nazi labor organization, which had been used as soldiers' barracks. One parcel I saw had an identification number and bore notification that it was being sent to a French prisoner of war. The remainder of the printing was in English.

BIG GUNS CRUSH VILLAGES ALONG ARMIES' PATHS

Planes Rip Germans Moving to Front.

Say 40 Divisions Used

LONDON, Feb. 24 (AP).—One German radio commentator tonight declared that Gen. Eisenhower had hurled no fewer than 40 divisions at the Maas-Eifel sector of the western front alone and predicted still greater allied blows to the south. Cologne was reported in flames after an aerial hammering.

Another German commentator said that "by using his vastly superior air force, Eisenhower has been able to stop all movements behind the German front."

PARIS, Feb. 25 [Sunday]—(AP).—The American 1st and 9th armies plunged nearly five miles across the Cologne plain beyond the shattered Roer river defense line yesterday, engulfing 30 towns and villages and capturing hundreds of Germans.

At dusk on the second day of the powerful push American spearheads were 12 miles from the western Ruhr basin and 19 miles from Cologne, and had won half of the Roer river bastion of Dueren.

Nearest announced approaches to Cologne were at captured Oberzier and Niederzier, villages between Juelich and Dueren and each 19 miles from Cologne's outskirts.

Battle on 22 Mile Front.

The thunderous battle flamed along a 22 mile front. Massed artillery was smashing German villages in the path of the surging ground forces, and battle planes bombed and machine gunned columns of Germans trying to reach the front. Rail traffic was paralyzed. Tactical air forces on the continent flew 3,315 sorties during the day, destroying thousands of German vehicles on the highways and hundreds of locomotives and freight cars on railways behind the front.

A late report said that Marshal von Rundstedt was rushing German reserves from the south into the battle on the approaches to Duesseldorf and Cologne. Other than this report there still was no sign that the enemy was ready to make a new stand.

9th Gains Momentum.

Lt. Gen. Simpson's 9th army on the north flank of the offensive gained momentum after smashing thru Baal, 12 miles southwest of Muenchen Gladbach, an industrial city of 200,000 at the western fringe of the Ruhr.

High ground was seized beyond Baal and Simpson's troops were astride the railway to Muenchen Gladbach. They were 25 miles from the big Ruhr center of Duesseldorf. "We're looking down their throats," declared a high ranking staff officer.

Three miles to the southeast troops of the 102d division captured Hottorf, five miles north of American held Juelich, and also completely cleared the enemy from Gevenich, Glimbach, Tetz, Boslar, and other villages in the area. Troops of this spearhead also were about 25 miles from Duesseldorf.

Eight Miles from Erft River.

The capture of Hottorf and the plunge beyond put the Americans eight miles from the Erft river, where a new German stand may be made 10 miles from the Rhine.

The 102d division alone took more than 800 prisoners since they jumped off east of Linnich, and both the 9th and Lt. Gen. Hodges' 1st army had taken at least 1,400 in the first 24 hours of the offensive. Hundreds more are streaming back into the prisoner pens.

Both armies had swarmed up on high ground dominating the Cologne plain, and front reports said the offensive was ahead of schedule.

Dueren Also Outflanked.

The 1st army captured the towns of Birkesdorf and Niederau which flank Dueren on the north and south. The 104th division fought on into Arnoldsweiler, two miles northeast of Dueren. The 104th and the 8th division operating on its southern flank presumably both have troops inside Dueren.

Four towns on the west bank of the Roer, beyond the northernmost sector of the bridgehead northwest of Linnich, were taken by troops who closed up to the river on a six mile stretch of the west bank which had not been cleared previously. They were Porselen, Obertruck, Kempen, and Schanz.

Engineers at the cost of the highest casualties since D-day finally erected bridges across the Roer, and tonight heavy equipment, anti-tank guns, troops, and supplies poured across in a never ending stream. The German chance to smash the bridgeheads was gone.

Associated Press Correspondent Wes Gallagher said from the front there was no indication of a German stand, and that the 9th army "might well punch thru the so-far feeble German defenses to the Rhine in hours or days."

Nazis Counter-Attack.

The Germans threw in six counter-attacks 18 hours after the offensive broke, employing as many as 20 tanks. Artillery fire drove the enemy back.

While the 9th army swung rapidly beyond Juelich, artillery behind it smashed the thick walls of the ancient, moated citadel in the northern edge of Juelich and infantry stormed thru the breaches, wiping out the last resistance inside.

It was revealed officially that the 29th infantry division took Juelich.

Field Marshal Montgomery's Canadian 1st army on the north end of the front lashed out in new attacks. Reconnaissance forces prodded almost to the road center of Calcar without resistance. [Brussels radio said the Canadians had entered Calcar.]

On the center of that front, Scottish infantry fought to within a mile of Weeze, a railhead three miles south of the captured west-wall strongpoint of Goch.

Lt. Gen. Patton's 3d army in the last 24 hours also captured 1,400 prisoners as it gained four miles and engulfed 23 more towns in a drive which was about to wipe out a 32 mile stretch of the west wall in Germany's Eifel mountains.

Escape Roads Severed.

All escape by highway out of the two by three mile salient—all that is left of once powerful west wall positions east of Luxemburg—was cut off by the capture of Neuerburg in a surprise assault.

Already 1,000 prisoners had been flushed from the salient and a front dispatch said undetermined numbers of other Germans were milling around, groping for a way out. Enemy tanks were destroyed at the rate of five a day for the last five days in the salient struggle.

On the south end of the 50 mile front, the 94th infantry captured Ockfen, on the east bank of the Saar river nine miles south of the fortress of Trier. Serrig, in a second bridgehead four miles south, also was cleared. The latter bridgehead now was a mile and a half deep and two miles wide.

104TH, 8TH FIRST ACROSS

BY JOHN THOMPSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUEREN, Germany, Feb. 24.—The 104th division, commanded by Maj. Gen. Terry Allen, and the 8th division of Maj. Gen. William G. Weaver were the first army divisions across the Roer river yesterday, it was announced tonight.

Allen's new division—he led the famous 1st division in North Africa and Sicily—won its spurs spearheading the Canadian assault in Holland last fall, where it crossed another river. It then joined Lt. Gen. Hodges' 1st army and took part in the fighting around Lammersdorf in the advance on the Roer.

8th Fought at Brest.

Landing in Normandy last July 4, the 8th division helped to capture Brest and then mopped up the Crozon peninsula. It fought on the Luxemburg frontier, and in November made notable gains in the Hurtgen forest fighting. Weaver took command after distinguishing himself with a task force of the 90th division near Le Mans.

With his Timberwolf division, Allen follows the same practice he started with the 1st division in Africa, a practice which develops tremendous esprit de corps and combat discipline. Every replacement, no matter what his previous training, goes into an intensive course in the division's own battle school.

Drilled in Night Fighting.

There, experienced noncoms, usually with long rows of ribbons, show the recruits all the tricks of warfare, tricks which save men's lives in combat, which give them the wisdom necessary to defeat a canny enemy. The new soldiers are given rigorous drill in night patrols and night fighting, for Allen always prefers to attack at night if possible.

Night fighting is probably the roughest kind of maneuver on the individual soldier, coupled as it is with all the uncertainty of darkness. But Allen has found that you gain more ground at night, in faster time and with fewer casualties, than by day, and he still believes the German soldier does not like to be attacked after dark.

Engineers Keep Roer Bridges Up Despite Heavy Losses

BY WES GALLAGHER.

JUELICH, Germany, Feb. 24 (AP).—For the second day, grim, mud-soaked engineers disregarded comrades wounded around them and kept traffic flowing over the Roer river today.

One bridge was put in eight times before it finally stayed, and each time the cost was met in blood and courage by the engineers.

This time their casualties were the heaviest since D-day and higher in proportion than the attacking infantry.

"This is the hardest crossing we have had," said Maj. Hartzell Michael, engineer officer from Greensburg, Pa. A corps engineer said his men had twice the casualties for any one operation since the time they landed in France.

Officer Hit Four Times.

One young engineer officer was hit four times by shell fragments in five hours before he could be forced off the job into an ambulance. Because of such valor jeeps, trucks, and every type of army equipment were streaming across the Roer tonight.

One group of soldiers sitting on the steps of a ruined house were especially glad to see the bridges completed and the trucks and jeeps coming across, because they were munitions carriers.

"We had to carry all ammunition yesterday and last night across there by hand," said Pvt. James McKenna of New York City. In his detail were Pvt. Leonard Madsen, Sioux City, Ia., and Pvt. Fines Mathews, Whitehall, Ill.

Generate Smoke, Too.

The entire river crossing operation, because of peculiar conditions, threw the brunt of making the drive a success on the engineers and army forces seldom heard of in the news of ordinary battle.

One was a Negro smoke generating unit under Negro Capt. Augustus Shaw, of Pasadena, Cal. "We made so much smoke they made us turn it off," he grinned.

The river crossing put a heavy strain on telephone and radio communications, as it was impossible to get artillery over early in the fight and infantry had to be supported by guns on the west bank.

"It was rough going but we came out pretty well," said Lt. Donald Burbas, International Falls, Minn., communications officer, pointing out that mortars shot out the lines almost as fast as linemen could put them up.

BOMBERS SHIFT FURY TO U-BOAT PENS, OIL WORKS

LONDON, Feb. 24 (AP).—Great fleets of allied planes kept the war's most devastating air offensive roaring thru the 12th straight day today with heavy blows on German submarine yards and oil refineries.

Nazi warnings late tonight indicated Mosquito bombers were attacking Berlin again.

Allied tactical air forces on the continent flew 3,315 sorties during the day in close support of ground operations and reported destroyed or damaged 169 locomotives, 1,259 freight cars, and more than 1,000 motor vehicles.

Ninth air force Marauders bombed Clatten and Zultich, 26 and 22 miles southwest of Cologne, and Rheindahlen, 18 miles west of Dusseldorf.

The 9th air force listed losses of seven medium or light bombers and three fighter bombers.

TRUCK LOADED WITH MEAT STOLEN.

BY JOHN THOMPSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUEREN, Germany, Feb. 24. — German artillery shells and mortars pounded this industrial city today as Lt. Gen. Hodges' 1st army doughboys cleared the northern half and seized a ridge line on the eastern edge.

In Dueren, the fighting has varied widely in every section, altho everywhere the Americans found most volksgrenadiers [home guards] battling with their rifles, machine pistols, and machine guns as stubbornly as they fought thru Aachen, altho not in as great strength.

On the southern side, for instance, the Germans, instead of fighting house to house, made strong points in the barracks buildings or around one or two houses which could hold up the doughboys unless they were supported by self-propelled guns.

Fight Thru Factory.

But north, across the railroad tracks and freight yards which divide the city, the Germans had battled house to house, and often room to room. Lt. Col. William M. Summers of Tulsa, Okla., 3d battalion commander, reported that Capt. Hayden Bower of Hollywood, Cal., and his K company fought thru six floors of a large paper factory, and on the roof captured four artillery observers, snug inside a concrete pillbox.

It was Bower's company which swept thru the north side of town, then captured an asylum for the insane known as the "provincial health and welfare institute" atop a small hill. The division commander had ordered its capture by 1500 [3 p. m.]. From the asylum, the Yanks reported its capture by radio at 1457 [2:57 p. m.].

Like every other building in Dueren, the asylum's upper floors consisted only of brick sieves, altho a labyrinth of cellar rooms was filled with comfortable divans and other evidence the Germans had used the building as headquarters.

Battle Room by Room.

Summers' I company, coming up on the right, had a tough fight in a block of apartments across from the city electrical plant. The Yanks had cleaned out the apartments and gone into the plant, but the Germans returned to the apartment building.

For hours the Americans fought them at close quarters, room by room, mostly with grenades and tommy guns.

While Summers' men worked over Dueren, the 1st battalion of Lt. Col. Charles Fernald of Los Angeles, Cal., captured the northern suburb of Birksdorf. It was difficult, he said, for his men to locate the German burp guns [machine pistols], which fire smokeless powder, and for several hours one group was held up by these guns hidden in an earth covered dugout.

Seize Houses in Record Time.

Company B captured six blocks of houses in record time and company A captured 69 prisoners in a factory. This bag included six officers of a battalion staff.

It was C company which had probably the worst time of any. Several of its boats overturned in the river, but the lieutenant and a good portion of his men, including 21 riflemen and 23 machine gunners, swam ashore in Birksdorf. Despite the ducking, every one held onto his weapons.

These fighting 45 went blasting house by house toward their objective, a factory, the machine gunners firing from the hip as they burst open doors while the riflemen covered them and kept off burp gun snipers. From 0400 [4 a. m.] until 1700 [5 p. m.] the fighting 45 fought alone, and then the rest of the company crossed over another bridge.

$250 APPAREL STOLEN FROM TRUCK.

Apparel valued at $250 was stolen from a Michigan Cleaners delivery truck parked in front of 6545 Union av., the driver, Frank Vauer, reported to police yesterday. The company is at 1339 W. 63d st.

Chicago Yank Clears Path for Capture of Juelich Fort

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE U. S 9TH ARMY, Feb. 24.—A Chicago Yank opened the road to Juelich's citadel today.

With bullets rattling off his armored tank 'dozer, Marshall Gardner, 5622 Princeton av., calmly hacked a path thru the debris littered street for the 29th division assault teams that stormed and captured the moated fortress this afternoon.

Flame throwers then moved to within 80 yards of the main gate and let loose giant sprays of liquid fire that engulfed the fortress' walls and set trees and shrubbery afire.

Then with guns the Americans blasted the gates, 15 rounds demolishing the heavy doors and steel grilled portal. Snipers inside peppering the assault force with automatic rifles.

Attack Over Exposed Ground.

Another assault team went forward over 300 yards of exposed terrain to break into the fortress. Bruno Muzzarelli, Arlington, Ill., was one of the ammunition carriers in this attack.

The group took cover in shell holes, behind scattered trees, and beside rubble to squirm forward. Then, with fixed bayonets, the team made a dash over the causeway across the moat surrounding the ancient fortress, thru the blasted gate, and along a 50 foot, curving tunnel beneath the ramparts to the courtyard, chasing a handful of snipers before them.

I watched the operation from a grandstand seat in the upper story of a roofless house 60 yards away.

Chicagoan Carries Fire Bombs.

The tunnel entrance was too narrow for the tanks, but the assault team rushed thru, carrying demolition charges and granades. Louis Paparone, another Chicagoan, carried fire bombs.

Inside, the charging troopers chased the snipers thru the barracks and into the cellars, where the Germans escaped via a portcullis across the rear moat into the fields.

With the capture of the citadel the enemy lost his last direct observation in Juelich as the snipers had a portable radio set for directing artillery fire on the Yank bridgehead over the Roer river.

The fortress dates to the 15th century and despite a battering by American artillery and aerial bombs resembles a Maxfield Parrish painting with its high ramparts faced with solid masonry walls and its moat, 60 feet wide and 10 feet deep with green scum-covered water, with a causeway to the main gate.

The walls are pierced with embrasures for cannon fire and their crests studded with ancient, gabled stone strongpoints.

Inside the ancient schloss, rebuilt a century ago as a three story barracks, there is a giant granite plaque commemorating the heroes of World War I. in the courtyard.

MIDWEST YANKS OPEN WAY FOR ROER CROSSING

WITH THE U. S. 9TH ARMY ON THE ROER, Feb. 23 [Delayed].—(AP)—This is the story of a group of doughboys who rowed two wooden boats across the Roer river 30 minutes before H-hour and secured a battalion front for assault waves of a division in the center of the 9th army attack. Not one American boy was killed.

The raiders, under Lt. Roy L. [Buck] Rogers, of Allentown, Pa., cleared 500 yards of shore on a 200 yard deep perimeter, knocked out five machine gun nests, six automatic weapon positions, killed 15 Germans and captured eight. Among them was Pvt. 1st Class James Bailey, Warrenville, Ill.

While the raiders were in operation on the east bank another group remained on the west to cover them with rifle fire. This group included: Don Fransen, Superior, Wis., Edward Diamond, 6906 Clyde av., Chicago, and Sgt. Chris Lorenz, 5753 Patterson av., Chicago.

TRIBUNE PRINTS SIX EDITIONS FOR FIGHTING FRONTS

Overseas Tabloids Serve News Hungry Yanks.

Six separate editions of the Chicago Overseas Tribune, a tabloid newspaper containing up to the minute news and Tribune comics and features in special condensed form, are being printed or distributed on as many battle fronts.

The most recent is the Manila edition, for circulation among American fighting men in the Philippines. The others include the Honolulu-Mid-Pacific edition, printed in Hawaii; the Sydney-Southwest Pacific edition, printed in Sydney; the China-Burma-India edition, which is being started at New Delhi; the European edition, printed in New York and flown overseas, and the Canal Zone edition, printed in Panama.

Captured Jap Paper Used.

To provide these weekly tabloid papers for fighting men, THE TRIBUNE has shipped newsprint from its own quota to Australia, Hawaii, and India. For the printing of the Philippine edition, paper captured from the Japanese in Leyte and Luzon has been used.

Last Christmas eve on Leyte Island a near miracle of journalism was performed in a primitive tin walled Filipino printing plant.

Arthur Veysey, a Tribune war correspondent who is back home for a month's rest after more than a year of front line news gathering in the Pacific theater of war, was the man mainly responsible. With the assistance of two soldiers from Chicago and two Filipino boys, he produced the first American newspaper on the reconquered soil of the Philippines.

With a broken down foot treadle press he ran off the first number of the Philippine edition of the Chicago Overseas Tribune.

Troops Eager for News.

"People here at home," said Veysey yesterday, "cannot begin to comprehend how eager the soldiers on far off fronts are for news from the United States. Newspapers and magazines from this country are at least two or three months old when they reach distant war fronts such as the Philippines. It is not uncommon to find men reading publications that are more than a year old."

The Philippine edition of the Overseas Tribune now is printed in Manila. It moved into Luzon on the heels of MacArthur's invading army, was produced first in Luzon at an unnamed place, and printed first in Manila in a recaptured brewery, under shell fire of the Japanese.

After a hiatus of several weeks, the shipment of the European edition of the Overseas Tribune has been resumed. The first printing of this edition was in March, 1944. The Honolulu-Mid-Pacific edition began printing in December, 1943; the Canal Zone edition fifirst was produced in June, 1944; the Sydney-Southwest Pacific edition began printing in December, 1944. The Philippine edition, as previously mentioned, appeared first las December.

Some Printed in Chicago.

A limited number of the Overseas Tribunes are printed at THE TRIBUNE'S home office in Chicago for the records and for sample mailing. The present circulation of the Overseas Tribune, counting all editions, is nearing 50,000. Efforts are in progress now to obtain permission to print from plastic plates flown overseas each week in Italy, France, England, and other war fronts.

Tells of Underground

(Story in adjoining column.)

Flight Officer David G. Prosser, who today begins in The Tribune his dramatic and complete story of the underground in France, as he appeared in July, 1943, before his plane was shot down over France.

In all instances planes are used for the transportation of the plastic plates or matrices, so that the news in the Overseas Tribunes shall get to the printing and distributing points while it still is fresh.

The first copy of the tabloid printed in Luzon was presented to Gen. MacArthur, who autographed it and sent it with a message to Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE.

Autographed by MacArthur.

"To Col. McCormick," MacArthur wrote, "The first American paper after the Luzon landing."

Hundreds of American soldiers throut northwestern Luzon soon were reading home news, said a dispatch from Walter Simmons, one of the Tribune correspondents on the Philippine front.

Simmons was present, with Donald Starr, another Tribune correspondent, when the first printing of Overseas Tribunes was accomplished in Manila on Feb. 11.

Harold Smith, still another Tribune correspondent, writing from Pearl Harbor 10 months ago, described the warm reception accorded the first Overseas Tribunes among fighting men in scattered pinpoints in the Pacific, such as Kwajalein and Eniwetok in the Marshall Islands, Munda, Guadalcanal, Vella Lavella, and Bougainville. Smith had just returned then from a tour of these and other islands, where he found the soldiers, particularly those from mid-western states, enthusiastic about the Overseas Tribune.

Available for Other Troops.

THE TRIBUNE is offering its overseas tabloid to American troops in all areas. It will supply matrices, plastic plates, or zinc plates, or negatives for offset printing, shipping whatever thus is needed to the point of printing, wherever it may be. Parents of fighting men overseas should tell their sons when they write to them that this service is available if the commanding officer in the area asks for it.

Reds Wonder If U.S. Drive Is One Promised at Yalta

MOSCOW, Feb. 24 (AP).—The Russians focused attention today on the American push from the Roer toward the Rhineland, speculating whether this was the promised offensive from the west agreed upon at the Crimea conference. Early accounts, prominently displayed by the Russian press and radio, gave the impression it was a strong assault, but generally the people were withholding an opinion of the American attack to see whether it was comparable in strength with the Red army's eastern onslaught.

AIRMAN REVEALS UNDERGROUND'S THRILLING STORY

THE TRIBUNE today begins publication of a dramatic and complete story of the underground in France—a story that until now has been a strictly guarded military secret. The first instalment appears in the Graphic section.

It is the story of a Chicago boy, navigator of a Flying Fortress, who was shot down over France, and then lived for nearly three months with the patriots of the French underground.

The soldier-author is David Gann Prosser, 23 years old.

He entered the American army air force by way of the Canadian air force, in which he enlisted in 1941. On Sept. 25, 1942, he received his wings as an air navigator at St. Johns, Quebec, and was sent overseas almost immediately

Transfers to U. S. Forces.

At the end of his training period, Prosser learned he could transfer to the American air forces with the rank of flight officer, and immediately did so. He was assigned to the 8th air force.

Prosser's parents received word late last September that his plane had been shot down over France Sept. 3.

In November word came from the war department that he was interned in a neutral country. Just before Thanksgiving his parents received a letter from him, saying he had been in prison, but had been released thru the efforts of the American consul.

The next word came just before Christmas, when he cabled saying he was safely back in London. He is still on active duty in southern England, but under the terms of his release from internment, he may not be used in combat operations in the same theater of war.

Born in Lake Forest.

David Prosser was born in Lake Forest July 14, 1921, the son of Stuart A. Prosser and Mrs. Eleanor Susan Gann Prosser. His father served in World War I. and enlisted again in the air forces in 1942. He was retired to inactive status last August. Maj. Prosser is now associated with Fahnestock & Co., stock brokers, at 135 S. La Salle st.

David spent his childhood in Lake Forest, attending the Bell and Country Day schools here. He was graduated from the Pawling school, Pawling, N. Y., in June, 1939.

In September, when England and France declared war, he was studying in Spain. He returned to Chicago and attempted to enlist in the army air forces, but could not meet the requirement of two years of college for flying cadets. In 1941 he hitchhiked to Ottawa and enlisted in the royal Canadian air force.

FRANCE SENDING AID HERE TO SIGN FOR LEND-LEASE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 24.—Jean Monnet, head of the French economic mission, will leave Paris tomorrow to return to Washington to sign the Franco-American lend-lease agreement.

He said the United States had displayed the utmost good will in aiding France to get on its feet. All the difficulties, he said, were in trying to find shipping space.

Despite the transportation problem, he estimated that cargoes to France during the first three months this year will total 250,000 tons from America and Canada, approximately 100,000 tons from England, and the same amount from North Africa and the French colonies.

WAC DESERTER GIVEN 3 YEARS AT HARD LABOR

Selfridge Field, Mich., Feb. 24 [Special].—Pvt. Irene Way of the women's army corps, whose army misadventures resulted in a ruling last week by an Elmira, N. Y., federal court that a member of the WAC is just as much a soldier as any G. I. Joe, was found guilty of desertion by an army general court here today. She was sentenced to confinement at hard labor for three years, forfeiture of pay, and dishonorable discharge. Four of the eight court members were WAC officers.

Pvt. Way was arrested after being absent without leave since April last year. Jake Williams, with whom she was living in Buffalo, was brought to trial before Judge Harold P. Burke in Elmira on a charge of harboring an army deserter. Williams contended a WAC, being ineligible for combat service, is not a soldier. "Wrong," said the judge.

HITLER CALLS FOR FIGHT TO THE LAST CHILD

Threatens All Shirkers with Death.

LONDON, Feb. 24 (AP).—Adolf Hitler told the old guard of the Nazi party today that Germany had taken such a terrible beating that now "there is no greater terror in store for us." He called upon every man, woman, and child in Germany to fight until the last breath, threatening shirkers with death.

His speech, issued on the 25th anniversary of the announcement of the National Socialist program, was read for him by an aid and transmitted to the press by the German DNB news agency. It contained hints of fear of an uprising inside Germany.

Any one who showed himself a coward, refused to join the volkssturm [home guard], or attempted to sabotage the fanatical defense of the country would be annihilated, Hitler warned. Threats against slackers and unbelievers in the Nazi regime were sprinkled thruout the speech.

Predicting that a turning point in the war would come this year, Hitler likened Nazi Germany's role to that of the central European nations who centuries ago held off the invasions of Huns and Turks.

Betrays Fear of Reds.

Germany's preoccupation with fear of the Russian invasion was shown in his emphasis on the "Jewish-Bolshevist plague" and his references to the western allies only as the aids of the Russians.

Assuming a martyr's role, Hitler declared he would be "happy to bear everything others have to bear to the last, as far as this is possible for a human being."

He even expressed regret that his mountain retreat at Berchtesgaden had not been destroyed in a recent allied air raid, for "whatever I can call my own is no more valuable than what belongs to my people."

Only toward the end of his long harangue did Hitler show anything but pessimism. Then he said, "Twenty-five years ago I predicted the victory of our movement. Today, filled as always with belief in our nation, I predict final victory for the German race.

"This Jewish-Bolshevist annihilation of nations and its western European and American procurers can be met with in one way," Hitler added, "by using every ounce of strength with extreme fanaticism and stubborn steadfastness which a merciful God gives to men in hard times for the defense of their life."

Propagandist Reads Speech.

The speech was read at the party gathering in Munich by Hermann Esser, secretary of state in the propaganda ministry, and was prefaced with the explanation that "consciousness of my duty and work do not allow me to leave my headquarters."

Hitler said the one thing he "could not bear" would be "a sign of weakness among my people."

"The life which is left to us should serve only one task," he cried, "namely, to make up for all the wrongs done by international Jewish criminals and their henchmen to our nation. It must be our unshakable will to think of Germany alone until our last breath. Man after man, woman after woman, in towns and in country, we shall live only for the task of liberating our nation from this distress, to reconstruct Germany's culture."

Partial Text of Speech.

A partial text of Hitler's speech follows:

"The unnatural alliance between exploiting capitalism and destructive bolshevism which today threatens to strangle the entire world has been the enemy to whom we threw the gantlet on Feb. 24, 1920, in order to safeguard the existence of our nation. The same as in these years, the apparently contradictory factor in the coöperation of such extreme forces was only the expression of a unique desire of a common instigator and profiteer. International Jewry has long used both forms for the annihilation of liberty and the social welfare of nations.

"However, there is an enormous difference between the Germany of 1920 and the Germany of 1945. The Germany of 1920 had been completely paralyzed; the Germany of today is defending herself with the utmost fanaticism. The social order of 1920 had been antiquated and was bound to collapse. Today there exists an unshakable community of the people.

Credits All to Nazis.

"If the former Germany had possessed only a small fraction of the power of resistance inspiring the Germany of today she would not have capitulated. If the German people today possessed only a part of the former weakness it would have ceased to exist long ago. Feb. 24, 1920, will later be regarded as a great milestone in the history of mankind. Without German National Socialist reconstruction there would be neither a German reich nor a German people today.

"Several areas in the eastern part of the German reich now experience bolshevism. The crimes committed against our women and children and men by this Jewish plague are the most terrible fate ever conceived by human beings.

Weak to Be Crushed, He Says.

"This Jewish bolshevist annihilation of nations and its western European and American procurers can only be met with in one way: by using every ounce of strength with the extreme fanaticism and stuborn steadfastness which merciful God gives to men in hard times for the defense of their own lives.

"All those who weaken will be crushed and left to decay. In the same manner as once the coward bourgeois compromise parties had been first driven into a corner by the bolshevist wave and then been swept away, all those bourgeois states will disappear today whose stupid representatives think they can conclude a treaty with the devil, cherishing the hope that they will be more cunning than he is satanical."

WITH THE 94TH INFANTRY DIVISION, Germany, Feb. 24.—Second Lt. Howard V. Johnson of Athens, Ill., left the United States Jan. 23, joined the 94th infantry division as a replacement last Saturday, and led his men into action Monday morning.

Early reports were that he had charged a couple of machine gun nests with a tommy gun. We found him today, waiting his turn to cross the Saar river, and asked him about it.

"Somebody glorified it," he said. "We were attacking at 4 a. m. I had a support platoon, which made me happy, since if things went right I wouldn't have to go. But after 30 minutes or so the other two platoons couldn't support each other because of artillery fire, so we went in.

"There was a lot of shellfire, and I was scared speechless at first, but after a while it was like a problem at the beginning. You forget they're firing real stuff."

IKE SAYS RHINE IS GOAL, PROGRESS SATISFACTORY

Allies Must Meet Reds in Reich, He Asserts.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SUPREME HDQ. ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris, Feb. 24. — The object of the American drive across the Roer river is the Rhine itself and destruction of every German west of it, Gen. Eisenhower said today.

The offensive is progressing very satisfactorily, he added. He does not anticipate unusually high losses.

Looking fit and still possessed of a football player's physique, Eisenhower was in good humor and answered questions frankly. His features frequently flashed into broad grins during this, his first interview since before the German break-thru.

Nazis May Fight to Last.

Eisenhower sees no immediate end to the war in Europe even if present operations carry to the Rhine.

"If the Germans continue to show the spirit they have up to now there is only one way they can be beaten—the allied armies must meet the Russian armies in the center of Germany," he said. Even then, he added, he would not be surprised if the Germans concentrated all their remaining forces in some mountain stronghold for a last ditch stand.

The Rhine, Eisenhower said, is far from an insuperable obstacle. The history of war shows that no long river line ever could be defended. He did not doubt the Germans would be able to withdraw considerable forces across it since they are masters at withdrawal and evacuation. The general no longer believes the decisive battle will be fought on the west side of the river.

Eisenhower declared that the more the enemy decides to stand and fight the more pleased he will be, as it will give him an opportunity to destroy the German army, the chief allied objective.

Ruhr Still of Use.

Even when we get to the west bank of the Rhine, Germany will not be deprived of the Ruhr production, he pointed out, altho it would bring this area nearer our guns and airplanes so that the output would be greatly reduced.

"There is going to be no cessation of aggressive action anywhere on the western front," he emphasized.

He expressed satisfaction at the way the allied and Russian attacks were coördinated. This has put a tremendous strain on the German war organization, he asserted.

He attributed the low casualties of 3d army troops in clearing out concrete pillboxes in the Siegfried line defenses to the extreme skill American soldiers now are showing in the use of their weapons and in tactics. In one case a unit cleaned out 40 pillboxes while suffering only 10 or 15 casualties.

9th Put Under Monty.

Eisenhower announced that the United States 9th army had been placed under British Gen. Montgomery's operational command.

"You should know," he explained, "how the high command looks upon these arrangements made from time to time for the control of armies, corps, and divisions in the field.

We are operating with allies and these troops of different nationalities generally are fixed in position and most assuredly an army is such a large formation that you don't hustle it around like you do a squad. When a plan is put into operation armies are given their general missions and their general areas in which to operate and they must be supplied and administered, and always commanded from an administrative standpoint by a commander of their own nationality.

"Therefore when we talk about one army passing to the command of this officer or that officer we mean that an army in carrying out its mission will be coördinated on those flanks where coördination is necessary by a particular officer. We call that the operational command."

Eisenhower assured a French correspondent he was doing everything possible to equip the French army and get it into the battle line.

"I want more French divisions in battle and the farther into Germany the better I'll be pleased," he said.

He expressed satisfaction with the arrangements the western allied powers have made with Russia in repatriating allied prisoners of war who are liberated by the Russian advance in the east.

AT A ROER RIVER REGIMENTAL COMMAND POST, Feb. 23 [Delayed] — (AP). — Genevich and Gumbach fell this morning to United States 9th army troops from veteran divisions who rolled across the Roer in assault boats, then fought their way thru pillboxes and fire trenches to the first German towns on the east slopes of the river barrier.

SCHOOL AID BILL ALREADY HAS 42 HOUSE SPONSORS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 24.—A proposed bill to appropriate an additional 10 million dollars a biennium for state aid to elementary and high schools already has 42 house sponsors, Irving F. Pearson of Rockford, executive secretary of the Illinois Education association, said in an interview today.

Whether the bill will be introduced in the legislature next week depends upon negotiations with Gov. Green and the state budgetary commission. For house passage, the appropriation needs 77 votes.

Statehouse sources said a final decision on the school distributive fund appropriation has not been reached.

Altho it was certain two weeks ago that it would receive at least an additional 6 millions, the education association still is fighting to get the entire 10 millions.

The association's action is backed by the state school board association and farm and labor groups.

FRENCH FARMERS MOB YANKS, TAKE THEM FOR NAZIS

A U. S. BOMBER BASE IN ENGLAND, Feb. 24 (AP).—When the crew of a crippled Flying Fortress bailed out over central France the other day they were mistaken for German paratroopers and were mobbed by a group of grim faced French farmers armed with pitchforks and sickles.

"The skipper talked so fast his English must have sounded like French," said Lt. Ralph Sleepers of Concord, N. H., the bombardier.

Other crew members included Lt. Joseph Biskofsky of Kenosha, Wis.; Sgt. Walter Szymcza of 8431 Marquette av., Chicago, and Robert G. Nicol of 7025 S. Loomis blvd., Chicago.

AND OUT CAME THE NAZIS JUST AS IN MOVIES

BY ROBERT CROMIE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE U. S. 3D ARMY, Feb. 24.—Infantrymen of the 290th division took 25 German prisoners "Hollywood style" a few days ago in Germany.

When their company of the 359th regiment was pinned down by fire from a Nazi strongpoint, Sgt. James I. Hoppes of East St. Louis, Ill., picked up a light machine gun, held it against his hip, and walked toward the house, spraying lead in approved gangster fashion. Pvt. John F. Keefe of Tampa, Fla., walked beside him, feeding the ammunition belt.

When they reached the house the ammunition was gone, but they kicked in the door, and Sgt. Hoppes, with drawn pistol, ordered the Germans out of the cellar. They found two killed and two wounded, and took a total of 25 prisoners, including two officers.

Capt. Elmore Cabrick of Rockford, Ill., a member of the 11th [Thunderbolt] armored division, commanding Company B of the 21st armored infantry battalion, was ordered recently to report to the command post, 1,000 yards away, across open terrain covered by enemy fire.

Since no vehicle was available, Capt. Cabrick hopped on a captured German bike and scorched down the hill at top speed, escaping small arms fire aimed directly at him.

Corp. Arthur Carlson, 234 N. Lockwood av., Chicago, is now a round peg in a round hole. A former infantryman with the 5th [Red Diamond] division, he was reverted to his former trade and now is divisional typewriter repairman, working not only on familiar American makes but also on assorted German machines.

Corp. Carlson predicted that new type keyboards will enable post-war typists to his undreamed-of speeds.

Men of the recovery section of Company A of the 131st ordnance maintenance battalion of the 9th armored division, who recovered disabled vehicles under fire and worked long hours during the Ardennes battle to keep 'em rolling, have been commended for their excellent job.

GREW PROMISES AMENDS IF SWISS TOWNS WERE HIT

Washington, D. C., Feb. 24 (AP).—Acting Secretary of State Grew said today that an army investigation is under way into a Swiss complaint that United States planes attacked Swiss towns Thursday.

Grew said that if American planes were responsible reparation will be made "insofar as that is humanly possible."

He disclosed that the Swiss minister had declared United States aircraft had bombed and strafed causing deaths of 16 and injury to many more.

SOVIET TROOPS 3 MILES FROM BRESLAU'S HEART

Report Reds Span Neisse, Threaten Cottbus.

LONDON, Feb. 25 [Sunday]—(AP).—Russian shock troops, driving to within three miles of the heart of burning Breslau, yesterday hurled the enemy out of 15 more blocks in the Silesian capital, while other soviet forces pushed to within 33 miles south of Danzig.

A front dispatch said that Red army troops also had smashed in growing strength across the Neisse river and were threatening Cottbus, big rail center 47 miles from Berlin, but Moscow officially has not confirmed this development which threatens to turn Berlin's eastern defenses along the stalemated Oder river sector.

Dispatches from the soviet capital said Marshal Konev's 1st Ukraine army troops were across the Neisse river between besieged Guben and Forst, 51 and 57 miles from Berlin.

Seize Breslau Suburb.

The battle in Breslau's streets was the main event mentioned by Moscow, and in their smash into the southern part of the bombarded city the Russians captured the suburb of Oltaschin, three and a half miles from the heart of Breslau.

In one of the briefest bulletins issued since the Russians opened their winter offensive Jan. 12, Moscow announced slight gains in German Pomerania near the Polish frontier and the capture of nine more localities in the shrinking Nazi pocket southwest of Koenigsberg, besieged East Prussian capital.

The assault on Breslau, Germany's eighth largest city of 630,000 population, mounted in intensity and an enemy broadcast said that in a wild melee in the streets one soviet force had penetrated to the neighborhood of the German barracks deep inside the city before being thrown back to "the outer town

100,000 Nazis Fight.

A Nazi garrison believed to number 100,000 men fought savagely to hold Breslau and delay the Russian advances on Berlin and Dresden.

Marshal Rokossovsky's 2d White Russian army, attacking on a 70 mile front, gained up to seven miles from its previous positions, capturing 10 localities in the Polish corridor and in Pomerania on the west.

At the by-passed and encircled Vistula river town of Grudziadz the Russians were reported by Berlin to have forced the remnants of the German garrison into the "southern fringe" of the town.

To the west other soviet forces seized a number of localities between the severed Berlin-Danzig railway and highway southwest of Russian held Chojnice.

Gain in East Prussia.

In East Prussia the Russians gained up to two miles on a 27 mile front against bitter German resistance. Among the places seized was Ecker, 16 miles southwest of Koenigsberg. At this point the Russians were only seven miles south of Brandenburg, on the Frisches Haff, Baltic coastal lagoon.

The only other activity reported by Moscow was in Hungarian annexed Slovakia along the north bank of the Danube east of Komarom [Komarno], 84 miles from Vienna. In that area the Russians again repulsed strong German tank and infantry attacks, the bulletin said.

MASS OUTPUT OF JET ENGINES IS STARTED BY GENERAL ELECTRIC

Schenectady, N. Y., Feb. 24 (AP).—The beginning of mass production of jet engines for the air forces at the General Electric company's second largest war time plant was announced today.

The entire Syracuse plant of more than 600,000 square feet of floor space has been converted to jet production. The company said the production schedule called for such speed that there was no ceremony when the first unit passed its final tests and was turned over to the air forces. Up to several months ago the plant had produced turbine-electric power units for destroyer escorts.

General Electric said another jet contract was made by the air forces with the Allison division of General Motors corporation, which also will produce the engines on a volume scale. The engines are designed to drive planes at "lightninglike" speed at altitudes of more than 6 miles.

PETAIN LETTER TELLS OF PLAN TO FIGHT REDS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 24. — A letter from Marshal Henri Petain, former chief of the Vichy government, was received in Paris today, the first direct word from him since he was taken to Germany. Saying he had nothing but praise for the way the Germans were treating him, Petain, who wrote about Jan. 1, added:

"Together with French workers now in Germany we are going to form a French legion which will go to fight on the eastern front. The only thing is that financial difficulties have delayed creation of the legion up to now. I hope these will be overcome, thanks to German support and the savings of the workers."

Letters also were received from former Premiers Edouard Daladier and Paul Reynaud.

[An Associated Press dispatch from Paris said a letter had disclosed that Petain was at Sigmaringen, Germany. The city is about 25 miles north of Lake Constance.]

NEW TYPE JAP PLANE DOWNED IN 50 MI. CHASE

Washington, D. C., Feb. 24 (AP).—The navy reported today that a new type of Japanese fighter plane had been encountered off Formosa and shot down.

The fighter, known as the George, was described as "a streamlined, midwing single seat plane with greater speed than other Jap aircraft of this type." It was believed to be a navy plane.

Comdr. Frederick E. Bakutis, Brockton, Mass., sighted the craft north of the Pescadores Islands, west of Formosa, and chased it for more than 50 miles at low altitude in his Gruman Hellcat fighter. He fired his .50 caliber guns from long range and the plane crashed.

ALLIES KEEP UP PRESSURE TO TIE UP FOE IN ITALY

ROME, Feb. 24 (AP).—Allied activity intended to tie down a maximum number of German divisions spread along the 5th army front in Italy today, accompanied by a continued aerial offensive from Italian bases against the enemy's southern European communications.

United States infantrymen and Brazilian troops consolidated their newly won heights around Monte Belvedere, 30 miles southwest of Bologna. American raiding parties punched into German fortified holdings south of Bologna. Father to the right, artillery fire blasted the enemy from some positions.

Key points in the network of railroads in northern Italy essential for an enemy withdrawal behind the Alps were left smoldering by more than 60 hours of day and night bombing by American and British warplanes.

BAR NAZI WAR CRIMINALS, U. S. ASKS AMERICAS

Joint Policing of Western Hemisphere Urged.

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 24. — The United States introduced a resolution at the Inter-American conference here today to bar Nazi agents and war criminals from the western hemisphere before and after the end of hostilities. The resolution also proposed joint policing of the two American continents against Nazi economic and other non-military aggression before and after the war's end.

The United States delegation had in mind German acquisition of South American air lines and other utilities following World War I.

The mechanics of hemisphere policing is to be discussed at next week's sessions. However, authoritative sources said the correlation of "force if necessary" with the powers of the proposed new league of nations would await the April meeting of allied nations at San Francisco.

Plan Economic Aid.

Having in mind 18 revolutions in 20 countries during two years of pre-war depression, the United States next week will propose economic measures to alleviate the danger of outbreaks during the stress of reconversion. Latin delegates fear internal repercussions when the United States halts war time purchases which have boosted the total of Latin American annual exports to one and one-third billion dollars as compared with 480 million dollars in 1939.

To calm these fears, the United States is proposing a gradual cutback of war contracts and expanded credits thru the export import bank to aid Latin American reconversion. These proposals are restrained by popular resentment in the United States against taxpayers assuming the world's economic burden.

Argentine Issue Clarified.

Also clarified today was the United States' attitude toward the question of admitting Argentina to the Inter-American conference, a question that was postponed by the conference this week. The United States wants a guarantee that Argentina will abandon its aid to the Nazis and will not be satisfied with a mere facade of collaboration with the allies. Authoritative sources said the Latin delegates are backing this attitude.

Uruguay Joins Allies.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 24 (AP).—Uruguay today joined the allied nations, having declared war against Germany and Japan last Thursday. The Uruguayan ambassador, Juan Carlos Blanco, signed for his country. The list of signatures now includes all American nations except Argentina.

TAVERN LOOTED OF CASH AND WHISKY.

DRIVE TO 'SELL' WORLD LEAGUE PLAN IS OPENED

Stettinius Speaks from Mexico.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 24 (AP).—Secretary of State Stettinius, speaking from Mexico City, tonight launched a campaign to build up interest and understanding among the American people in the Dumbarton Oaks plan for a world organization.

In a radio speech which is the opening shot, he hinted that several decisions on unanswered questions of the peace organization, rather than one decision, were reached in the Crimea conference. It has been announced only that President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill, and Premier Stalin agreed on voting procedure for the proposed security council.

Stettinius noted that as originally drawn up in Washington the Dumbarton Oaks proposals were incomplete.

Proposals Supplemented.

"They had to be supplemented in several important respects," he said. "This was one of the great accomplishments of the Crimea conference." He did not elaborate.

Stettinius spoke over the National Broadcasting company network in the first of a series of seven broadcasts which he said are designated "to put before the people of the United States the facts about the proposed world organization." Others on tonight's program, speaking from Washington, were Assistant Secretaries Dean Acheson and Archibald MacLeish.

Hails Polish Decision.

Acheson said that the Dumbarton Oaks amplifications worked out in the Crimea were the most important decisions reached there but that "for the immediate future, the decision on the Polish question was a great achievement."

MacLeish declared it was "more or less an accident of history" that the Curzon line agreed on in the Crimea "was not the boundary of Poland after World War I."

Such a boundary, he declared, was favored by allied representatives at the Versailles conference in 1919 because "they found that to the east of this line the population was predominantly Russian and Ukrainian, while to the west of it the population was predominantly Polish."

Acheson declared that the same division of peoples is generally true today.

LOOTERS TAKE GUNS AND SHELLS.

Theft of a shotgun and five boxes of shells, a rifle, a pistol, and six boxes of cartridges from his home was reported to police by Orville Winslow, 1408 Union av., yesterday. He said the thieves also took two watches, two rings, two radios, two clocks, and eight $25 war bonds.

RED CROSS DRIVE FOR $11,300,000 OPENS THURSDAY

The 1945 Red Cross War fund drive will be opened in the Chicago area on Thursday when 70,000 volunteers start work to meet the Chicago chapter's quota of $11,300,000. The area includes all of Cook and Du Page counties and the southern half of Lake county.

Martin H. Kennelly, general chairman of the campaign, yesterday said that plans have been made to reach Chicago's goal in "record time." He said division chairmen have been urging workers to "get an early start."

Labor and Industry United.

The general chairman said labor and industry are united to put the drive over early this year. The campaign has the backing of every section of organized labor, and farm leaders thruout the country have joined in announcing their support, Kennelly reported.

One of the slogans of this year's campaign is "Six Dollars a Second," which denotes the rate of Red Cross expenditures. Kennelly urged contributors to give generously to the fund, almost all of which is spent on services for American fighting men and their families. The remainder pays for disaster relief operations and home front programs.

War Department Audits Accounts.

He said the Red Cross is a people's organization. The war department audits the Red Cross accounts and a report, copies of which are available to the public, is submitted annually to congress.

Kennelly reported that the Red Cross has added, since 1941, the new services of arts and skills, blood donor services, dietitian aid corps, camp, hospital, and college units. He said volunteers donated during 1944 more than 5 million dollars worth of time, based on a 50 cent an hour estimate.

Ensign Hassell is the son of Lt. Col. and Mrs. B. R. J. Hassell of Rockford, Ill. Lt. Col. Hassell, a pioneer arctic flyer, is commander of the American Air Transport command base at Goose bay, Labrador. He was unable to attend the ceremony.

The wedding was followed by a reception in the Drake hotel.

EX-CHICAGO ACE BAGS 12 JAPS ON 150 AIR MISSIONS

Capt. Harold Segal.

Capt. Harold Segal, 24, a marine ace credited with downing 12 Japanese planes in the Southwest Pacific, stopped in Chicago yesterday en route from his home in New York to the west coast. The captain, who modestly admitted the marines are "doing an exceptionally good job in the Pacific," was accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Ruth Segal.

In more than a year in the Pacific, Capt. Segal flew 150 missions. In one engagement in which his plane was disabled he narrowly escaped death when four Zeros chased his burning Corsair down to the water, pumping bullets into its tail. He was not hit but his nose was broken when his ship hit the water. He was rescued the next day by a destroyer.

Capt. Segal's brother, Pvt. George, also a marine, is stationed at Camp Pendleton, Cal. The captain, son of Manny Segal, New York shirt manufacturer, was born in Chicago.

TELLS HOUR BY HOUR STORY OF MANILA BATTLE

Tribune Man Watches Intramuros Fight.

BY DONALD STARR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MANILA, Feb. 23 [Delayed].—Artillery shells poured into the ancient Intramuros for an hour this morning, every type of weapon available being turned loose in a hellish din. It ended with an advance by infantrymen which inspired the artillery observers to remark: "There go the best damn men on earth."

After the terrific noise and blinding flashes, the dust and smoke from our shells, the stillness of a cemetery at midnight enveloped us in our observation post in a 10 story building across the Pasig river.

The foot soldiers, slithering toward the ancient walls 200 yards away against unknown dangers, aroused the sympathy of observers sitting in their comparative safety. Hardly a man, watching the difference, didn't feel a tug at his chest for the daring of these men of the middle west making up this division.

Blow by Blow Story.

Imagine yourself on the 10th floor of Tribune Tower. Instead of the Chicago river immediately below, put the Pasig. The east wall of Intramuros extends along the river westward to the bay, a distance approximately that to Canal st., and runs almost to Jackson boulevard.

7:30 a. m.—Artillery begins the barrage, laying down more than 100 shells a minute. Small arms ranging from carbines to .50 caliber machine guns join in.

At 7:35, tanks and anti-tank guns pull up, commence firing at point-blank range of 200 yards, with square red flags flying; 7:47—four tanks go out—large buildings crumbling and impounding them.

Smoke Half Mile High.

At 7:50, a huge column of white smoke billows a half mile high. 7:55—Sniper fire sends us to the floor. sniper fire sends us to the floor.

8 a. m.—Self-propelled guns leave a blank in the wall; Sgt. William Muller of 7844 Throop st., Chicago, observer for the heavy guns, lowers his telescope, remarking, "I can't see anything until the clouds of dust and smoke lift. A plane is directing our fire on the specified area, tho. I'll see the results later,"

Boats Cross River.

8:15—Flying embers falling into the river and exploding force us to our knees; the tanks buck like mules kicking as they fire their 75s.

8:45—Engineers' assault boats start across the river. 8:50—The infantry calls for mortars to silence a Jap machine gun whose crew somehow managed to survive the blasting. 8:55—The first Americans cross the top of the wall into the area. 9 a. m.—The second wave of assault boats moves across the river, while the engineers begin mine clearing operations in the road leading into the Intramuros.

ENGLAND TO GET 30,000 HOUSES BY LEND-LEASE

Washington, D. C., Feb. 24 (AP).—The war production board today announced the allotment of materials for 30,000 pre-fabricated houses for England, to be built here for $50,000,000 and shipped under lend-lease.

The allotment was made to the foreign economic administration, which supported the British request for temporary emergency dwellings. English officials said they were unable themselves to replace bombed dwellings because of Britain's labor shortage.

"The material will come out of allocations that would otherwise have been made to our own civilian economy and will represent practically no impact upon the military effort," said Samuel W. Anderson, WPB's program vice chairman.

Contracts will be let by the federal public housing authority.

HOLD INITIATION DEATH ACCIDENT; URGE CAUTION

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 24 (AP).—A verdict of accidental death was returned yesterday by a coroner's jury in the death of Robert Perry, 20, St. Louis university medical student from Harrisburg, Ill., who was fatally burned during a fraternity mock initiation last Sunday.

The jury recommended that "all fraternal and other organizations refrain from using inflammable and volatile materials in initiation activities."

Perry, a navy V-12 trainee, was the last of 24 pledges in the mock initiation, testimony showed. His body had been smeared with a lampblack and collodion mixture which was ignited by a spark when an induction coil short circuited.

MAGILL URGES CLOSER STUDY OF GOVERNMENT

Auburn, Ill., Feb. 24 [Special].—Dr. Hugh S. Magill of Auburn, formerly of Chicago, who recently gave Illinois Wesleyan university of Bloomington $65,000 to establish a chair in the history and science of government, said today that a study of governments is essential if the "subtle and threatening dangers to the preservation of our American system of free representative government" are to be understood.

In a statement outlining his reasons for the gift, Dr. Magill, who had been executive secretary of the International Council of Religious Education in Chicago, said that he hoped the students taking the course "shall be impressed with their personal responsibility and duty to be active and vigilant" in upholding the American form of government.

Among the questions that the new course will endeavor to answer, Dr. Magill said, are the following:

What is the difference between a pure democracy and a republic? What is the distinction between government by law and government by men? Do regimentation and burocracy tend to destroy free government? Does the assumption of extensive powers by the chief executive, even with the consent of the people, tend to totalitarianism?

SKULL FRACTURE FATAL.

John Beder, 63, of 1354 Wabash av., a houseman at St. Luke's hospital for the last six years, who was found on the sidewalk in front of his home Feb. 17 with a fractured skull, died yesterday in the hospital.

STATE STREET EMERGENCY WAR BOND DRIVE
FEB. 19 to APRIL 28

Goldblatt Brothers Thank You for Your Wonderful Response This Past Week in Buying More War Bonds in Our State Street Store Than During Any Week of Previous War Bond Drives

Last week we were given the honor of being the store on State Street to launch the State Street Emergency War Bond Drive. Naturally we went all-out in our efforts. In fact, our efforts to break all our former records in selling War Bonds brought a response that far exceeded our expectations.

During the entire week, we sold War Bonds in our main floor block-long center aisle of booths, extending from Van Buren Street to Jackson Boulevard. We offered popular brand cigarettes free with every Bond purchase, starting with the smallest denomination.

You came to buy . . . Chicagoland . . . in hordes. You jammed our State Street Store, bought Bonds, in series E, F and G, from small to large denominations, the majority being in series E . . . and received, free 47,860 packages of cigarettes.

Thank you, Chicagoland . . . again and again

BARE CENSORED STATEMENT ON CONVOY LOSSES

British Told the Ships to Scatter, Says Yank.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 24 (AP).—The navy department today removed its censorship from a statement given the Associated Press by an officer that a Murmansk bound convoy was instructed by its escort to scatter because the German battleship Tirpitz and 23 other warships were approaching.

The British admiralty earlier today had described as "entirely without foundation" the statement this week of Merchant Marine Seaman Walter Sankiewicz, of Baltimore, recently repatriated from Germany, that British escort ships had once abandoned a Murmansk bound convoy to engage German warships with the result that 34 allied merchant vessels were sunk by torpedo planes and submarines.

Deleted Material Revealed.

When the admiralty's denial was published today, the navy department was asked to permit publication of a paragraph previously deleted by navy censors from a story obtained from Lt. [j. g.] Charles M. Ulrich, U. S. N. R., of Pitman, N. J. The navy thereupon said it had no objection to publication.

Interviewed at Norfolk in July, 1943, Ulrich said he had been in command of a navy gun crew aboard a merchant ship bound for Murmansk in convoy with 39 other ships a year before, that on the sixth day out of Iceland and for five days thereafter the convoy was attacked by Nazi torpedo planes and dive bombers, that several ships were sunk, and that:

"At the end of the fifth day our escort radioed us to scatter because the Tirpitz and 23 other warships were heading for our convoy."

[This was the paragraph which was deleted by navy censors when the story was permitted for review.]

After the convoy dispersed, Ulrich said, his ship "tried to sneak around Franz Josef Land and Novya Zembla but an ice floe blocked us and we sailed southwest of the floe.

Hear Ships' Messages.

"We heard radio messages from near-by ships that they were being sunk.

"A squadron of seven Junkers 88s with gold tipped wings found our ships and attacked.

"We put up a fire. They dropped bombs all around us, blew part of our stern off and opened our plates. We counted 21 bombs. The ship was set afire. We abandoned ship in two lifeboats."

Ten days later the boats reached Novya Zembla, 400 miles from the scene of the attack, Ulrich reported, addin gthere were 23 men in each boat and that two men froze to death.

New Guinea Bonnet

It may be a little exaggerated for an Easter bonnet, but it's what the well dressed New Guinea chiefs are wearing, according to Denise O'Toole, 8, of 8901 Leavitt st., who is modeling a native headdress from the South Pacific island. The little girl received the souvenir from Brig. Gen. A. N. Stark, who served overseas in the last war with her father.

CARRIERS RAID TOKYO; HALF IWO AIR FIELD IS WON

Yanks Gain 300 to 500 Yards on Island.

"Along the eastern beach navy and coast guard LSTS and LCIS and smaller craft were unloading as a steady stream of vehicles of all types rolled toward the front. Japanese guns from the northern plateau were trying to halt this movement of supplies and ammunition."

The southern airfield, captured by the marines, and the central field were littered with the wreckage of Japanese planes.

"Puffs of smoke rose continuously from bursting shells on the central airstrip," Mutrie said.

Seizure of the south half of Motoyama air field No. 2, which has two runways, puts the marines well atop the plateau on which the field is located. It is the last enemy air field in enemy hands, being 700 yards north of the captured bomber base.

Gain 600 Yards on Right.

The advance was scored by Maj. Gen. Graves B. Erskine's 3d division.

On the right, Maj. Gen. Clifton B. Cates' 4th division has extended the east coast beachhead northward 600 yards. This made its width more than 5,000 yards.

On the left of the 3d division, Maj. Gen. Keller C. Rockey's 5th division advanced several hundred yards, today's bulletin reported.

"In every zone of the fighting, the enemy resisted our advance to the full extent of his armament," announced Adm. Nimitz.

2,799 Japs Killed.

The total count of enemy dead on the island, cut down out of an original garrison of 20,000, has reached 2,799.

Nimitz' reference to Japanese usage of a bazooka-type weapon augmented previous reports of the enemy's modern armaments. Previously it was disclosed the Japanese are using rocket mortars, presumably fired from launching platforms.

Artillery Fire Diminishes.

Enemy artillery fire "into the interior of the area of our control" is diminishing, Nimitz said. Marine artillery fire against the northern volcanic positions, where the bulk of the enemy garrison is intrenched, has intensified.

On the south tip of Iwo the mop-up on the slopes of captured Mount Suribachi volcano has netted the destruction of 115 enemy emplacements.

150 B-29s Raid Singapore.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 24 (AP).—More than 150 B-29s attacked the Singapore dock area today with good results. Smoke billowed up 20,000 feet from the Japanese held harbor facilities there as the American raiders drew away.

Reporting this second strike of the month against Singapore from India bases, the 20th air force said only weak fighter opposition was encountered and none of the B-29s was lost. It was the fourth strike by Super Fortresses against the former British base at the tip of the Malay peninsula.

$1 FOR LAUNDRY FROM DEAD G. I.'s PAY PROTESTED

Sgt. Alvin B. Hecht Jr.

A bitter protest against a dollar deduction for laundry and dry cleaning from the final pay of their son, who was killed in a bomb explosion in England, was voiced yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Alvin B. Hecht, 6259 Grace st.

The deduction was described by the father as "exacting the last ounce of blood from a soldier who had given his life for his country."

Six months after the death of Sgt. Alvin B. Hecht Jr., 23, the parents received a final statement rendered by the general accounting office, which included, among other items, a charge of $1 representing the soldier's indebtedness to the United States for laundry at the date of his death.

To save other soldiers from "paying for laundry, which in many cases is never done," Hecht asked the aid of Senators Brooks [R., Ill.] and Wheeler [D., Mont.].

CABLE TO GUAM REPAIRED; IN USE SINCE DECEMBER

SUMAY, Guam, Dec. 21, 1944 [Delayed by censor]—(AP).—Silent for three years and 11 days, Guam's newly restored submarine cable station tapped out its first message to America today.

The second longest line in the world is back in underwater communication with Midway Island, Honolulu and San Francisco. The cable also is surprisingly good to Luzon, and right into Tokyo.

War correspondents on Guam are seeking permission to cable a list of questions to the Japanese emperor, but the project is meeting no enthusiasm in United States navy circles.

The first message over the cable today was a Christmas greeting from Guam's commander, Maj. Gen. Henry Larsen, to Adm. Nimitz at Pearl Harbor. There will probably be a delay pending navy censorship and other arrangements before commercial traffic will begin.

Confined to Troops.

The station is owned and operated by the Commercial Pacific Cables corporation. It probably will be used largely at the start for low rate standard messages chosen by number from prepared lists—for service men overseas and their families at home, said Archibald McDermid, superintendent.

McDermid said pre-war rates probably will be charged for other messages—26 cents a word high priority full rate, 10 cents per word press rate, five cents deferred rate.

The cable section from Midway to Guam, which McDermid said is exceeded in length only by the British Australia-Suva, Canada cable from British Columbia to Fanning Island, was mended at two breaks by the United States army transport service cable repair ship.

Station in Hut.

From Guam to Midway the cable is 2,760 miles long; from Midway to Honolulu, 1,400 miles, and from Honolulu to San Francisco, 2,400.

In peace time the cable ran from Guam thru Manila to Shanghai and thru Chichi in the Bonin Islands to Tokyo. The Americans operated the Tokyo cable as far as Chichi, where it was looped over to Japanese operation.

The cable station was reopened here in a Quonset hut on Orote peninsula near Sumay, a couple of miles from its former location in Sumay town.

Tells of Fixing Breaks.

McDermid, who served three previous tours of duty on Guam, said:

"The cable from Honolulu to Midway was open all along. My assistant, Lewis H. Stroup of Honolulu, and I found the cable to Guam broken four miles off Midway in water 2,400 fathoms deep. We found the other break just outside Guam harbor.

"The Guam break was repaired first and now with the Midway break repaired, we are just awaiting the government go ahead signal. We tested the Manila cable and found the impulse good. The line probably is broken just off Luzon.

"The Japanese line was good right into Tokyo and the Japanese were sending on it when we first tested it. Reports from our former employes indicate the Japanese made constant use of the Guam cable to keep in touch with Yap, Celebes, and Tokyo, but apparently didn't communicate with Manila. The Yap cable connection is now broken."

FOUND DEAD IN SON'S FIRM.

Samuel Muzolf, 86, was found dead of a heart attack yesterday in the Mid-City Refinishing company, 215 W. Huron st., where he was a watchman. The company is owned by his son, Felix Davis, 920 Juniper rd., Glenview, with whom he lived.

Aid Wounded Manila Resident

'BETTER LEYTE THAN NEVER,' TIP TO PRISON CAMP

Hamilton Field, Cal., Feb. 24 (AP).—Two days before the United States 1st cavalry drove on their rescue mission to Santo Tomas prison, American planes dropped a note which said "roll out the barrel.'

Bataan nurses who arrived here today said this note was the topper of a series of signals that deliverance was growing near—a series begun Sept. 21, 1944, when carrier bombers struck Manila. That night the camp phonograph played "Pennies from Heaven."

A month later on the night of Oct. 20, Don Bell, former radio correspondent, ended the brief news report which the Japanese permitted him to read daily over the camp loudspeaker, "Better late than never." He pronounced "Late as "Leyte." The Japanese didn't catch on.

FOUND SHOT TO DEATH.

Clarence Bryant, 53, of 3120 Orchard st., a retired surveyor, was found shot to death yesterday in his bedroom. He had been ill for a year, his wife, Mary, told police.

ILLINOISANS SET FREE IN DARING JAP PRISON RAID

Chicago Couple Among Los Banos Internees.

BY WALTER SIMMONS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LOS BANOS, Luzon, P. I., Feb. 23 [Delayed].—A flawlessly executed land, sea, and air operation by American troops today liberated 2,146 civilian internees, mostly United States citizens who had been confined in Los Banos camp south of Manila.

Altho the Japanese apparently had a forewarning of the sudden attack, some guards were left last night. They put up little resistance. The Yanks struck shortly after dawn, and before noon the camp had been entirely evacuated and the barracks buildings put to the torch to prevent the Japanese from reoccupying them.

The internees got the first inkling of their approaching freedom at 7 a. m. when nine C-47 troop carrier planes roared over the camp and disgorged paratroops, who landed a mile to the east of the camp. At the same time a 23 man patrol led by Lt. George Skau of Jackson Heights, N. Y., burst into the camp. They were quickly reënforced by other paratroopers of the 11th air borne division, who had spent all night crossing Laguna de Bay to the north, in 58 amphibious tractors [amtracks].

Tell of Cut in Rations.

Lt. Skau's patrol had left 24 hours ahead of the amtrackers and had crossed the bay in bancas [native canoes]. Aided by Filipino guerillas thru a pre-arranged plan, they reached Los Banos at the cost of two men wounded.

The liberators, who numbered less than 500 men, found the internees in much better health than the group of 3,700 freed at Santo Tomas university in Manila.

"We were treated pretty well up to a few months ago," said Howard L. Phillips, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Phillips of Glen Ellyn, Ill. "But last fall there was a change of administration. The new commandant, Maj. Iwaenka, and his master sergeant, a sadist named Konishi, started progressively cutting our food allowance until we were allowed only two scanty meals a day.

"It didn't matter that we could look across the road and see fruits and vegetables in abundance. The only way we could get enough to eat was to trade our valuables and jewelry to the Japs—they all did this, even the major."

Chicago Couple Freed.

Phillips' story of the barbaric Jap treatment was corroborated by Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Wrightman, formerly of 5922 Union av., Chicago, Ill., who exhibited their only remaining food—a hard brown square of banana root.

[Mrs. Wrightman is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lott King of Birdseye, Ind., who learned last night from the Chicago Tribune that their daughter and son-in-law had been among the liberated internees and also that they were the grandparents of 8 month old William Dana Wrightman, the first child born in the camp area. Wrightman when seized by the Japs, was in the printing business in Manila.]

He estimated that about 70 per cent of the internees were suffering from malnutrition and said the desperation of hunger had led 20 men to flee the camp in the last three weeks. The prisoners at Los Banos, Wrightman said, had their first "hunch" that liberation was at hand when they lined up for roll call and no Jap guards appeared.

"This morning we lined up again," he said, "just in time to see the paratroopers jump."

Former Chicagoan Released.

Wrightman said Frank Rider, a former Chicagoan, whose home more recently is believed to have been in California, and who was Philippines manager for an air conditioning company, and Willard H. Smith, formerly of 101 Merrill av., Park Ridge, Ill., where his wife now lives, were among the internees released.

[Mrs. Smith, who learned from The Tribune last night of her husband's liberation, said he was a representative in China of the California-Texas Oil company, and that he had taken refuge in Manila in 1941 when the Japanese overran China. She had previously returned to the United States in 1937 to escape the invaders.]

Among others believed to have been among the first contingent freed from Los Banos were Ethel Montgomery of Rock Falls, Ill., and Louis Jacobs of Baribou, Wis.

Among the members of Lt. Skau's scout platoon which made the night crossing of the bay were: Pvt. Paul Edien, 1280 Ardmore av., Chicago and Pvt. Robert Carroll of Portland, Ind.

Get First Cigarets.

WITH LOS BANOS RESCUE FORCES, PHILIPPINES, Feb. 23—[Delayed] (AP).—The 2,146 civilian internees liberated by American forces from the Los Banos camp today, were rushed across the eastern edge of Laguna de Bay and then taken in ambulances and trucks to the 41st field hospital.

Safe behind American lines after more than three years of imprisonment, the internees, most of them Americans, were given immediate medical aid, where necessary. They enjoyed their first full meal in many months and received cigarets, clothes, and comfort articles.

THREE FROM CHICAGO ON LATEST LIST OF RESCUED INTERNEES

Washington, D. C., Feb. 24 (AP).—The war department announced yesterday additional names of Americans liberated from Japanese prison camps in the Philippines. The civilians, with next of kin, are:

CHICAGO.

HUNTED BY JAPS 3 YEARS; HIDES IN THEIR OWN CAMP

MANILA, P. I., Feb. 23 [Delayed]—(AP).—A man who was hunted by the Japanese thruout the conquered territory of southeast Asia was found safe and well today in the Los Banos camp—breathing easy for the first time in three years of hide and seek.

He is William Heath Donald, Australian high adviser and friend of Generalissimo and Mme. Chiang Kai-shek.

It was previously reported that Donald had been found among prisoners in the Santo Tomas internment camp, who were rescued several weeks ago.

Donald left Chungking for his first vacation in a decade in 1941 and was recuperating in the Solomon Islands when Mme. Chiang summoned him to return. He got as far as Manila five days after the war broke out.

Age Fools the Japs.

"Time and again," said Donald, "Japanese searched the camp records for my name. I always was known as W. H. Donald. I registered on the internees' list truthfully as William H. Donald. That confused the Japanese. But what fooled them most was my recorded age—nearly 70. They would shrug their shoulders and say 'That's not the same man. We're looking for a much younger man.'"

Donald said that when the Japanese came to the camp fellow internees warned him to take cover. "But I would sit quietly after a quick glance to see that the searcher wasn't an old Japanese acquaintance," he said.

Internees Kept Secret.

"Internees held my identity in strictest confidence. The Japanese seemed to feel I was responsible for getting American and British sympathy for China, and my reputation with Nippon's war lords was not very healthy."

Donald said he was anxious to communicate with Mme. Chiang.

"I am ready to do whatever she says," he said, "if I can help China against Japan."

Awaiting transportation to an American camp, Donald said "the sword of Damocles hung over my neck until today."

[Reports that Donald had been rescued at Santo Tomas came originally from Sydney, Australia. There was no indication whether these reports were published to further mislead the Japanese or whether Australians jumped to the conclusion that Donald was still in Santo Tomas. This story was the first response of Associated Press staff men in the Philippines to repeated queries for stories about Donald. It is now apparent why the AP men made no previous answer to these requests.]

WOMAN AT IWO FINDS MARINES ARE VERY TOUGH

Tells Story of Wounded Coming on Ship.

BY BONNIE WILEY.

[First woman war correspondent in the Pacific, who accompanied amphibious forces to Iwo Island aboard a hospital ship.]

Bonnie Wiley.

ABOARD A U. S. HOSPITAL SHIP RETURNING FROM IWO ISLAND, Feb. 24 (AP). — Marines are very tough.

I found that out on this trip, a trip that carried navy doctors and nurses so close to Iwo Island I might have tossed a rock onto the beach.

There is no whimpering aboard this ship where the wounded of this stiffest battle in 168 years of marine corps history are being treated.

Even the worst cases are more interested in what had happened ashore than in their wounds. Many are not badly injured and some of them got together on our ship's decks and swapped yarns.

"Those Japs acted like a bunch of doggone fools," said a marine who was wounded by shrapnel in a leg.

"We would toss a few grenades into a pillbox and out would come Japs in a frantic charge," he said. "They acted like they were doped. They weren't yelling but I dropped two grenades in their fire trench and they sure started yelling then."

Ship Arrives on Second Day.

Our hospital ship reached Iwo the morning of D-day plus one. Doctors and nurses lined the rails watching flashes from our warships' guns and answering puffs from the island.

We watched waves of marines waiting in small boats to back up their buddies who had made beach landings. News of the battle was blaring over our ship's loud speaker. We were interrupted soon by a voice on the loud speaker: "All stretcher bearers attention!"

Over the side came the ship's first wounded. They are not complaining.

"Help these other fellows; I'm not hurt bad," one begged.

The guns kept booming and the flashes grew brighter.

At first I kept waiting for the announcer to explain how the American navy took Iwo. But the island was fighting back viciously. It still was, as our ship left the scene laden with wounded.

[In a broadcast from the Pacific yesterday, Miss Wiley said the ship took back 600 wounded, of whom 20 died. The vessel halted for burial of eight at sea.]

Wounded Come in for Hours.

For hours I watched the wounded lifted carefully by stretcher bearers up the swaying gangway into this white ship. I saw one youthful marine, face drawn in pain, jump off a stretcher protesting that somebody worse off than he should be carried aboard.

"Don't let them carry me. Don't let them. I can walk, see?" and off across the deck he went, limping badly but walking proudly.

There were unexpected reunions, too. A blond boy in an upper bunk in the surgical ward saw a buddy across the room and yelled, "I thought you'd never make it, pal."

Nurse's Brother Fighting.

I seem to have been quite a surprise myself.

"Well, I'll be doggoned!" one wounded man called from a stretcher. "You old woman! What in thunder are you doing here?"

[Editor's note: Bonnie of Yakima, Wash., is 34. She won her place on the hospital ship by going as a volunteer nurse's aide.]

Another recognized the ship as one upon which he had received treatment before.

"Say, put me in that ward where that pretty black-eyed nurse is, will you?" he asked.

On the way back from Iwo this ship carried the less seriously wounded in bunks arranged on deck. Iwo's toll was like that.

CHINESE RETAKE JAP KEY TO LOST U. S. AIR FIELDS

CHUNGKING, Feb. 24 (AP). — Lienhwa, key town on the Jap supply route to Kanhsien and Suichwan, former American air bases in Kiangsi province, has been recaptured, the Chinese high command announced tonight.

Situated in western Kiangsi province 90 miles east of the Japanese held Canton-Hankow railroad, Lienhwa also was one of the strongholds protecting the east flank of the enemy's China-Indo-China corridor. Its recapture marked the first real success of Chinese counter-attacks designed to interrupt the flow of enemy supplies to the fallen air bases.

In Hunan province, the Japanese continued their attacks west of Paoching, an important stronghold 63 miles west of Hengyang in what might be the opening of a drive against other Chinese air bases.

MARINE WOUNDS ON IWO WORST OF PACIFIC WAR, NURSES AGREE

Twenty navy nurses aboard a hospital ship returning wounded marines from Iwo to fleet headquarters in Guam, all veterans of five Pacific operations, agreed yesterday that the wounds suffered on Iwo are the worst of any yet encountered in the Pacific.

The opinion of the 20 nurses was voiced by Lt. Thelma Baird of Elmira, N. Y., when interviewed by Arthur Prim, Mutual war correspondent, in a program broadcast over W-G-N and the Mutual network shortly after the hospital ship had landed its 580 patients at Guam.

The most distressing part of the entire trip to and from Iwo, Lt. Baird said, was the helpless appeal of litter bearers in landing barges filled with wounded and circling the hospital ship off the beaches after it had been filled. The ship was forced to depart without them but another ship arrived later and Lt. Baird was hopeful that all the waiting wounded were accomodated. She said landing barges used in removing wounded were fired on just as heavily by the Japs as the combat vessels. The severity of the wounds was attributed by Lt. Baird to the large number hit by mortar shrapnel, which rips wide, jagged gaps thru flesh and bone, and the volcanic sand of the island which increased the difficulty of cleansing.

Crippled Children Benefit Circus Opens Next Friday

The circus will play in Medinah temple. Featured again this year will be the Powers military elephants and Massimalino Truizzi, a bounding wire acrobat.

68 HEROINES OF BATAAN ARRIVE IN TEARS OF JOY

Hamilton Field, Cal., Feb. 24 (AP). —Heroines of Corregidor and Bataan came home today. Sixty-seven army nurses and specialists and one Red Cross worker arrived on four planes.

"Back home! O, it's so good! It's so good! You just can't know."

Such was the refrain repeated again and again by the women who nursed the wounded and the dying in the desperate days of America's defeat and who then suffered thru nearly three years of Japanese captivity.

The nurses and specialists were the first group of liberated Americans to be brought home. They were rescued from Santo Tomas internment camp in Manila Feb. 2.

They were taken from here to Letterman hospital, San Francisco, for a physical check-up and treatment until they are released to visit relatives and friends.

One Chicago Nurse.

Lt. Eleanor R. Garen, Mrs. Lulu Garen, South Bend, Ind.

Lt. Marcia L. Gates, Mrs. Marcia Gates Mills, Janesville, Wis.

Lt. Brunetta Kuehlthau, Mrs. George Kuehlthau, West Bend, Wis.

Lt. Alice J. Hahn, Mrs. Cornelius Moynihan, 2463 Ainslie st., Chicago.

Lt. Winifred P. Madden, Mrs. Frank Madden, Montello, Wis.

Lt. Earleen Allen Francis, Mrs. Ruth Allen, Jacksonville, Ill.

Lt. Kuelthau of West Bend, Wis., a physiotherapist, volunteered and was sent to the Sternberg general hospital at Manila to Corregidor; then to Bataan, back to Corregidor and finally, as a prisoner of war, to Santo Tomas.

Lt. Garen of South Bend is going home as soon as she can. "Some baby nephews and nieces have grown up. I want to see them," she said.

Couldn't Believe It.

Lt. Minnie Breese, whose mother lives at Richmond Heights, Mo., and who was born at Arlington Heights, Ill., couldn't believe the American troops had entered Santo Tomas.

"I had to go and touch one of them," she said. "I cried like a baby, everybody cried, even the man in the camp—and some of the soldiers, too. O, they were so tall! It was so good to see them!"

As the three transport planes and one hospital plane swung over San Francisco in formation, the nurses sat in complete silence. Tears started coming to eyes. When the planes landed at Hamilton field and the nurses stepped out, some openly crying with joy, they were almost mobbed by old army friends and other well-wishers.

The repatriates could hardly get used to the experience of being free Americans homeward bound again. They exclaimed with wonder and glee over such ordinary things as a copper cent—"a good old penny." Some appeared to have recovered normal vitality, but they were all underweight.

5 Feet but Still Tough.

Maj. Maude Davidson, 59 year old senior chief nurse, was alert and eager despite long, progressive malnutrition.

"I can still be pretty tough," she said.

Maj. Davidson, 5 feet tall, weighed 156 pounds when she was captured on Corregidor May 6, 1942. She weighed 80 pounds when liberated.

The younger nurses [average age about 30] were anxious to pick up the threads of life.

"Where is Mrs. Roosevelt now?" asked Lt. Eunice F. Young of Arkport, N. Y.

She explained that the news of Mrs. Roosevelt's Australia visit in September, 1943, had reached internees by way of the grapevine.

Hear Old Songs First Time.

The song, "Remember Pearl Harbor," was brand new to these Americans. They were just hearing for the first time the lines of that and other popular songs of the last three years.

They spoke with reverent pride of Lt. Gen. Jonathan Wainwright, American commander who was captured with them on Corregidor.

"The food was the worst part," said Lt. Winifred Madden of Montello, Wis.

HANDWRITING TEST AWAITED IN 2 TUB DEATHS

Lt. Philip Breitzke, head of the Chicago police homicide bureau, said last night he was awaiting samples of Joseph Medley's handwriting to complete identification of the Southern Michigan prison fugitive as the mysterious lover of two women he left dead in bath tubs in Chicago and New Orleans [La.] hotels.

Medley's picture has been identified as that of the John H. Hanan, who rented a room at the Atlantic hotel, 316 S. Clark st., and of the D. J. Stafford, who stayed at the Hotel De Soto in New Orleans last December. A week ago Mrs. Blanche Zimmerman, 38, was found dead in Hanan's room. The woman found dead in New Orleans was Miss Laura Fischer, 28, of New York.

DON'T LET SLUDGE RUIN YOUR CAR!

OLDSMOBILE SERVICE

LET US CLEAN IT OUT BEFORE IT'S TOO LATE!

You may have driven hundreds of thousands of miles before the war, and never had trouble from sludge. But today, everything is different. You're driving slower, making shorter trips, using lower-grade gas. The engine in your car runs "cold" much of the time, seldom gets hot enough to drive off the sludge-forming vapors in the crankcase. It's a safe bet there's as much sludge in your engine right now as the mechanic is showing the owner in the photo above. If this dangerous sludge accumulation isn't removed, it can quickly clog oil lines, stop the vital circulation of oil, and cause burned bearings, scored cylinders, and damaged camshaft gears and chains. Don't take this chance. Let us inspect your engine for sludge. And if it needs de-sludging, let us do the job thoroughly, exactly as recommended by Oldsmobile engineers. Drive in, before it's too late.

These parts are difficult to get and expensive to replace. Yet nearly every car on the road today has enough sludge in the crankcase to endanger them and cause them to fail.

Mrs. Hand made her appeal to President Roosevelt after the eldest son, Sgt. James, 24, was killed in Germany Nov. 17 and his brother, Pvt. Herbert, 22, was killed on Leyte 10 days later. Eugene has learned of the death of James, but does not yet know that the second brother was killed.

The order transferring Eugene to his home base was issued Jan. 29, the parents were informed. The message received yesterday did not state the date of his injury. The Hands have four other children, William Jr., 14; Richard, 12; Marion, 18, and Reta, 11.

WE ACQUIRE A PARTNER.

Prime Minister Churchill met Mr. Roosevelt in Egypt on the return journey from Yalta and there is reported to have promised to "throw everything" at the Japanese after the defeat of Germany. This promise of participation in the Pacific was rather more positive than any previously given by the prime minister, but America's recent successes in the Philippines and our further advances toward Tokyo could easily explain his readiness to promise that Britain will take a hand.

The war against Japan, indeed, is just about won, so far as this nation's security or interests are concerned. But Mr. Churchill is looking ahead and has no intention that Britain should be left out of the coming settlements. She is going to get back her colonies and will be agreeable to any extra dividends which can be picked up after the American victory. By this time there are no great risks in the venture, and there is much to gain.

While Americans might feel that Mr. Churchill could demonstrate Britain's good intentions by insisting that his country's forces take a more responsible part in the concluding phases of the war in Europe, which is much closer to home, they should not overlook the fact that there are few further spoils for Britain to gain in that theater. Britain's interests in the Mediterranean and Africa have already been assured, but on the continent the principal benefits from here on will accrue to the acquisitive Russians. That may be why Mr. Churchill is beginning to cast glances toward the Pacific.

There is a disturbing belief in congress that Mr. Roosevelt, at the Yalta conference, assented to an allied nations trusteeship over the Pacific islands wrested from the Japanese at such high cost by the American army and navy. A movement is on foot to place this matter on the agenda of the forthcoming conference in San Francisco to complete the program outlined at Dumbarton Oaks.

We have already witnessed the promptitude with which British crown commissioners have asserted the British title to former Pacific territories reconquered by our forces. The smoke of battle had barely cleared at Tarawa and Guadalcanal before British agents moved back in, set up shop, and announced that they were in charge. The title is construed as valid because these possessions were handed to the British under league of nations mandate following the last World war.

The fact that the league is now nonexistent as an instrument of practical authority is not permitted to disturb British claims; but from Yalta we are informed that it is quite a different matter in disposing of the Japanese held islands which we have conquered. The Marshall, Caroline, and Marianas archipelagoes were mandated to the Japs by Woodrow Wilson's league of nations, but now that we have reconquered them single handed or doomed them to fall into our hands, we are supposed to understand that we have no moral right to assume permanent possession. That—shades of Poland!—would be contrary to the Atlantic Charter's renunciation of territorial aggrandizement.

Any one familiar with Mr. Roosevelt's frivolous disregard of his country's interests will concede that it was well within his character to waive any rights in these vital bases and welcome Britain, France, Russia, or anybody else into joint tenancy. Even prior to the Yalta discussions there had been a casual acceptance of this arrangement among empire spokesmen as an already accomplished fact. For instance, on Jan. 25 the London Times remarked editorially:

"The disappearance of Japan as the exploiter of an overseas empire will leave a gap which must be filled, and Australia has already shown by her record in Papua that her sense of responsibility for the interests of backward people deserves the confidence of the civilized world. It is plain that Australia will emerge from the present war strong and purposeful, fully prepared to play her part as a force for progress and order in the Southwest Pacific."

The empire has never been overmodest in asserting its claims as a force for order worthy of the trusteeship over native populations. Evidently the sacrificial spirit calls Britain to take up the white man's burden once more—but only after we have finished trouncing the Japs. The American soldiers, seamen, and marines may die. Britain will then take over.

Only a congress willing to speak with conviction for America can prevent the consummation of Mr. Roosevelt's scheme to break faith with all the Americans who died that this country might have the bases which would secure her permanent safety in the Pacific. Mr. Roosevelt, as usual, places America last. He is afflicted with lasting amnesia when it comes to remembering that the American people pay his salary and he is supposed to be working for them.

SPRING FLOWERS.

Spring, we hope, being just around the corner, it is pleasant to forget the grayness of these days by looking forward to the flowers that bring the first color to our spring. In not too many weeks the crocuses, the tulips, the hyacinths, and narcissi will be pushing above ground. So well loved are these flowers that we are willing to pay much higher prices for them now than before the war, and, altho our growers are producing many millions, there haven't been enough to go around.

In normal times we supplemented our own bulb stocks with large importations from Holland. This will be the sixth spring for Holland under German occupation, and, of course, no bulbs have been coming out of that country. In peace time we depended upon Holland for most of our hyacinths and crocuses. Crocuses were sold so cheaply that growing them was largely left to the Dutch, while the labor costs of growing hyacinths, which require four or five years of development, also made us dependent upon the Dutch.

Our tulips were as good as or better than Dutch varieties, which suffered in shipping, but we have always used large numbers of Dutch bulbs to meet a demand in excess of our own large production. The value of Dutch tulip stocks, however, was set by British consumption, which was always about five times as great as our own. Narcissi we grew in ample numbers, but we were always interested in new varieties, and will again look to the Dutch for them. The Dutch say that we are in a bad way now as regards daffodils, citing the fact that the list of commercial varieties here is down to one, practically speaking. Our growers say that that one—the King Alfred—is preferred anyway, as it is much the best for forcing, and anyway, the Dutch themselves have only this same variety themselves, and apparently have produced no new kinds.

The bulb industry is of much greater importance to the Dutch than to us, for it has been one of their export mainstays. Various exporters who escaped the Germans and reached this country have, therefore, been debating whether the industry has substantially survived under the occupation and have tried to estimate its prospects after Holland is liberated. Some are pessimistic, but most believe that the Germans could not ruin the land, the equipment, and the foundation stocks, even if they had wished to do so. We hope they are right and that the bulb industry will help set Holland on its feet again.

Our own growers forecast that when we are able to get bulbs again from Holland prices will go down. One reason they have gone up is that commercial florists have been cut off from Holland's exports and from the lilies that came from Japan. Our own war labor shortage has also greatly reduced the production of roses grown on our west coast, which the florists forced for the Easter market, and this, in consequence, has increased demand for bulb plants and raised prices for them.

When we again start getting Holland tulips our growers believe that the list of varieties will be entirely different from those we received before. They say that the Germans don't like the Darwins and cottage tulips, which we took in great numbers, and that the Dutch have switched to single earlies, triumphs, and double earlies, buying them up with occupation marks. The Dutch, it is thought, have destroyed almost all the old-time varieties, such as Rev. Eubanks and Inglescombe Yellow, which were popular here, but naturally kept their high priced novelties.

From all this it will appear that even the flowers that bloom in the spring, boom, boom, can't escape the consequences of a global war.

WHO, INDEED?

In last Sunday's paper we published a dispatch from our Washington bureau saying that Mrs. Douglas, the congresswoman from Illinois, had been forbidden, because she is a commoner, to speak on the radio on the same program with Queen Wilhelmina of Holland and Mrs. Roosevelt. This information had been supplied to us and to all other newspapers by Mrs. Douglas in a typed press release issued from her office.

When on Saturday evening our first edition, containing this item, reached the office of Mr. Roosevelt's organ in Chicago, its editor lost his head, if that is what he calls it. Perhaps he was enraged to find his good friend, Mrs. Douglas, confirming THE TRIBUNE'S contention that republican institutions have taken an awful beating under the New Deal. To that may have been added his irritation at having been scooped again. At any rate, he rushed into print that night with a fantastic story on his front page to the effect that our dispatch was "a pure fake," born, so he said, of hate.

Readers of THE TRIBUNE on Monday saw a fascimile of Mrs. Douglas' statement.

Needless to say, Mr. Roosevelt's organ offered no apology for its calumny.

Some of our readers have been urging us to make a great deal of this incident. For our part, we don't believe it's worth the trouble. It isn't news. They've done it before and they'll do it again.

Who, knowing anything of human behavior, would expect truth from an editor who goes up and down the highways shouting "I tell the truth"? Who would expect honesty in a carpetbag newspaper, founded on tax-dodging? Who would expect integrity from a publisher who pleads for patriotic sacrifice by others only to be caught cheating on the paper quota assigned to him by the government?

Who would expect disinterested concern for the public welfare from a newspaper whose proprietor uses the columns of his paper to plead for transferring much of the burden of taxation from real estate owners to tenants when he is himself the heaviest investor in Chicago real estate and would therefore be a principal beneficiary of such a change? Who would expect decency in a publication which, in the hope of picking up a few readers, regularly exploits the fears of racial and religious minorities by giving to otherwise obscure bigots the free advertising they crave and must have if they are to gain a following?

Who would expect intelligence and self-respect in a newspaper whose owner finds his greatest satisfaction in his relationship by marriage to a peer? Who would expect professional competence, to say nothing of common honesty, from a staff which accepts employment in an enterprise so founded and so conducted?

As head of the new united nations clothing collection agency, Mr. Henry Kaiser will appreciate the donation of any old suit you aren't going to have pressed for Easter.—Detroit News.

A strange new candor is found in the current outgivings of Berlin. That pounding sound from the Goebbels ministry would be Honest Joe, blunting the truth.— Detroit News.

Nations differ, one from another. For instance, Canadian newspapers contain full page ads for roasts and steaks and chops without ration coupons.—Washington Evening Star.

CREATING A REPUBLIC

[Following is an address delivered last night by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, and broadcast on the Chicago Theater of the Air over W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual Broadcasting system.]

BY COL. ROBERT R. McCORMICK.

In this and subsequent addresses I will show that the American Revolution was the turning point in the history of the world. There had been political philosophers before the Americans, but they did not get beyond essay writing. There had been revolts against oppression, but they had ended in failure. Royal and aristocratic might had everywhere prevailed. Everywhere weaker peoples had been overrun and oppressed. Colonies had been planted solely for the benefit of the homelands. First the conquered people were plundered; then the colonies themselves were exploited.

This conduct was interrupted for the first time by the revolt of 13 of the 17 British colonies in North America. These colonies united in the continental congress, overwhelmed and captured the armies of the empire, and overran Canada south of the Great Lakes. They obtained the acknowledgment of their own independence and the ownership of their conquests.

These terms were accepted by the empire the more readily as it did not intend to observe them. Royalty and aristocracy had been in worse state when the Great Rebellion beheaded the king, dethroned his family, and abolished the house of lords, only to collapse because of internal schism and clever betrayal. Dangerous revolts in Scotland and Ireland had been put down by fire and sword. Betrayal of the Revolution had failed by an accident. It could be hoped for, perhaps expected, after the peace. Intrigues to that end began almost immediately and still persist.

Another republic, that of Holland, had risen and fallen.

Therefore the empire adopted a policy similar to that of the last years of the war. Territory to be ceded under the terms of the treaty of Paris was held and used as headquarters for Indian raids against the northern and western populations. In informal alliance with Spain, the southern frontier was similarly harassed.

If the Indian terror had prevented expansion to the west and south, the whole plan might have succeeded as the commercial interests along the seaboard, now freed from blockade and arbitrary taxation, were willing at times to resume the old tie. But these tactics succeeded only insofar as the Jay treaty slightly impaired American sovereignty, which in turn infuriated all Americans whom it did not personally benefit.

The Indian raids did not stop the settlement of the west and south, but they raised such great bitterness in the distressed populations as to bring on the War of 1812, which finally destroyed the Indian power and opened the way to great western migrations. At times during this war, however, it looked as tho not only would the colonies, or at least large parts of them, be regained but also the territory of Louisiana, which the Americans had bought from France. The victories of Lake Erie, Lake Champlain, and New Orleans forever ended any danger of reconquest and left the populations of the west and southwest exultant, intensely nationalistic, and determined to expand.

The hope that the 13 colonies could not form an enduring nation was blasted when, in the language of Lincoln's Gettysburg address, "there was born on this continent a new nation, dedicated to the principle that all men are created equal." Here was forged the only government which has been able to function in peace and war without overthrowing the liberties of the people.

It is one of the pleasant ironies of history that the Federalists built the government so strong that when they lost control of it they were unable to tear it down in order to return to their former allegiance.

The Declaration of Independence had declared that all men were created equal and that governments derived their powers from the consent of the governed. The Constitution specified the rights of the individuals and of the states, guaranteed to them a republican form of government, and forbade titles of nobility. The Ordinance of the Northwest Territory provided that as it became settled it should be divided into states, equal to the original 13. This was the first time that any government ever gave its offshoots equality with itself.

We have seen that the colonies had been settled by refugees who only sought to escape tyranny in Europe. The Revolutionary war was fought to prevent the reimportation of European conditions; the nation was established to maintain the freedom gained. Now the men who trooped across the Alleghenies into the Northwest Territory were apostles of a new creed of government which they had created and which they intended to spread. These men loved the United States with the hot passion of youth. They cherished no illusion that democracy or freedom could live under any other form of government. As they progressed southwest and westward they set up new states of self-governing men equal to the states from which they had come.

At first progress was easy. The crest of the Appalachians passed, broad rivers floated them to richer and richer lands. In the north the Great Lakes carried them halfway across the continent.

With the purchase of Louisiana and the expedition of Lewis and Clark to the mouth of the Columbia river, the settlement of the entire country to the coast became a growing policy. The impetus of the expanding Republic carried its standard bearers across the arid deserts and rugged mountains to the Pacific ocean.

Spain and, afterward, Spanish institutions stood in the way. First Florida was conquered and paid for and made into a state; then Americans in Texas revolted, established their independence, and petitioned for annexation. In spite of the strong objections of the kingdom of England and the second French republic, as imperialist and voracious as any monarchy, who did not want the Republic to become larger and stronger, and of Mexico's threat of war, the annexation was consummated. In consequence of the ensuing war California and Mexican territory lying east of it was annexed, again against the opposition of Great Britain, France, and Spain, and of the powerful Hudson Bay company, which was claiming Oregon.

Americans were settled in Oregon and claimed it by right of discovery and of settlement against the claims of British fur traders.

There was a strong disposition to insist that the boundary of Oregon be extended northward to Alaska. Canada, however, had by this time passed so far along the road from absolutism as no longer to threaten the Republic, so a reasonable compromise was arranged to continue the existing Canadian boundary to the Pacific ocean.

The Republic of the United States now extended from ocean to ocean. Since then, in accordance with the Ordinance of 1787, all of its territory has been made into self-governing states, combined into a union of the whole with bills of rights enforceable by both state and national courts—a form of government unique in the world.

Editorial of the Day

"SLOGAN ECONOMICS."

[New York Herald Tribune.]

William Jennings Bryan made much political capital out of his famous phrase, "a cross of gold," and Huey Long will be remembered for the watchword, "Every man a king." But never up to now has an administration raised the production of slogans to the status of a major industry. At the moment its popular favorites are "60,000,000 jobs" and an "economic bill of rights," which are calculated to help grease the way for newer and bigger spending programs.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

by Dr. Irving S. Cutter

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MEAT IS A FIRST CLASS PROTEIN.

MOST of us are concerned not so much with our length of days as with the fact that we shall make the most of the time allotted to us. We have seen wonderful advances in public education; our newspapers are better and more informative; air conditioning has become common; while communication and transportation have gone ahead with leaps and bounds. Evidently, then, we are living at a more rapid rate of speed than our ancestors thought possible. The average boy of 18 today has seen and learned more than a man of 30, two or three generations ago.

How does all this affect health? As we intensify our existence, so we are likely to lessen our periods of relaxation. A shorter life but a merrier one has frequently been termed the great American disease.

For correction or delay of the wearing out process, some individuals turn to fad diets of one sort or another. Vegetarianism has been advocated for centuries, but there are no two followers of this cult who pursue the same program. Many will insist upon raw roots such as beets, turnips, radishes, parsnips, and potatoes. Others will demand that only fruits and nuts be uncooked. Still others will encourage the use of milk and eggs, both of which are excellent animal proteins.

The chances are that, whether we like it or not, more of us will be obliged to become larger users of plant foods than we have heretofore. The reasons are economic. There is not enough first class protein [beef, lamb, etc.] to supply the world generously. This always happens when nations become crowded. It occurred in Egypt in the era of the Pharaohs. It is true in Japan and in modern China.

But we in America have been particularly favored. The great majority have had too much sense to look upon the consumption of meat as sinful or degrading. What we want in our menus is adequate protein to replace wear and tear, sufficient carbohydrates and fats to produce heat, and the standard requirement of vitamins and minerals.

Protein actually enters into the structure of the body itself and remains there as replacement tissue. It fills in for something that has been used up. We have a good many sources which are not animal and we can look to grains, beans, peas, etc., for our larger requirements. The only drawback is that these vegetable forms do not contain all of the important amino acids. In other words, approximately two score of chemicals of this nature [amino acids] are needed to build muscle. This can be done far more easily and safely with some meat. The amount will depend upon the type of activity in which we are engaged.

But one thing we can settle—namely, that strict vegetarianism is not a more healthful plan. To put it another way, the eating of flesh is not more harmful than adhering to plant edibles. Our explorers, when confronted with tribes of aborigines whose meals consisted of 80 to 90 per cent pure protein, will testify to this.

When we come to examine the alimentary tract, we can understand why meat is included routinely in the average American diet. The structure is just not long and capacious enough to handle coarse fibers and like it.

MURMUR.

H. F. writes: Can a heart murmur suddenly appear in a healthy adult?

REPLY.

Assuming that the adult is healthy, the question should be answered in the negative. Murmurs are sometimes audible only when the heart rate is rapid or when the patient assumes a certain position.

A COMPREHENSIVE QUESTION.

P. L. writes: What is the most dangerous age?

REPLY.

Dangerous for what? From birth to the age of 75, the heaviest mortality is in infancy. This certainly means that our most hazardous period is in the first year of life.

MAKE CERTAIN.

H. F. writes: What causes annual recurrences of strep throat?

REPLY.

Many individuals harbor the strep germ the year around, with manifestations only during periods in which resistance is lowered. Is the diagnosis accurate? Cultures will tell the tale.

NOT DANGEROUS.

B. E. B. writes: Will serious results develop if fatty tumors are not removed?

REPLY.

No, altho complications, such as infection, may be induced by irritation. Their presence may result in an unsightly appearance.

FOOD IN GENERAL.

E. writes: What foods make bone marrow?

REPLY.

A balanced diet. Substances, such as beef muscle, liver, wheat germ, yeast, and rice polishings help the blood cells within the bone marrow to mature.

MUSCULAR IRRITATION.

M. W. writes: Sometimes my flesh jumps. What is this a sign of?

REPLY.

Contraction of the muscles beneath the skin. Too much coffee or nicotine may be responsible for the phenomenon.

LAZY LID.

W. I. writes: My right eyelid has a tendency to droop. Would eyestrain cause this?

REPLY.

No. The condition is usually a family characteristic.

THE ARTICLES OF WAR.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 11.—The death sentence was imposed by court martial upon Pvt. Henry Weber at Camp Roberts for unwillingness to bear arms. It was then revoked and he is now under sentence to life imprisonment at hard labor, the loss of all pay, and a dishonorable discharge. Of course, the life sentence will not be carried out any more than the death sentence. Public wrath at such uncalled-for harshness will prevent it.

Note: The sentence has since been reduced to 5 years.

The incident, however, may serve to focus much needed attention upon the archaic and obsolete articles of war which provide such repellent penalties for political opinions and their practice.

The selective training and service act of 1940 made provision for men to serve in the military forces who were unwilling to bear arms and take life, provided they arrived at their noncombatant convictions by the process of "religious training and belief." Pvt. Weber found himself holding the same convictions as thousands of 1-A-O soldiers. He has demonstrated his sincerity in holding these views by manifesting a willingness to die for them. But he did not arrive at them by the process prescribed by law, thru "religious" training and belief. He got there by "political" training and belief. That makes all the difference to him between life and death—or life imprisonment.

It is not the unwillingness to bear arms, then, which is "verboten" in the army. It is the mental process by which the unwillingness is arrived at. If it is the result of religious belief exemption from bearing arms is granted by law. If it is the result of political belief you die—or serve a life sentence.

The antiquated articles of war, particularly article 64, which opens the way for the death penalty to be imposed for disobedience to the order of a superior officer, were created for a volunteer army, for men who deliberately chose the military life, who wanted to be soldiers, who voluntarily surrendered their civilian status to place themselves under military law and discipline. Such articles are quite out of place for a conscript army, for men who have no choice, no option, about getting into the military organization, but who are forced into the army by law. Military officers of a conscript army in a democracy ought never to be allowed to wield such a weapon as article 64.

I do not share Pvt. Weber's political convictions, nor do I admire them. I am not pleading his case. I am pleading the case of democracy and basic human freedoms. CARLYLE B. HAYNES.

[Advice and assistance on draft and military questions, the problems of dependents of service men and veterans, is given here and by mail if a stamped envelope is sent. Personal advice and assistance are given veterans by appointment.]

R. H. G. writes: "I am 28 years old and will be 29 in May. I have been a turret lathe operator for the last four years and I am registered with a rural Wisconsin draft board. My first deferment was with a company doing war work which slacked off and then I went to work for another company and received another deferment. In January, 1944, my board sent me for a preinduction examination and I was placed in 4-F [psychoneurosis]. A week later they sent me a II-B [F] classification. I secured a release from my employer and purchased a milk route, hauling milk for 21 farmers. This work only takes about five hours a day, and the rest of the time I work at my trade in a local plant. I was just sent for another physical and found acceptable and put in 1-A. What right has my draft board to do this to me now? I am still in essential work."

Your board has authority to do this under Local Board Memorandum 115-[I]. Registrants who are in an [L] or [F] classification "who voluntarily leave the employment for which he was deferred, he shall be classified into 1-A" and submitted for induction and if found acceptable under the modified standards of acceptability applying in such cases he may be inducted. Evidently you left employment for which deferred without asking permission of your draft board—hence they reclassified you. Under the same regulation a registrant may leave employment for which he is deferred if there are, to the board's way of thinking, "adequate reasons involving the registrant or his immediate family which justify the registrant in leaving such employment."

DR. HOPKINS RECOMMENDS A COMMENTARY.

Chicago, Feb. 12.—Anent your very interesting editorial of this morning on "A New Revision of the Bible," my recent experience moves me not only to thank you for the admirable editorial but to refer to its important suggestion about some kind of a "Hand Book" explaining the setting of the component biblical books. The best thing of this kind that I know is "The One Volume Bible Commentary" edited by Dr. J. R. Dummelow of Cambridge university, England, and written by some 40 American and English modern scholars, including some from Chicago. The book has become so popular that tho it contains over 1,000 pages, and deals with every book in the Bible, [omitting the Apochrypha] it sells for less than $3 in the newest edition. Lately I have given copies to an army general and to an able Chicago business woman, and their letters of thanks are filled with superlatives.

JOHN HENRY HOPKINS, D. D.

WHAT DID THE CORN COST?

Chicago, Feb. 19.—Absentee farmer-landlord G. S. H. has an adept way of arriving at his loss on the steer feeding venture. His figures may be acceptable to the tax collector, but on page three he paid out $2,500 for young steers, paid out $325 for feed, fertilizer, and fencing, and received back $4,202.06, a gross profit of $1,377.06, plus 50 or 60 tons of manure and improvement of his soil.

Of course, his figures would be correct had he bought the corn, oats, and hay in the open market, but I am sure that he grew this feed right on his own farm.

One decision a farmer has to make is whether to sell the product of his soil as grain or as flesh—beef, pork, etc. I suggest that G. S. H. makes the error of figuring the selling or market price of the grain as a cost on his feeding venture when in reality he should charge only what it cost him to raise the feed.

I believe G. S. H. can well afford to pay 45 cents a pound for round steak even tho he does not receive any dividends on his stock in Armour's, because by his method of accounting he is hiding his true profits and is getting out of paying his share of income tax.

ARTHUR W. GRAFER.

P. S.: I'm not a farmer.

HOW TO FEED THE CHILDREN?

Chicago, Feb 14.—About Christmas time two of our No. 4 war ration books containing red points were lost. When all hope of finding them was gone, I finally went to the police station for a complaint number. I had to take three children under 10 years with me on the crowded street car, then pay 50 cents for a notary public stamp.

I have diabetes and a blood clot in my leg from an operation a year ago. I seldom leave the house and this was an ordeal for me. My second oldest child has a heart murmur and I must keep her meals nutritiously sound. My butcher has taken the red point stamps from my other three books just as far as he dares. I am completely out of red points. There is no butter in the house, or oleo or lard, and no points for bacon to get any bacon grease for the children's bread.

The ration board refuses to do anything for me outside of sending me certificates for my doctor to sign regarding our health. He is in service somewhere in Germany. We simply cannot afford to eat out every night for 30 days until the new books are issued or new red points are made good. What in the world can I do to feed my family properly for the next 30 days? MRS. F.

RUBBER SCRAPERS.

Chesterton, Ind., Feb. 7.—The OPA, the WFA, etc., at Washington are so smart they have figured out how many spoons of sugar, how many cups of coffee, and how many pairs of shoes each of us needs. They should go around and scrape the baking bowls of the housewives and cream crocks of the farmers' wives. Then they might be able to figure out how much sugar, shortening, flour, and cream are left in the pans, and might see that those little rubber plate scrapers we used to buy are a necessity. I could save two tablespoons of waste fats where only one is saved now if I had a scraper, for I am unable to get the balance out of the pan.

I don't need rationing and high taxes to make me feel the war. I have a son buried out in the Marshall Islands.

MRS. R. W.

LOST PROPELLER?

Glen Ellyn, Ill., Feb. 19.—From page 4, "Pilgrims of Adversity," by William McFee:

"—— All this held good up to the fortunate day when the Ravenshoe came into Milford Haven with the fine 8,000 ton Yalta on the end of a tow rope, she having lost her propeller homeward bound . . . ."

I wonder if history will repeat?

SERVICE LIFE INSURANCE.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—It is very unfortunate, to say the least, that the war department has such strange rules concerning insurance for officers. Our son, an officer, was killed in action. Five months after his death the veterans administration notified us that our son had withdrawn his allotment for payment of the national service life insurance premium.

The truth of the matter is that when an officer leaves for overseas duties the war department discontinues deducting the allotment from his allowance, unless the officer writes to Washington to have his insurance continued. This sounds almost unbelievable, but it is the truth. Our son apparently knew nothing about this rule, for the "Officer's Guide" mentions nothing concerning this matter.

When our son left us on his last furlough he said, "I do not expect to come back, but I'm glad I took out insurance that will take care of you in your old age." He bought $1,000 worth of war bonds while in the service, and sent most of his money home, as he was stationed in Africa and Italy. These strange rules do not affect privates or noncommissioned officers, but parents or wives of officers should inquire about their insurance.

DISAPPOINTED PARENTS.

GLIMPSES OF HOME.

MARIANAS ISLANDS, Feb. 8.—One of my buddies recently received a copy of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE from home, issue of Dec. 10, 1944, and needless to say all of us from Chicago have read it eagerly. It certainly is good to see a hometown paper any old way.

I was particularly interested in a new feature in, of all places, the "Society, Club, and Travel" section, page one, called "Fresh from the Hills," by Marge of Sunrise Mountain Farm. I don't remember it being in the paper when I left home in the spring of 1943. It is one of the best word pictures of a country Sunday school I have ever seen and it recalled summers of vacation travel back in the states, when we stopped at just such places and attended the Sunday school being held in some wayside schoolhouse.

It's little glimpses of life like that going on back home that give a fellow out here a lift and make us want to keep going and get this business we have to do over with as soon as possible, so we can return once more to those scenes. This particular article struck a responsive chord in me.

CORP. STUART J. THOMPSON.

FROM THE SALVATION ARMY.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—I have just received a tabulation from our public relations department in regard to the space given the Salvation Army during 1944, and it is noted that THE TRIBUNE was most generous. I greatly appreciate this additional evidence of the helpfulness of your paper which, thru the years, has meant much to us as we have striven to serve the poor and the sinning of the city of Chicago.

JOHN J. ALLAN,
Lieutenant Commissioner.

CRUEL TRAPS.

Chicago, Feb. 19.—Some time ago while I was in the loop, a pigeon, with one leg and the remaining foot inflamed and swollen, tried to fly up to my arm. I have seen others with broken legs, or a leg or a foot missing. Such are the horrors the traps on the roofs are doubtlessly inflicting on our feathered friends.

The Anti-Cruelty society is willing to loan these humane traps, if after an investigation, they find that the pigeons are a menace. BERTHA RUETER.

FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

WE MUST REPEAT: WATCH YOUR STEP!

Chicago, Feb. 21.—I read your reply to a man who had broken his arm from falling on an unshoveled sidewalk that he should have watched his step, because he had stated no facts as to any carelessness on the part of the property owner and that failure to remove natural ice and snow is not legally regarded as carelessness on the part of the owner. 1. Your office boy must have answered his inquiry. Why wasn't he told that if [2] the sidewalk was broken he can collect? 3. Why doesn't the city slap a stiff fine on these lazy, indifferent, careless property owners? 4. Why doesn't the city make them carry accident insurance; also all automobile drivers? It is easy to say "Watch your step." Who doesn't? I suppose you are lucky enough to have a car and don't have to use the sidewalk much.

J. B.

1. We are sorry if the answer displeased you.
2. No such facts were stated.
3. The city did pass such an ordinance years ago and it was held invalid.
4. The city has no power to compel persons to carry insurance.

'Babies' Employe

[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

O. M. Nichols, Kansas City cafe owner, "babying" an employee by minding her baby, Linda Fay Schulman.

Kansas City, Feb. 24 (AP).—O. M. Nichols, lunchroom proprietor, punched the cash register with one hand and on the other arm he held a 10 month old girl.

"It's all part of the bargain," he explained.

Mrs. Fern Schulman promised to work for him if some one would take care of the baby. So Nichols volunteered.

CLEANERS GET ORDER TO POST BASIC PRICES

Owners of cleaning, dyeing, and pressing establishments received a general order from the office of price administration yesterday to post their 12 basic lowest prices in accordance with national OPA order No. 42, effective Jan. 15.

Rae E. Walters, regional administrator of OPA, told cleaners that consumers had been invited to report to their local boards establishments which do not have prices posted, and that violators would have their services priced by the OPA.

Walters said that a survey showed 22 per cent of establishments in the region and more than one-third of those in Chicago had not posted prices. The order to cleaners and dyers is the first made to businesses other than those selling foods.

BUSINESS HELP FOR VETERANS IS CHARTED BY OPA

The office of price administration is setting up a veterans' program thru which it hopes to cut red tape and handle some of the returning soldiers' and sailors' problems in hours or days, instead of the weeks or months it takes to get final answers to OPA questions now, OPA officials disclosed yesterday.

Included in the program is a proposed point committee on which will be representatives of other agencies controlling man power, materials, wages, hauling equipment, and other goods or services the veterans may need, altho no official move has been made on this phase.

Problems of Returning Veterans.

Under present OPA regulations, returning veterans can get fairly quick action from local boards when they want allocations and points for starting up most small businesses, including restaurants, groceries, meat markets, and shoe stores, and when taking over going gasoline stations, but find themselves stalled on getting gasoline rations as salesmen, or for their own salesmen.

They also run into a brick wall when applying for allotments to start up bakeries, ice cream factories, bottling works, tire dealerships, and candy, jam and jelly, or salad dressing factories. The OPA has not issued a permit for a new industrial user of sugar since rationing began, Rae E. Walters, regional OPA administrator, said.

Allotments Virtually Franchises.

"A sugar allocation, or one for fats and oils for making food products, is virtually a franchise," an OPA official said. "Sugar allocations are only 70 to 80 per cent of 1941 base period use, but beverages, bakery goods, and candy are being produced at 50 to 100 per cent above the old quantities thru use of new formulas and processes.

"We want to give every veteran the best break possible, but there will have to be safeguards, and all applications will be processed by specially trained experts."

New regulations are being written in Washington, D. C., and will be effective by April 1, it was learned. They provide special preferences for veterans, final approvals of applications by local and district offices, and special handling methods for speeding up decisions. A veterans' adviser has been appointed for each district office, himself a war veteran, and a veterans' coordinator in each regional office.

JOYCE REYNOLDS.

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 24 (AP).—Domestic life is more important than a career to Joyce Reynolds—at least right now. That's what she told Warner Brothers, and the studio has agreed to cancel her contract which had four years to run. She plans to join her husband, Marine Lt. Robert Lewis, at Quantico, Va., next week. They were married Jan. 11. The 20 year old actress recently attained stardom in "Janie." Production plans for a sequel, "Janie Gets Married," have been canceled, the studio said.

ARMY OFFICER'S BODY IS FOUND IN PARK LAGOON

Three boys fishing from some old piling in the lagoon in Lincoln park at Belden av. yesterday found the body of 2d Lt. Eugene Raichel, 20, of 2644 N. Avers av., which apparently had been in the water several weeks.

Park Policeman Fred J. McDonald removed the body and called military police. They took it to Gardiner General hospital to determine the manner of death. They said no marks of violence were observed.

The boys who first saw the body were Peter Corsello, 9, of 1449 Sedgwick st.; Vincent Abbaro, 12, of 1459 Sedgwick st., and Cary Burch, 11, of 1503 Sedgwick st.

Military policemen said Raichel had been a patient in Schick General hospital, Clinton, Ia., and had left there last Dec. 21.

KELLY PROMISES TO ASSIST WMC IN CAFE CURFEW

Four Ways of Punishing Violators Listed.

said a definite ruling on the point would have to await the return of W. H. Spencer, regional WMC director.

"However," he added, "the order is based on entertainment. It would appear that the sale of bottled liquor, provided no entertainment is involved, would not fall under the provisions of the order."

Under the heading "reports of violations," the WMC outlined this procedure:

"Area directors [of WMC] should obtain the assistance of the mayor or other chief executive officer of each municipality. . . . Arrangements should be made for the mayor . . . to submit reports of violations to the area director. The area director should not act upon reports of violations received from any other source. . . ."

Violator Can Appeal.

Area directors are charged with determining whether violations reported by the mayor have been willful. If the director holds the offender guilty he may apply the sanctions aimed to disable the operator's business. The violator is given the right of appeal under a previous WMC regulation.

Night clubs were jammed last night for a sunrise session of revelry. The class of places that takes reservations reported a sellout before the dinner hour. Rowdier spots along N. Clark st. and W. Madison st. let in the crowds as long as there was room to swing the front door open and the overflow filled the taverns.

Among the tonier places, the Chez Paree reported a sellout four days in advance of the last pre-curfew night and the Boulevard room in the Stevens hotel reserved its last table Wednesday. All the other downtown hotels and entertainment places made plans for an all night operation on the scale of New Year's eve.

Big Reservations Tonight.

Reservations also are heavy for tonight but crowds customarily leave early on Sundays [headache night] in preparation for a return to work Monday.

While proprietors of places put under the curfew were generally of a mind to comply, many of them questioned the need of such a measure. Some of them predicted that it would have a vicious effect in making an opportunity for "beer flats" and other forms of cheating.

One definite movement to save the situation for the cafes was under way on the part of Milton T. Raynor, representative of the Chicago Cafe Owners' association, who said he would leave today for Washington to talk with Byrnes.

N. Y. PLAY SPOTS AWAIT MAYOR'S RULE ON CLOSING

Ring with Gayety in Curfew Boom.

New York, Feb. 24 (AP).—With one eye on the city hall and the other on Washington, New York's 12,000 amusement places rang with 11th hour gayety tonight, little knowing when the midnight curfew would toll for them.

Cash registers clanged overtime and the return of the speakeasy was predicted freely as the 100 million dollar amusement industry awaited word from Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia.

The mayor, pondering the new regulations, repeated that the "status quo"—4 a. m. closing weekdays, 3 a. m. Sundays—would continue until he made an official announcement, probably tomorrow.

Promised "Ample Notice."

How La Guardia could keep his promise that there would be "ample notice" remained unexplained. "Ample notice" means two weeks in show business.

The mayor disclosed that military leaders were concerned about the curfew when he said, following a conference with Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine, that New York faced "a dangerous and serious situation."

"I am particularly concerned about the opening of speakeasies, which we must prevent," he added. "Military and naval officials here are also fearful about such a prospect."

Warn of Crime Increase.

A resolution declaring that "crime will be on the increase and speakeasies will flourish" under the curfew was adopted by the executive board of the United Restaurant Liquor Dealers of Manhattan, which claims 1,500 members.

La Guardia was scheduled to see Mrs. Anna M. Rosenberg, regional WMC director, tomorrow before promulgating New York's enforcement rules.

Continue Lewd Behavior Case Against Ex-Broker

A charge of lewd behavior against Joseph T. Bowen Jr., 56, a former insurance broker, was continued yesterday until March 16 to allow Judge George B. Weiss in Boys court to make a personal investigation. Bowen, son of Louise de Koven Bowen, well known social worker and former president of Hull House, was seized in the Clark theater on Friday after he allegedly made indecent advances to Juvenile Officer Edward Kirby. Bowen, who is retired, lives at 434 N. Washington rd., Lake Forest.

ROSENMAN FOILS BIDDLE-BYRNES PLOT FOR EXILE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 24.—Samuel I. [Sammy the Rose] Rosenman, President Roosevelt's special counsel and ghost writer, has thwarted the combined efforts of Atty. Gen. Biddle and War Mobilization Director Byrnes to exile him from the White House, it was learned today.

Samuel I. Rosenman.

The former New York jurist was sent abroad about three weeks ago purportedly to study allied credit needs, but the capital was aware that his departure was forced by the two high officials with whom he had been feuding.

Today Byrnes and Biddle were reported stunned by authoritative reports that the man they thought they had disposed of for several months is on his way home with the President, who is returning from the Crimea conference.

Outwits Opponents.

Rosenman outmaneuvered his opponents reportedly by following strategy laid down by Supreme Court Justice Frankfurter, who regards Rosenman as the keystone of his highly involved scheme to crown the Frankfurter career by becoming the first chief justice of the international court to be set up under the Dumbarton Oaks program. Reports of Frankfurter's plans brought demands for his impeachment in the house last week.

Biddle has confided to intimates he sought to remove Rosenman from the White House because the latter was seeking to become solicitor general for the purpose of short circuiting Biddle, probably succeeding to the cabinet post and ultimately obtaining a seat on the Supreme court.

Byrnes confided to intimates that he and Rosenman clashed because the latter overrode his plans by reaching the President's ear after Byrnes and because Rosenman attempted to run Byrnes' office by coming to him with purported directions from the President which were in reality his own.

Six Months Trip Planned.

At the insistence of both Byrnes and Biddle, who were not working in concert but were pursuing their feuds with Rosenman independently, the President sent Rosenman to Europe. The two officials understood Rosenman was to be away from the White House at least six months if not longer. They hoped during his absence to persuade the President to give Rosenman similar assignments indefinitely.

However, Rosenman reportedly succeeded in having any mention of time cut out of his instructions, which were completely disclosed today for the first time in the following letter to the former judge signed by the President as "Franklin D."

"In addition to your position as special counsel to the President, I want you to undertake a mission to the United Kingdom, France, Belgium, and the Netherlands as my personal representative with the rank of minister.

Byrnes Came Back First.

"On this mission I want you to examine and report to me steps to be taken in the joint interests of our country and their fighting allies in winning the war, with respect to the flow of vital supplies, other than finished munitions, to these countries.

"I would also like you to ascertain what the needs of these countries will be for supplies and services to repair the destruction and devastation of the war and to build some of the economic foundations of the peace, in terms of possible credits or other financial assistance which may be made available by this country by means already at hand or thru recommendations for appropriate legislation."

Meets the President.

When the President was at Cairo, Rosenman was in England. Byrnes accompanied the President to Cairo and was reportedly confident he had sidetracked "Sammy the Rose." Byrnes flew home immediately after the conference, being the first to return.

As Mr. Roosevelt began his leisurely return, Rosenman flew to Italy, which country was not on the itinerary in his instructions. From Italy, it was reported, he messaged the President that he had much valuable material to report—he had been abroad but a few days—and that he also wanted to be with his chief to help him prepare any report he might deliver to the nation on the Crimea conference on his return. In the past, Mr. Roosevelt has adressed the nation on conferences in Europe and the Pacific.

In response to his request Rosenman was given the permission he asked to make his report in person and then was invited to return with the President, Byrnes and Biddle learned. The mission on which he was dispatched to Europe has evidently been forgotten, it was said here.

NEW MISSOURI CONSTITUTION IS UP TUESDAY

Special Election Set on Substitute Charter.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 24.—Missouri will vote on a proposed new state constitution at a special election Tuesday. The document was written by a constitutional convention of 83 delegates, who met Sept. 21, 1943, and worked one year at the task. A majority vote is necessary for approval.

The present constitution dates to 1875. It has been amended 61 times until it is almost 37,000 words in length. The new document contains some 11,000 fewer words. It is submitted as an entirely new constitution, instead of a series of amendments because, the address of the convention states, so many changes have been voted into the present basic law that it no longer possesses a definite organization.

No Radical Changes.

Advocates of the new document declare it contains nothing radical. Some of its more important features have existed in other states for years. Reorganization of the executive department is one important change written into the proposed constitution. More than 70 bureaus and boards are to be assigned by the governor to the department to which their duties properly belong. They are to be grouped under 10 departments with the legislature being empowered to create five others by law.

In some other states, including Illinois, such reorganization has been done through statutes passed by the general assembly. In Illinois, for example, the 1917 civil administrative code creating 12 departments, was regarded by the late Gov. Frank O. Lowden as the great accomplishment of his administration. Similarly, the proposed new constitution sets up a merit system in state hospitals and penal institutions, where Illinois some 40 years ago enacted a state civil service law.

One criticism of Missouri's present constitution it that it has become cluttered with too many things that might be covered by statutory law instead of being written into the basic law. This is ascribed to the easy amending clause, under which a majority of the members elected to each house may propose an amendment and a majority of the votes at the subsequent election is sufficient for adoption.

Has 61 Amendments.

As against the 61 constitutional amendments Missouri has made since 1875, Illinois, with a more stringent amending clause, has adopted only seven since 1870. Illinois voted for a constitutional convention in 1918 and in 1922 rejected the proposed constitution from this body, 83 per cent of the vote being cast against it. In 1934, a proposal for a constitutional convention failed of approval by Illinois voters.

Missouri's proposed new basic law is supported by a great array of organizations, the metropolitan newspapers, professional groups, leaders in both parties and other groups. Opponents have raised the cry of new and higher taxes. The small loan interests have been stirred by a provision that all rates of interest fixed by law shall be applicable to all lenders without regard to the classification of their business. The campaign at times has been somewhat vehement. Among the legislators there is some opposition.

The initiative and referendum is retained. This has aided pressure groups in getting amendments into the constitution and tinkering with the basic law.

Property Classified.

Classification of property for tax purposes is in the proposed document. The classes are real property, tangible personal property and intangible personal property such as stocks and bonds. Different tax rates may be applied to each class. Intangibles will be taxed on the basis of income yield, not to exceed 8 per cent thereof. The state is to levy and collect this tax and turn the proceeds back to the local governments.

The path to consolidation of counties is opened. Any county with more than 85,000 population may draft a charter for its own government in conformity with a scheme set forth in the document. Authority is given contiguous counties, up to 10, to combine in performing any common service such as operating hospitals, road machinery, airports and almshouses. They may join in the common employment of any county officer. The scheme is expected to reduce cost of government in smaller counties.

Abolishes Justices.

Justices of the peace are to be replaced by magistrates' courts, with at least one magistrate to a county. These must be lawyers; the fee system is abolished.

In cities of more than 10,000 population [there are 22 of these], voters may adopt their own charters. At present such home rule is given only to St. Louis and Kansas City.

The Missouri tradition of separate schools for negro and white children remains in the constitution, with a proviso excepting cases otherwise provided by law. This gives the legislature power to drop the dividing line if it desires, later.

The constitutional convention was voted for by the people at the 1942 election. In Missouri that question must be submitted every 20 years. It is estimated that the convention cost about $1,000,000 all told, including $191,000 for printing half a million copies of the proposed new basic law and a summary of the change it makes. If it is adopted Tuesday, the state legislators figure that revision of the state statutes to make them conform, may keep the assembly busy for two years or so.

Slugged, Robbed in Hotel on Auto Purchasing Call

David Levin, 2135 S. Michigan av., sales manager of the American Auto Sales corporation, 2419 S. Michigan av., told police yesterday he was slugged and robbed of $520 in a hotel at 1702 N. La Salle st. by a man who gave his name as "M. G. Probar," and telephoned Levin he had a car to sell. The hotel said no one named Probar was registered.

CREDITS R. O. T. C. WITH BIG PART IN U. S. WAR GAINS

BY EDWARD BARRY.

The part which former members of the reserve officers' training corps are playing in the present war was stressed last night by Maj. Gen. Russel B. Reynolds, commanding general of the 6th service command, in Medinah temple before 3,500 R. O. T. C. cadets who were guests of the Chicago Theater of the Air for the production of the Lehar operetta, "Gypsy Love."

"Our success in battle," Gen. Reynolds said, "is based in many cases on the leadership developed in the reserve officers' training corps between World War I. and World War II."

Navy Also Aided.

The good effects of R. O. T. C. training have not been confined to the army only, he asserted. Both the army basic training camps and the navy boot training stations owe a part of their success in turning out vast numbers of fighting men to the presence in both types of establishments of recruits who formerly had been R. O. T. C. members.

"THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and Col. Robert R. McCormick have contributed greatly to the attainment of this success," Gen. Reynolds said. "The annual award of medals in nearly 80 schools and the regular review of 10,000 cadets, to which I am looking forward this spring, are both the means of increasing the interest of the cadets and their families and the competition of both individuals and schools."

School Board Coöperation Noted.

He called the coöperation of the board of education, under the leadership of President McCahey and Superintendent Johnson, "gratifying," and pointed out that the American Legion always has been a supporter of the R. O. T. C.

Lt. Col. Oscar N. Taylor, professor of military science and tactics in the Chicago public schools, praised the instructors on his staff whose patience and industry have contributed so importantly to the success of the R. O. T. C. program.

"Gypsy Love" Is Operetta.

"Gypsy Love," whose story is based on the complications which ensue when a Romanian noblewoman, on the eve of her marirage, decides to throw up the whole project and follow a gypsy violinist, was produced in view of the audience and broadcast over W-G-N and the Mutual network.

Henry Weber conducted and the singing roles were taken by Marion Claire, Gilbert Russell, and Bruce Foote. The W-G-N orchestra and chorus assisted. Dramatic leads were the charge ofSondra Gair, Ed Cooper, and William Everett. Col. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, spoke on the origins of the Republic. Text of his talk is on the editorial page.

The Chicago Theater of the Air's broadcast of "Mignon" at 9 p. m. next Saturday will originate from W-G-N's main studio instead of from the Medinah temple, as announced on today's radio page. The Theater of the Air shows will return to the Medinah auditorium March 17.

OFFER BY MILLS PUNCTURES WMC JOB DRAFT EDICT

Free Labor Can Do Work, U. S. Is Told.

New Bedford, Mass., Feb. 24 [Special].—The "temporarily unsuccessful" but determined attempt of the war man power commission to enforce a labor draft in the textile industry here brought these developments tonight:

1. One of the 10 fine goods mills affected by the labor draft offered to produce in its own plant enough tire cord fabric to break the tire bottleneck upon which WMC has based the necessity for its drastic job transfer orders.

2. Commissioner McNutt of the WMC announced establishment of special appeals procedure for 75 textile workers who today filed appeals with the United States employment service from orders to exchange their jobs in the fine goods mills of this city for employment in tire cord plants here.

[This special procedure, it was said, will shorten by many weeks the time ordinarily required for final disposition of such appeals, and may pave the way to enforcement of the draft orders by the middle of next week.]

Governor Calls Meeting.

3. Gov. Tobin set 12:30 p. m. Monday for a meeting in the executive office in Boston with a committee of New Bedford labor leaders, industrial representatives, and public officials appealing to him to intercede with the WMC to halt the labor draft.

The offer to produce tire cord fabric in sufficient quantity to end the current bottleneck came from the Kilburn Mills, now engaged in manufacturing cotton yarn. George W. Knowles, president, said his plant can and will produce 50,000 pounds of yarn for this fabric a week if the government wants it.

Beg Your Pardon

A Washington dispatch in THE TRIBUNE of Feb. 8 quoted Deputy Administrator Vincent D. Nicholson of the Rural Electrification administration as saying REA had lent $100,000 to extend the benefits of electricity to the island of Ocracoke, off the coast of North Carolina. The Rev. William R. Dixon of the United Methodist church of Ocracoke has written THE TRIBUNE that the loan was only $46,000. Examination of the official transcript of the senate agriculture committee, before which Nicholson discussed the Ocracoke project, reveals that he said the loan was "considerably less than $100,000. THE TRIBUNE was in error.

Knowles said the only conditions attached to his offer are that his mill be allowed to keep enough of its present skilled help to make the yarn and that the government give this tire yarn work precedence over other war orders in that plant and "pay us enough to cover our costs and a minimum profit."

No Desire for Controversy.

Kilburn mills has no desire to become mixed up in any controversy but we are willing and anxious to do all we can to promote the effective prosecution of the war," Knowles said.

McNutt took a hand in the explosive situation after officials of the CIO Textile Workers of America said appeals of the 75 skilled workers barred from their jobs in the fine goods mills would be prosecuted in all cases thru regular channels.

This would ordinarily mean a succession of hearings before local, regional, and national appeal panels and would have delayed disposition of the cases beyond March 5, when the federal court at Boston will hear arguments on the textile union's demand for an injunction against WMC.

Workers who gave notice of appeal today to the United States employment service received letters to their employers stating they could remain on their present jobs until the appeals are acted on.

McNutt announced his plan to shorten the time required for appeals in a wire to David Nagle, acting regional WMC director. He said he has named a special commission to hear the appeals and that a special appeal panel will convene Tuesday at 1:30 p. m. in New Bedford to hear all testimony. McNutt said he will personally rule on each case.

The workers who are appealing had been ordered to accept jobs with the Fisk and Firestone tire cord plants here. These plants are said to produce 34 per cent of the tire cord fabric for all the allied nations and their inability to secure workers was blamed by the army procurement service for a bottleneck in tire production.

The Firestone plant said today its employment needs are 173 skilled workers and 118 unskilled workers. At the Fisk plant it was said 57 skilled and 29 unskilled workers are needed. So far only 32 textile workers have bowed to the WMC "change jobs" order.

John C. Nash, district director for the war production board, said army procurement officials believe the Kilburn mills offer must be studied.

GOLDEN GLOVERS SET FOR THREE BIG NIGHTS

N. U. BEATS ILLINOIS, 57-45; IOWA, OHIO STATE WIN

WILDCATS END ILLINI HOPE OF BIG NINE TITLE

BY WILFRID SMITH.

The Northwestern Wildcats closed their Western conference basketball campaign last night in the Stadium with a convincing 57 to 45 victory over Illinois, long time athletic rival, which knocked the Illini from the Big Nine race. Illinois now has only a mathematical chance of tying Iowa for second place if the Hawkeyes lose their remaining two games while Illinois wins two.

Ohio State, which finished its season last night with victory over Indiana, has won 10 games and lost two. Illinois has three defeats and ends its season with Indiana and Iowa away from home. Thus the Buckeyes remain the only threat to Iowa, currently the conference leader.

Demons Win, 65-49.

De Paul defeated Western Kentucky Teachers in the second game, 65 to 49, and thus finished its season with 16 victories and two defeats. George Mikan, who scored 30 points, broke his own stadium record of 27 points and tied his mark set against the same team this year in the game in Louisville.

Northwestern got away to an early lead but Illinois tied the score at 5 and 7 points and at the end of 8 minutes of the first half, the Illini had an 11 to 10 lead, the last time, however, they were ahead, as Benny Schadler's long throw sent the Wildcats back in front.

Incidentally, Max Morris proved once again for the 15,862 fans that he is a topflight player as he shoved 20 points thru the loop to finish his 12 conference games with a total of 189 points and the apparent certainty of the individual scoring title for the season.

Max Starts with Three.

Morris opened Northwestern's scoring with three points and he finished the half with 10, but Max had no scoring share in the spurt in the closing minutes of the half which proved sufficient eventually to whip the Illini. Schadler's long shot was followed by Phil Lofgren's side shot, another goal by Schadler, and then a goal by John Rothrock, Wildcat guard starting in place of Frank Wright.

Northwestern led, 18 to 11, and, while Illinois got the next goal on Walton Kirk's shot from in front, Morris matched it and, after Jake Burmaster scored for Illinois, Morris collected five points and Fred Johnson finished the tabulation for the period. Northwestern led 25 to 14.

Illini Away Off Form.

This 11 point lead was the fulcrum Northwestern used to gain its fourth victory in 12 games. Two defeats, however, were in overtime games.

Illinois was far from form displayed in the Stadium earlier in the season but, regardless, Northwestern could not be denied credit for its triumph. Duane Sickels, who hadn't had a starting assignment in several weeks, got 11 points, Capt. Schadler hit six field goals and a penalty shot and Lofgren contributed four field goals. The percentage of accuracy was exceptional.

With 10 minutes to play in the second half, Northwestern still led, 42 to 26, and, while Illinois cut the margin to seven points at 49 to 42 with four minutes to play, Sickels got the next goal and Northwestern finished at top speed to reëstablish its 12 point margin. Jack Burmaster and Howie Judson, with four field goals each, paced Illinois' assault.

This Was a Breeze.

De Paul had no difficulty with the Kentucky squad and after the score was tied at 12 points, raced to a 23 to 12 lead and finished the half 42 to 24.

De Paul used 14 players and the Hilltoppers outplayed the Demon substitutes in the last 10 minutes.

HAWKEYES ROUT BADGERS FOR 9TH VICTORY, 68-38

Madison, Wis., Feb. 24 [Special].—Iowa's championship gait in the Big Nine basketball race continued unabated tonight when it routed Wisconsin, 68 to 38. It was the Hawkeyes' ninth victory in 10 games and they retained their half game lead on Ohio State. All that stands in the path of Iowa and the championship are games with Minnesota and Illinois next week.

Murray Wier led the Iowa 24 goal assault with seven baskets and four free throws. A point behind him was Clay Wilkinson, who had six from the field and five from the free throw line for 17 points.

Iowa led at the end of the half, 36 to 15. Wier sparked the conference leaders' scoring assault in the second half with 15 of his 18 points. Wisconsin, in trying to stop the Hawkeyes' attack, frequently fouled and Iowa picked up 20 points at the free throw line. Lineup:

BUCKEYES WIN, 85-52

Columbus, O., Feb. 24 [Special].—Ohio State ended its 1944-'45 basketball season tonight, defeating Indiana, 85 to 52, to bring its Western conference standing for the season to 10 victories in 12 starts.

The Buckeyes' height advantage, superior ball handling, and smooth working attack proved too great an obstacle for the Hoosiers to overcome. The score assumed such one-sided proportions that Coach Harold G. Olsen employed his second and third teams for almost a third of the game, 14 players seeing action.

Risen Scores 12 Field Goals.

The game early resolved itself into a contest between individual players with Center Arnold Risen of Ohio State scoring 12 field goals and his teammate, Don Grate, tallying 10 field goals and a free throw. Jack Herron who alternated at guard and forward for Indiana collected nine field goals and a free throw for a total of 19 points.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 24 (AP).—Efforts of Chicago's Blackhawks to increase their chances for a Stanley cup play-off berth encountered a definite detour tonight when the Detroit Red Wings dealt them a 4 to 2 defeat before 10,779 fans. It was the 11th straight loss for Chicago on Detroit ice. The two teams will meet again tomorrow night in Chicago.

The Red Wings got away to a 3 to 0 lead in the first period but waited until 6½ minutes before the game closed to turn in their final score, Center Murray Armstrong tallying with an eight foot backhand shot off Eddy Bruneteau's assist.

Howe Nears Stewart's Record.

Defenseman Hal Jackson started things off for Detroit in the opening period, hammering in a 55 foot shot for his fourth goal of the season and first in two months.

Syd Howe, pulling within two points of Nels Stewart's all-time league scoring record of 514 points in 15 seasons, tallied from close range four minutes later and Rookie Ted Lindsay made it 3 to 0 by poking in an angle shot, following up Eddy Brunteau's long one that bounced off a post.

Hawks Score in Second Period.

The Blackhawks, who went 19 minutes before giving Harry Lumley a save in the Detroit nets, counted their first goal after 5½ minutes of the second period, Right Wing Pete Horeck faking the goalee out of position to score. Defenseman Bill [Red] Mitchell slammed a 30 footer under Lumley to shave the Red Wing lead to a 3 to 2 after less than two minutes of the last period but then Armstrong came thru with his clincher.

The game was the 22d successive regular season contest for the Hawks in Detroit without a victory.

DE KALB DEFEATS CARBONDALE FOR CROWN, 42 TO 40

De Kalb Teachers last night won the basketball championship of the Illinois Intercollegiate Athletic conference, defeating Carbondale Teachers, 42 to 40, in De Kalb.

The result gave De Kalb a record of seven victories and one defeat in league play and a season's mark of 14 triumphs in 15 starts.

CAMBRIDGE WINS OVER OXFORD IN RACE ON THAMES

HENLEY, England, Feb. 24 [Reuters].—Taking the lead from the beginning in today's fourth war time university boat race, Cambridge beat off a determined Oxford burst in the last quarter mile of the course, to win by two lengths.

Finishing the one and one-third mile course in 8 minutes 17 seconds, the Cambridge eight, rowing a boat borrowed from its rivals, thus beat the favorites after winning the toss for starting position.

Snead Shoots 64 for Lead at Pensacola

Pensacola, Fla., Feb. 24 (AP). — Sammy Snead scored a second round 8 under par 64 today to replace Harold [Jug] McSpaden as leader in the $6,500 Pensacola Open Golf tournament after 36 holes of play.

Snead combined near perfect putting with his tremendous driving game to bring his two day total to 131, three strokes better than McSpaden who slipped to a 2 under par 70 after setting the pace in the first round with a 64.

Snead, seeking his fifth winter circuit victory, made 11 pars, six birdies, and got an eagle on the 508 yard 12th hole. He was on every green in par and was consistent in sinking short putts.

McSpaden, who has a half way total of 134, had 16 pars and two birdies for a 34-36—70.

Claude Harmon of Grosse Point, Mich., duplicated the 8 under par 64 registered by McSpaden yesterday and Snead today, climbing into a tie with Sam Byrd of Detroit, Mich., and Craig Wood of Mamaroneck, N. Y., for third place at 137.

Harmon missed a 20 foot putt on the 18th hole by a fraction of an inch. It would have given him a new course record of 63.

23 STATES SEND TITLE HOLDERS INTO STADIUM

Tourney of Champs Opens Tomorrow.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

The annual punch powered drive on boxing's biggest objective—the Golden Gloves Tournament of Champions—began yesterday as the nation's most brilliant young boxers arrived for the sport's premier classic, to be decided tomorrow, Tuesday, and Wednesday in Chicago Stadium.

Among the advance battalions reporting were teams from such widely separated centers as Los Angeles, Cleveland, Omaha, Port Huron, Mich., and St. Louis. Three other formidable contenders for the team trophy—Fort Worth, Nashville, and Minneapolis—will land this evening. Yesterday's arrivals were preceded on Friday by the Memphis squad.

Ringwise enthusiasts who witnessed the Chicago city finals at Marigold Gardens on Feb. 12 may have thought they saw there the ultimate in stirring programs, but tomorrow they can prepare for three thrilling sessions of battling which will match our town's best against the fistic cream of the land.

It's a Two Ring Show.

Two rings will be used for tomorrow and Tuesday night's bouts. Tomorrow will find the four lighter weight divisions making their first assault, with the four heavier classes taking over Tuesday. On Wednesday, the survivors of the first two nights' battling will argue for the 32 places in the championship finals, to be held in the same Stadium ring on the night of March 9.

The 1945 ensemble of 224 champions, drawn from 28 cities in 23 states, more than matches the standards established by its predecessors, not only in the caliber of ring craftsmanship, but also in geographical background. Thruout the three nights of the tournament, youngsters from such states as California, Louisiana, Minnesota, and Texas will be swinging gloves for the right to do their stuff in the championship finals.

Teams from Coast, South Return.

Teams representing the Los Angeles Times and the New Orleans Item, each of whom made their Golden Gloves debuts last year, are returning to the Tournament of Champions again. The lads from the Pacific coast and the south will find another job on their hands, for such perennials of the sport's No. 1 event as the Cleveland Plain Dealer, the Milwaukee Journal, the Nashville Tennessean, the Oklahoma City Daily Oklahoman, and the Minneapolis Star Journal and Tribune will be on hand to argue with them.

Against this army of out of town hopefuls, Chicago will send its eight champions. The local troupe is confronted with its traditional responsibility, that of maintaining its record of never having been shut out in the Tournament of Champions.

Record Often Endangered.

Each year that performance is endangered by the visitors' talented numbers. Hubert Hood, Chicago heavyweight, saved it with a victory in 1942. Two years ago, the invaders compiled consecutive victories in the first six weight divisions before Chicagoans Reedy Evans and Walter Moore captured the 175 pound and heavyweight championships. Last year Johnny Bratton and Collins Brown were the Chicago winners.

The eight Chicagoans who will attempt to defend this performance in the fighting of tomorrow, Tuesday, and Wednesday are Flyweight Jackie Boyd, Bantamweight Joe Plummer, Featherweight Wray Carter, Lightweight Bernard Paige, Welterweight Caesar Douglas, Middleweight James Burkes, Light Heavyweight Le Roy Scales, and Heavyweight Luke Baylark.

Two Make Second Appearances.

All of the above octet demonstrated in winning the city titles that they are more than able to carry on thru the three night problem which faces them. Boyd and Baylark, the weight extremes of the local team, are making their second straight appearances as title holders. Carter and Plummer both indicated by their hard punching and boxing knowledge that they will furnish plenty of trouble in the bantamweight and featherweight divisions.

Layden Talks with ODT on Pro Football

Elmer Layden, commissioner of the National Football league, has conferred with the office of defense transportation in Washington but nothing definite resulted as far as 1945 travel planes for the league were concerned, he said yesterday.

Layden eluded reporters in Washington and the ODT office declined comment on his visit.

He said Col. J. Monroe Johnson, ODT director, had requested the conference. "Nothing definite was done," he added, "and Col. Johnson asked me to come back later."

Layden's trip followed by a few days a series of Washington conferences involving Will Harridge and Ford Frick, presidents of the American and National leagues, respectively, in which the baseball leaders pledged a 25 per cent reduction in team travel.

CLAIM RECORD FOR BAINBRIDGE SWIMMING STAR

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 24 (AP).—Joseph Verdeur of Bainbridge Naval Training center established what meet officials said was a new 200 yard world's indoor breast stroke record as the Bainbridge swimming team beat Navy, 49 to 26.

Verdeur clipped one second off the record of 2 minutes 22 seconds set by Dick Hough of Princeton in 1939, the judges said.

The Bainbridge mermen limited the midshipmen to a pair of first places as the Commodores won the 300 yard medley relay, 220 yard free style, the 200 yard breast stroke, the 440 yard free style, and the 400 yard medley relay events.

Todd Defeats Harvard Five in Final, 30-26

Todd school of Woodstock, defending champion, last night won the Private School basketball tournament in the University of Chicago fieldhouse by defeating Harvard, pre-tournament favorite, 30 to 26, in the final game.

In the play-off for third place, Concordia defeated University High, 38 to 28, after leading, 20 to 16, at the half.

The Todd victory over Harvard, which won the league championship in season play, came after the Woodstock five rallied in the second half to overcome a 14 to 17 deficit at the half.

Todd held the lead at the end of the first quarter, 9 to 7, but only was able to register five points to Harvard's ten in the second period. An 11 point spurt in the third period gave Todd a 25 to 23 lead as the quarter ended. Todd scored five points and Harvard three in the final period.

Two Share Scoring Honors.

Bill Gothard and Len De Michele, Todd's forwards, shared scoring honors for the victors as each collected nine points. Jerry Neff, leading scorer in the league, led both teams as he made 11 points for Harvard.

In the game for third place, Roman Valleskey scored 12 points and Jim Luedtke 11 for the winners. Lineup:

BY DAVID CONDON.

The goals of Indiana prep basketball teams still remaining in competition for the state title were raised toward the regional meets to be played at 16 points thruout the state next Saturday as sectional tournament champions were crowned last night after three days of play.

In South Bend, South Bend Riley defeated South Bend Washington, 45 to 24, before a crowd of 3,700 in South Bend Adams High school gymnasium to replace Adams as the sectional champions. It was the first sectional title since 1940 for Riley which led all the way, holding a 29 to 11 advantage at the half. Bob Whitmer, with 17 points, paced the Riley offense.

Second Half Drive Wins.

Hammond defeated East Gary, 57 to 40, in the Hammond district, by putting on a second half drive after holding a scant two point lead, 26 to 24, at half time. Ed Dawson of Hammond collected 15 points, while Jim Fabian of Easty Gary led all scorers with a total of 19.

Hammond will play in the Hammond regional meet. Others scheduled to play in this regional are Gary Emerson and Michigan City, which won their district meets.

Gary Emerson had little difficulty in routing Kouts, 60 to 14, in the finals of the Gary tournament. Emerson held a 20 point advantage at the half after taking the lead at the start of the game. Kouts had defeated Gary Tolleston, 40 to 35, in the semi-final contest, while Emerson squeezed by Gary Horace Mann, 37 to 35, in afternoon play.

Michigan City Wins.

La Porte, making a bid to retain its title in its own district, was defeated by Michigan City, 44 to 33. The Michigan City quintet used a second half spurt to clinch the game, after leading 22 to 21 at the end of two quarters.

North Side of Fort Wayne defeated South Side of Fort Wayne, 30 to 28, in Fort Wayne, while Jimtown won the Elkhart district by trouncing the home team, 41 to 28. Logansport won its own meet, defeating Washington Township, 47 to 32.

NEWS FROM ARMY AND NAVY POSTS

BY FRANK MASTRO.

Fort Sheridan.

LT. Col. Fred M. Distelhorst, executive officer at this post and a former athlete at the University of Wisconsin, will be among army officers at the first of the play-off games for the Midwest Service Men's Basketball league championship between the Bakers and Cooks of Fort Sheridan and the 87th st. navy on the latter's home court Tuesday. . . . The Fort Sheridan quintet captured first place in the Northern division of the league, while the sailors won top honors in the Southern section . . . Col. Distelhorst is one of the greatest sport enthusiasts at this establishment, second only to Col. George Cushman, commanding officer, who was quite a football player and all-around athlete at Georgia Tech. . . .

Lt. Col. Distelhorst.

The Machine Records' unit gained undisputed leadership of the post basketball circuit competition by walloping the post officers, 39 to 31, in a second round game here. . . . The Machine players were paced by Phil Waggoner of Naperville, former student at the University of Illinois, who scored 15 of his team's points. . . . In a subsequent contest the Machines defeated the Post Medics, 47 to 16, to remain unbeaten. . . . Bob Evans, who once played baseball for Birmingham of the Southern association, was high individual scorer for the Machines in that success as a result of making 20 points. . . . The Machines need only one more victory at the expense of the Post Security squad Tuesday night to clinch the second round title. . . . A triumph will give them the right to challenge the Security quintet, first half champion, for the league championship early next month.

Gardiner General Hospital.

PVT. ARTHUR WARNER was crowned table tennis champion of the Gardiner General hospital staff on Thursday. . . . Winner of the enlisted men's tournament without the loss of a game, he engaged Capt. Edward Lake, officers' title holder, winning a four set battle, 21-11, 21-14, 15-21, 21-18. . . . The doubles title went to Sgt. Lawrence Quigley and Corp. William Horn, who rallied to defeat Lt. Col. J. J. Cordonnier and Capt. Lake, 15-21, 15-21, 21-17, 21-11, 21-16. . . . Lt. Larry Cadogan, athletic officer, is searching for boxing talent to compete in the 6th service command championships at Fort Sheridan March 17. . . . Under the direction of Staff Sgt. Art Redker, the hospital's pocket billiard tournament will start March 5. . . . The victor will qualify for the 6th service command meet March 31 at the Chicago Service Men's center, 176 W. Washington st. . . . Corp. Ray Krzoska, player coach, Friday reassembled the Gardiner basketball team for play in the service command elimination.

Great Lakes.

WALTER LAUTENBACH, former University of Wisconsin basketball star, made 29 points to help the 21st Regiment conquer Physical Training, 75 to 50, a success which gained for his team the championship of this naval center. . . . Claude [Buddy] Young of Chicago's Wendell Phillips and University of Illinois football and track fame, will seek a berth on the Great Lakes football team if he's still stationed here next season. . . . The Chicago Greenskeepers' association is building a pitch and putt course at nearby Great Lakes hospital for the use of patients as part of next summer's rehabilitation program. . . . No. 1 patients will be assigned to play golf at Shore Acres, 18 hole course adjoining the hospital grounds.

BORDER TRACKS IN CANADA SEE BANNER SEASON

TORONTO Feb. 24 (AP).—Canada's horse racing season opens at Woodbine Park in Toronto Saturday, May 19.

There has been no formal decision about racing and racing circles do not anticipate that one will be made. There is no government department in charge of the sport, the only control being that exercised over betting by the department of agriculture.

Racing men expect one of the most successful seasons in years at some parks, particularly those at Fort Erie and Stamford Park at Niagara Falls. They are expected to draw more than their usual numbers of fans from nearby American cities.

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 24 [AP].—Staving off two last half rallies, Kansas State defeated Nebraska, 55 to 47, in the Cornhuskers' season's basketball final game tonight.

ROWLAND CITES NEED FOR NEW BASEBALL PACT

Denies Coast League Fears Invasions.

BY EDWARD PRELL.

The Pacific Coast league is not apprehensive of any inroads on its rich territory by the majors, but it will favor a new protective measure guarding against such a possibility when the minor leagues' committee to revise the major-minor agreement meets tomorrow in Chicago.

This was the view of Clarence [Pants] Rowland, president of the Pacific Coast league and a member of the three-man executive board, who arrived yesterday from Los Angeles.

"No, we're not scared," he added, "because we're confident that in a few years the Pacific Coast league will gain recognition as a third major league. The tremendous growth on the west coast will continue after the war. This isn't a chamber of commerce talk—remember I'm an old midwesterner—but the coast is the great sports area in the country.

"Everything points toward a continuous growth out there. It has the climate, it has cheap electricity and industry can work 24 hours a day. Many among the hundreds of thousands of boys who have seen California for the first time will make their home there after the war."

Declares Present Pact Outmoded.

Rowland, manager of the world champion White Sox of 1919 and later associated with the Cubs in various capacities, believes many phases of the major-minor agreement which expires in January, 1946, are outmoded.

"It's passe," he declared. "It was put in vogue before we had concrete stands and the present modern minor league structure."

Under the present major-minor agreement, a major league club may take over a minor league franchise by paying the league $5,000 and making reasonable arrangements with the owner of the affected club. Thus, under the present rule, the majors could economically go into large minor league cities of their choosing. For years there has been talk of big leagues going into such cities as Los Angeles, San Francisco, Milwaukee and Baltimore, most of it revolving around the transfer of the St. Louis Browns.

Wants Draft Price Doubled.

Rowland declined to reveal what sort of an adjustment the minor league group would seek to gain more protection from such a possibility.

The Coast league president favors doubling of the draft price from top to bottom. This is the present scale: From class A-A, $7,500; class A-1 and A, $6,000; class B, $4,000; class C, $2,500; class D, $2,000, and class D, $1,500. High minor leagues drafting players from lower minors likewise would pay double, Rowland said, in pointing out that this would be a boon to clubs in the lower classifications.

Richardson Heads Committee.

Recommendations of the committee will be subject to approval of the minor league groups at the December meetings.

Thomas H. Richardson, president of the Eastern league, is chairman of the executive committee, which also includes Dr. E. M. Wilder of Augusta, Ga., president of the inactive South Atlantic league, and Rowland.

Among those who will participate in the meeting are Billy Evans, president of the Southern association; Charles Graham, president of the San Francisco Seals of the Pacific Coast league; Leo T. Miller of the Syracuse Chiefs of the International league; Thomas F. McCaffery, president of the Albany Senators of the Eastern league, and Frank D. Lawrence, vice president of the Piedmont league. Sessions will last thru Wednesday in the Stevens hotel.

A.L. Red Book Lists 274 on Active Rolls

American leaguers now in military service almost match the number of players who shortly will start training for the 1945 baseball season. If the 248 American leaguers in uniform suddenly returned to civilian life there would be an average of 31 for each of the eight clubs. A total of 274 is listed on the league's active rolls.

These figures are revealed in the 1945 Red Book, annual tome released yesterday by its editor, Earl Hilligan, director of the league's service bureau. Since it went to press at least one player, Gene Thomas, rookie outfielder of the White Sox, has joined the colors.

The White Sox, who have not yet officially released their roster, are shown to have 36 in their 1945 lineup. Whether all of these players will report March 11 at the new training camp in Terre Haute is problematical. Included are 17 pitchers, nine of them newcomers; four catchers, 11 infielders, and four outfielders. The Sox now have 33 in service, among them such players as Luke Appling, George Dickey, Bob Kennedy, Don Kolloway, Dario Lodigiani, Ted Lyons, John Rigney, Edgar Smith, Thurman Tucker, Sam West, and Taft Wright.

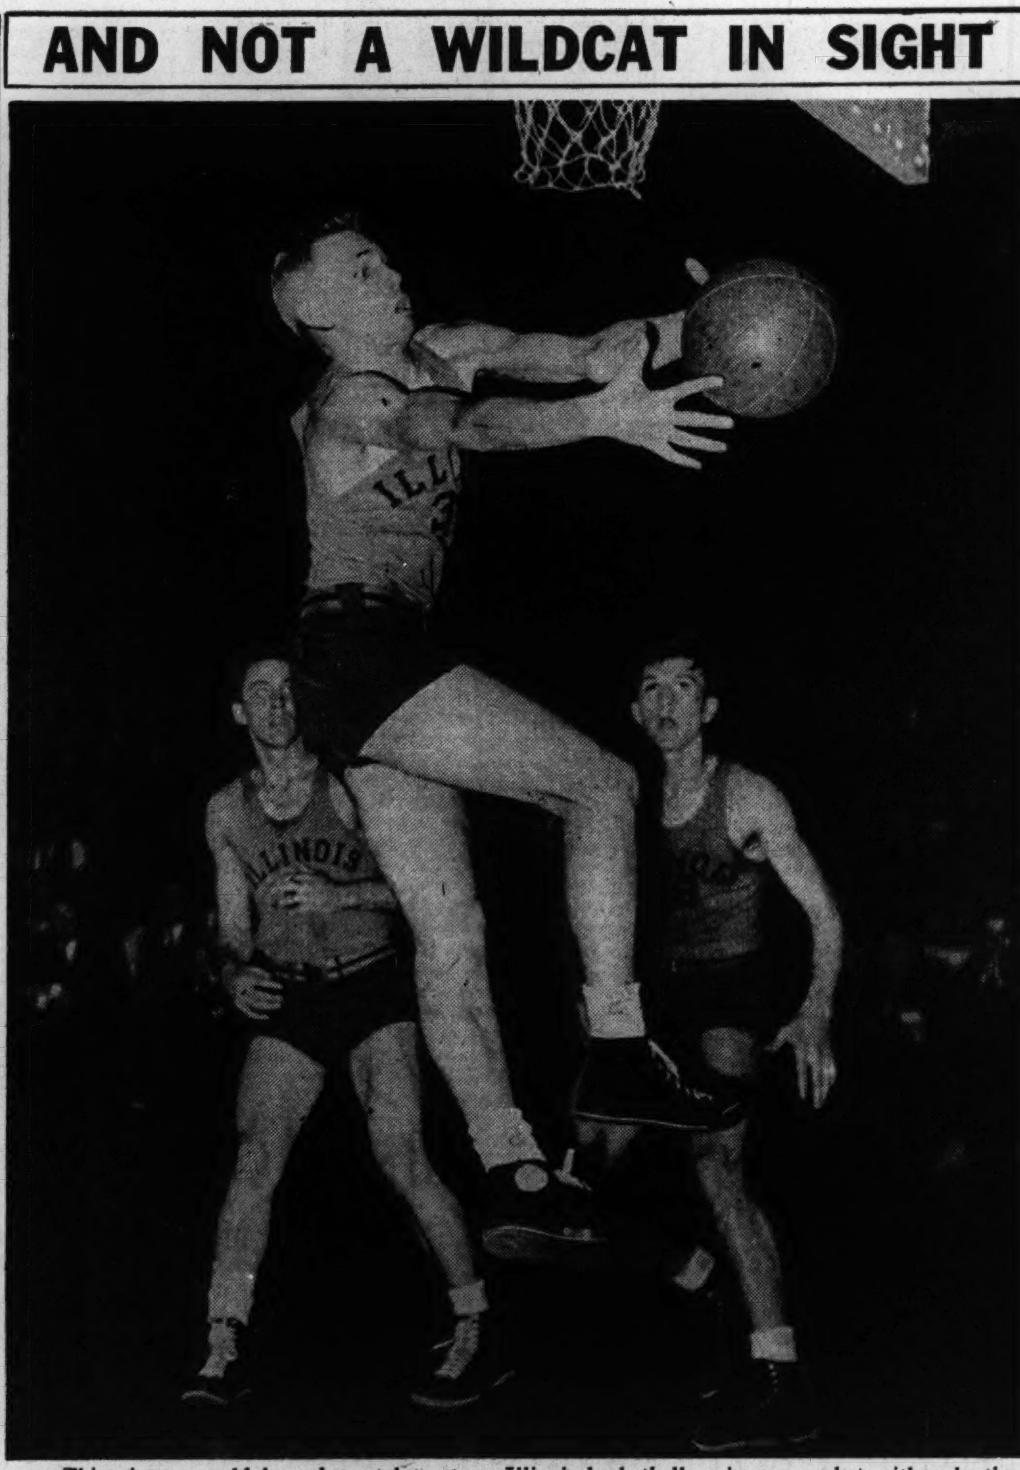
Twenty players have been inducted since the close of the 1944 season. The league has 126 4-F's, forming the experienced nucleus of its playing strength. The 1945 rosters by teams:

BOSTON—13 pitchers, 2 catchers, 6 infielders, and 8 outfielders.
CHICAGO—17 pitchers, 4 catchers, 11 infielders, and 4 outfielders.
CLEVELAND—16 pitchers, 6 catchers, 10 infielders, 7 outfielders.
DETROIT—15 pitchers, 4 catchers, 11 infielders, 4 outfielders.
NEW YORK—14 pitchers, 5 catchers, 7 infielders, 6 outfielders.
PHILADELPHIA—10 pitchers, 3 catchers, 7 infielders, 9 outfielders.
ST. LOUIS—17 pitchers, 4 catchers, 6 infielders, 7 outfielders.
WASHINGTON—15 pitchers, 5 catchers, 13 infielders, 8 outfielders.

AND NOT A WILDCAT IN SIGHT



This picture could have been taken at an Illinois basketball scrimmage, what with only three players on the scene and all of them Illini, but it actually is a shot from the first game of last night's Chicago Stadium double header, and Northwestern's Wildcats won it, 57 to 45, to knock the Illini out of the Big Nine title race. That's Jack Burmaster after the ball. His teammates are Howie Judson (left) and Walt Kersulis (right).

MAJORS PURSUE SEARCH TUESDAY FOR NEW LANDIS

Applications and qualifications for a commissioner of baseball to succeed the late K. M. Landis will be sifted to the absolute minimum Tuesday when four club presidents meet in St. Louis, Philip K. Wrigley, president of the Chicago Cubs, said last night.

Wrigley said he would meet with a committee considering applications for the post consisting of Sam Breadon of the St. Louis Cardinals, Don Barnes of the St. Louis Browns, and Alva Bradley of the Cleveland Indians.

Just a Clearing House.

"We will make no recommendation for selection of a commissioner," Wrigley said. "Our group merely does 'bird dog' work until the time when all 16 club presidents get together to select a commissioner. We merely check an individual's qualifications before his name will be presented to the general meeting."

No date has been announced for the next general major league meeting.

Wrigley said a number of applications and recommendations for a successor to Landis had been received by each of the four members of the committee.

No Power to Name Chief.

"Many of them are not qualified in any respect," he declared. "Others have qualifications. We merely will get together and determine those we believe qualified, and their names will be offered, along with their qualifications, at the next major league meeting. We have no power whatsoever to select a commissioner. That is up to the presidents of the 16 major league teams. We only will offer names of candidates we believe eligible."

34 TIGERS WILL OPEN TRAINING AT EVANSVILLE

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 24 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers, winding up preliminary arrangements for the opening of their spring baseball training camp at Evansville, Ind., March 15, today listed a tentative roster of 34 players.

Principal man power shortage appears to be in the outfield, where only four men currently are available. Absence of Left Fielder Dick Wakefield, who led the club in batting last season, is conspicuous. Wakefield rejoined the navy since the close of the 1944 season.

Indicative of the times, the roster includes two players under draft age, three over age, seven service dischargees, and 14 classified 4-F. The list includes 16 pitchers, topped by Harold Newhouser and Paul Trout, who combined to win 56 games for the Tigers last year.

GOMPERS PARK WINS IN C. A. A. U. WOMEN'S TRACK

Gompers park's junior and senior teams won the Central A. A. U. Women's indoor track meet held yesterday in McKinley park. The senior team scored 15½ points to second place Social Turner's 9½. The juniors outpointed Rosedale park, 11½ to 9.

Avondale park was third in the senior division with six points. McCormick Playground finished third in the junior division with 5 points. It was the first time the meet had been held since 1936.

Welcome News for Casters! Tribune Meet Opens Mar. 10

BY BOB BECKER.

Mr. Fisherman, better oil up your old reel and get your casting rod ready for the annual Tribune casting contest which, for the seventh consecutive year, will be held at the International Sportsmen's show opening in the Coliseum March 10. Both the show and the casting competition continue thru March 18.

War Bonds Are Prizes.

War bonds and stamps will be awarded by THE TRIBUNE to the winners of the various events on the casting program. There will be contests for fishermen who may use their regular five foot rods and black bass or muskie reels. The women will have a chance to cast by themselves in one contest for women only. The competition open to boys and girls only also has been included on the program this year.

So many men in service came to the show last year to compete for casting honors that this year the Tribune sports department is sponsoring one event solely for soldiers, sailors, marines, and coast guardsmen. This will be held at 7:30 p. m. March 15. A $25 war bond goes to the winner, with $10 in war stamps as the second place prize.

Event for Husbands, Wives.

Another new event on the casting schedule is a special event for husbands and wives only. Club casters will have evenings for their competition, too.

Every person who wishes to enter one or more of the events should send in his or her entry at once. All you have to do is fill out the blank printed today in the sports section. This entry blank is to be mailed to the Casting Editor, Chicago Tribune. There are no entry fees for any of the events. If a fisherman or a man in uniform wants to compete in the tournament, but has no casting rod or reel, William Butler, the tournament manager who will be at the pool, will loan the contestant the necessary equipment.

Casting Schedule Announced.

RAFFERTY WINS MILE IN 4:17.5 IN NEW YORK MEET

New York, Feb. 24 (AP).—Jim Rafferty's four minute, 17.5 second effort was good enough to win the mile in the American indoor track meet tonight in Madison Square Garden, scene of some of the nearest approaches to the four minute goal for the distance.

Rudy Sims, New York Pioneer club, took the lead early in the feature race and ran the first quarter in :57.4. He maintained his speed thru the second quarter and hit the half in 2:02.1. Rafferty took the lead shortly after and both runners were too tired to spurt at the finish. The last quarter was run in 1:09.

Minor Wins Hurdles.

Donn Kinsele, Royal Canadian air corps low hurdler running unattached from Hartford, Conn., spilled over the third low barrier in the 60 yard final and was helped from the track. The event went to Max Minor of army, in :07.

Donald L. Burnham, boxed on the first three curves of the 11 lap Madison Square Garden track, got out in front in time to win the 1,000 yard. He hit the tape in 2:17.7, a stride ahead of Vince Barry of the navy and two strides in front of Robert Thomason of Michigan.

Have Six False Starts.

Corp. Barney Ewell, the old Penn starter, retained his broad jump laurels with a 23 foot 11 inch leap and a few minutes later won the 60 yard dash in :06.2.

The sprint almost was a duplicate of last year's outdoor 100 meter farce when the entire field was disqualified after a series of false starts. Tonight six recalls were fired before the field got away.

Dives Into Crowd.

An amazing 300 yard anchor lap by James Pettit gave navy a triumph over New York university in the sprint medley relay. Pettit took the stick with a handicap of 12 yards, made up the difference and closed with such speed that he dived head first off the high curve at the finish and landed among the spectators. He suffered no injuries.

Elmore Harris of the Shore A. C., garnered the 600 yard title with the veteran Jim Harris two strides behind him. Harris was boxed in last place two laps from the finish but got up to shunt Herb McKenley of Boston, to third by three feet.

The Home Front

BY WILLIAM BAYLISS.

THO Chicago's industrial basketball teams still have several weeks of competition ahead of them, the championship angle in several leagues is decided. For example, there's the Clearing Industrial District league, in which it will require something like a royal edict to keep the Lindahl Foundries from winning the title, and the Columbus Park Industrial league, with the Danly Machines in the throne room and ready to lock the door against their last challenger.

The Lindahl quintet, which represents a division of the American Gear and Manufacturing Co., has a perfect season record of 27 straight victories, counting both league and independent competition. With a record like that, the Lindahls naturally are expected to beat United Air Lines in their only remaining league game. After that, amateur tournaments will occupy their attention, and their aspirations extending as high as the National A. A. U. tournament. Before qualifying for that, they'll have to compete in the Central A. A. U. meet in Peoria, March 7 to 10.

The Danly Machines, tho they cannot claim an unsmirched season record, have bowled over all opponents in the Columbus Park league and have done right well in their forays against outside opposition. Their league record shows eight victories and no defeats, compared with six and two for Bendix Aviation, the runner-up. Danly has beaten Bendix twice this season and, with only two more rounds of league competition remaining, still can lose its two contests and tie for the title. Followers of the league can see nothing but a perfect record of 10 in a row for the Machinists when the final tabulation is made.

Buda Five Wins Harvey Industrial Basket Tourney.

The Buda company basketball team won first place in the Harvey Industrial Basketball tournament, completed Thursday in Harvey, defeating the Harvey Moose Lodge, 35 to 26. General American Transportation beat the Whiting corporation, 39 to 23, to gain third place. Safeway Bus Lines won from Pullman Aircraft, 37 to 29, in the consolation final. Les Favorite, Buda center, was awarded the Lou Boudreau trophy as the most valuable player in the meet. The top scorer was Earl Dherid, also of Buda, with 45 points in three games.

Scores in last week's North av.-Larrabee Y. M. C. A. Industrial Basketball league were Illinois Tool, 44, Russell Electric, 28; Eugene Dietzgen Co., 59, Seeburgs, 44; Gits Molding, 31, Oak Manufacturing, 23; Motorola Radio, 41, Utah Radio, 35. Pete Grafner led the Gits team with 18 points.

Western Electric Employes Open Bowling Tournament.

Welders, assemblers, toolmakers, inspectors, engineers, foundry workers, clerical employes, maintenance men, riveters, wiremen, accountants, and machine operators from the Hawthorne plant of the Western Electric company opened their annual bowling tournament yesterday on the Windy City alleys, 2140 S. Cicero av. The entry list includes 300 teams, 389 sets of doubles, and 757 singles contestants, who'll vie for 404 prizes in the tournament, a week-end affair running until April 1.

Men and women compete in the same events, the 300 team entries including 46 mixed quintets and 38 made up entirely of women. Joseph H. Sward of Western Springs, president of the Hawthorne club, which has charge of the event, rolled the first ball yesterday. Members of the tournament committee are Henry J. Janda, chairman; W. W. Graff, secretary; Michael J. Camphouse, Edward Tanner, and Arthur L. Twigg.

Flashtrons Set Pin Records in Division St. Y Industrial League.

The Thordarson Flashtrons really cut loose Tuesday night in the Division st. Y. M. C. A. Industrial Bowling league. Not only did they win three straight from the Milwaukee av. National bank, but they set new season records with a 2,831 series and a 1,003 single game. In addition, Rich Hellmer rolled the season's high individual series, 647, and the third high single game, 250.

Thompson Elevator and Electric won three straight from Otis & Lee to take over first place in the Chicago Association of Commerce Industrial Bowling league Thursday. Pyott Foundry and Machine Co. and Railway Express are tied for second.

Radio workers in the Hallicrafters company's eight Chicago plants now are centering most of their attention on bowling, in which sport there is a widespread interest. The company leagues list 30 teams from an employe roll of 1,500 persons, representing more than 10 per cent of the workers. Already plans are being made for spring and summer sports, including softball, golf, and horseback riding.

SPOTTING THE PINS

BY ROBERT BEACH.

DEAN WILLIAM H. SPENCER, regional director of the War Manpower commission, who has been attending conferences in Washington concerning the midnight curfew which will be placed on bowling alleys, night clubs, theaters and other centers of amusement, starting tomorrow night, had not returned to Chicago last night.

However, assistants in his office, who declined to be quoted, provided some enlightenment on what may be expected in the way of a ruling governing the time at which these establishments may open.

Bowling lanes likely will be permitted to open at that hour set by their managerial habit, it was indicated. A house which normally opens at 8 a. m. probably may continue to do so. Those places which have been open 24 hours a day must observe a reasonable period of inactivity, say seven or eight hours. These W. M. C. officials, some of whom, incidentally, are bowling enthusiasts, also pointed out that, in the interests of fair trade practices, establishments which have not been opening until a late hour in order to meet after-midnight competition, will be permitted to open at the same time as their rivals.

This new arrangement, it was added, should alleviate the pin boy shortage, occasioned by the recent W. M. C. employment ceiling cut for non-essential activities. The same number of boys who previously had been employed over a 20 or 24 hour stretch, now can be concentrated on a 12, 14 or 16 hour span.

Marigold Handicap Game Requirement Cut to 21.

CHATTER—The requirement for the number of games upon which entry average for the Marigold handicap is figured has been reduced from 30 to 21 games in an effort to fill vacancies and cancelations caused by the recently imposed travel restrictions. So, men who had bowled 21 games in a sanctioned league by Dec. 23, 1944, are eligible to compete. . . . One hundred girls of the G. A. A. of Harrison High school take part in a 20 team bowling league at Major Recreation. They bowl in two groups, Wednesday and Thursday from 3:30 to 5 o'clock. The league was organized and is under the supervision of Miss May Kazda. . . . Entries are piling up for Jerry Peck's second annual individual classic, to run April 21-22 and 28-29. In fact, those from near-by towns promise to establish a new record. It's four games across eight drives and the top money will be $500. . . . The Cook County Bowling association of the American Legion will open its ninth annual tourney today in Bensinger's Wabash house. It will run three week-ends. . . . Thompsons Restaurants finally broke up that N. E. Travel league tie and own a one game margin over Keeley Half and Half. Now all they have to do is to keep it. . . .

Entries Close April 1 for Irving Park Junior Sweeper.

Leo Krisch is experiencing unexpected but quite welcome heavy response to his bid for under 186 bowlers for the Irving Park individual junior sweeper. Entries close April 1. It's eight game on as many lanes and carries a first prize of $2,000, based on 500 entries. . . . Memo to Glen Campbell: The A. B. C. has been giving your idea some thought for quite a while, but wants to have all competitors bowl on the same drives, offering the same conditions. . . . The Calvert distillery folks have put out a neat little bowling booklet by Hank Marino. . . . You girls had better be reminded that entries to Jack Samuelson's Century of Progress tournament, a handicap in singles, doubles, and teams, close one week from today. It's one of Chicago's finest events for women and now is in its 13th year. . . . The George's Store team of the Norwood Park Fellowship league bowled three games of 833. . . . Bess Brosius' 548 was best in the Evergreen Towers Sunday night mixed. Mike Shepler led the men with 581. . . . The Wednesday night ladies' league in the same house saw Dorothy Koske shoot a 201-547 to take top honors. . . . It'll be a big night in the Chicago Rapid Transit league this week when the No. 1 team meets the No. 3 team, the No. 2 team faces the No. 8 outfit and the Nos. 4 and 5 clash. There are 18 teams in the league, with the leaders having a two game edge. . . .

It's 600 or No Mention in Bowling Lanes Ladies' Major.

Things are getting so tough in the Bowling Lanes Ladies' Major that if a girl doesn't roll a 600 or better she doesn't even get a press mention. Last week it was Bertha Skoda, 236, 203, 210—649; Nina Van Camp, 212, 189, 224—625, and Kay Freitag, 189, 178, 246—613. . . . Jahneke's 20 Alleys won the women's handicap championship of Joliet. Eve Wilhelm, Cele Lundberg, Bernadine Keto, Sophia Vercolloti, and Laverne Billingsley are the team members. . . . In case you didn't know, the highest team total rolled in the country this season is the 3,519 by the Faber Cement Blocks of Teaneck, N. J. They had a high single of 1,275 and Ces Hart led the shooting with a 790 series. . . . When Tom Haley rolled the unbelievable total of 705 in the 1910 A. B. C. tournament in Detroit, the folks carried him around the block on their shoulders. So says Eli Whitney of the A. B. C. . . . The 3,000th perfect game rewarded by the A. B. C. was shot by Ray Langham of Cedar Rapids, Ia., and was rolled in 1944 in the 50th year of the A. B. C. . . . Napoleon Busch, 33 year old pinsetter at the Bowlium, recently worked 26 consecutive hours without being from the pit more than 10 minutes at a time. He set 309 lines. After an eight hour sleep he returned for another 10 hour stretch.

SCHWABENS AND SWEDES START CUP PLAY TODAY

BY OFFSIDE.

The Swedish-Americans, regarded as the only club capable of seriously threatening the Chicagoland soccer supremacy of the Vikings, will be put to their first real test of the season at 2:30 this afternoon, when they will meet the Schwabens in a first round game in the National Open cup competition in Sparta stadium, 21st st. and Kostner av.

Carl Peterson, new manager of the Swedish-Americans, has assembled a team regarded as the strongest in the history of the club. John Petek, Walter Schroader, Frank Trimmell, John Reega, and Harold Anderson, five able players who were with the Milwaukee Falks until that club was disbanded, have been added to such Swedish-American stand-bys as Ernie Pearson, Billy Fraser, Tommy Reily, and Al Waldrom to make up one of the strongest combinations in the west.

Schwabens Make Few Changes.

Few important changes have been made in the line-up of the Schwabens, who finished in second place in the National league race last fall. Ernie Schaaf, who only recently completed his 16th season with the club, has been forced to the sidelines by illness, and Maxie Jordon will replace him at full back. Jordon, a particularly versatile player, will play alongside of Alouis Thiet and Bill Hemmings, whose steady play has won for him the center half position.

Welcome news to Schwabens fans is the announcement that Adolph Strang, home on an extended leave from the navy, has returned to the forward line. Adolph scored the Schwabens' only goal against the Sparta eleven last Sunday.

Spartas Meet Norwegians.

The Spartas, scheduled for an early cup game engagement with the Slovaks, will tune up for this encounter by meeting the Norwegians in a Sparta stadium preliminary game at 1 p. m. Dickie Vidano, returning to the Sparta line-up after an absence of several years, is certain to be accorded a rousing welcome. New players obtained from Joliet will make their Sparta debuts today.

Other clubs are to launch their seasons with practice games today. The Vikings will meet the Chicago Sport club, and Linneas will oppose the Hakoah-Centers.

ited action, but it also is distinguished by another trademark too often overlooked by spectators. That is the smooth efficiency with which each evening's program is conducted, the three cards progressing without a hitch. This is due to the work of those referees, judges, timers, clerks, and announcers who have devoted their time to Golden Gloves for years.

One of the most formidable service entries will be included in the Peoria Journal-Transcript's team. This numbers six men from the A. A. F. training command at Chanute Field, Ill. They are Pvt. SAVINGS MAXIM LOSES PUNCH IN TOLL OF TAXES

Income Levies Bite as Earnings Rise.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Consider the man with a taxable income of $14,000. Should he be able to increase his income thru investments or other means, he will need to earn $2 to save $1. With $90,000 taxable income, it requires $10 of additional earnings to net $1 after taxes. At the $200,000 income level $1 saved costs $16.67 earned. At the other end of the tax scale, with $2,000 of taxable earnings, an extra dollar saved costs $1.33. To restate the maxim, a dollar saved is worth $1.33 to $16.67 in earnings, depending on the tax bracket of the individual.

Chart Costs of Saving.

A firm of Chicago insurance brokers, Nehls, Block & Associates, has developed a tax calculator that illustrates graphically how difficult it is to accumulate capital for any purpose under present income tax rates. Select the line listing your taxable income in the following table and read across:

$ 2,000	$ 1,540	$0.75	$ 1.33
4,000	3,040	.71	1.41
6,000	4,460	.67	1.49
8,000	5,800	.63	1.58
10,000	7,060	.59	1.70
12,000	8,240	.54	1.85
14,000	9,320	.50	2.00
16,000	10,320	.47	2.13
18,000	11,260	.44	2.27
20,000	12,140	.41	2.44
22,000	12,960	.38	2.63
26,000	15,720	.35	2.85
32,000	17,820	.32	3.13
38,000	19,740	.28	3.57
44,000	21,420	.25	4.00
50,000	22,920	.22	4.55
60,000	25,120	.19	5.26
70,000	27,020	.16	6.25
80,000	28,620	.13	7.69
90,000	29,920	.10	10.00
100,000	30,920	.08	12.50
150,000	34,920	.07	14.29
200,000	38,420	.06	16.67

If you are curious about your neighbor's income place a blotter or any handy sheet of paper under the first line of the table. Explain the purpose of the table. Watch him as he pulls down the covering sheet. He should pause and read across when he reaches his own income level.

Rates Influence Investments.

The tax calculator is being used by insurance men to convince individuals in the higher brackets that they can't hope by normal investments or earnings to build up retirement income or provide an estate for their families.

Present high tax rates will influence the type of investment that the person in the higher brackets will select. A person with a taxable income of $90,000 who makes an investment yielding 5 per cent will retain after taxes only 5-10ths of one per cent of such income. The same individual purchasing an issue with a 2½ per cent yield will keep 3-10ths of 1 per cent of the income. The nominal 2½ per cent spread in the yield is narrowed by taxes to 2-10ths of 1 per cent. There is not sufficient incentive in this case for the investor to choose the higher yield and more risky investment. He will buy the relatively riskless 2½ per cent issue.

West. Union Reports 1944 Earnings Rise

Western Union Telegraph company yesterday reported net earnings last year were $7,657,392, or $6.21 per share of A stock. In addition, the company received $658,837 net extraordinary credit adjustment incident to settlement of taxes of certain lessor companies for prior years. Including the credit adjustment, earnings per A share were $6.74. Net income in 1943 was $7,235,008, or $5.80 a share.

A. N. Williams, president, said settlement of lessors' taxes resulted in reducing substantially Western Union's liability for 1944 federal taxes on its own income. No liability for excess profits taxes was indicated, he said.

B/G Sales, Profits Rise.

Sales of B/G Foods, Inc., last year were $4,309,800, the largest in the history of the company and 11 per cent above 1943, said John N. Charters, president.

Net earnings increased to $158,250 from $126,100 in 1943. The 1944 profit was equivalent to $1.31 per common share after normal prior preferred dividend requirements, compared with 97 cents a share on a smaller number of common shares in 1943. After payments of $17.50 a share on the preferred, including clearing arrears of $10.50, earnings last year would be equal to 81 cents a share.

Earnings included results of a wholly owned New York City subsidiary, Alexandra Restaurant, Inc., purchased last year. B/G discontinued all operations in Kansas City, Mo., because results there in the preceding five years were unprofitable.

National Biscuit Has Dip.

National Biscuit company last year had net income of $9,039,208, or $1.16 a share, against $9,658,113, or $1.26 a share, in the preceding year. Roy E. Tomlinson, president, said the company did not believe renegotiation of 1944 transactions would affect earnings materially.

Allegheny Ludlum Steel company also reported reduced net income, $3,607,814 against $3,932,898 in 1943. Share earnings were $2.70 and $2.96. The company said 1943 profit was $67,583 above original estimates because of a renegotiation refund.

GRAIN FUTURES UNEVEN; BRISK RALLY LIFTS RYE

Grain prices closed narrowly mixed yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade as the possibility of major developments in the European war over the week-end caused brokers to operate cautiously. The most activity came in the last few minutes of the session when short coverings brought a rally from the early low.

Rye rebounded about 1 cent to close with gains of ¼ to ⅝ cent a bushel. Wheat futures finished ¼ cent higher to ⅛ cent lower. Corn rose ⅛ to ¼ cent, and oats ⅛ to ½ cent. Barley declined ⅛ to ⅞ cent.

CHICAGO'S VET GETS OLD JOB OR BETTER ONE

Service Acquired Skills Aid Many.

BY JACK WEIL.

Many discharged Chicago war veterans have returned to their former employers, many to jobs better than those they left, a survey of Chicago employers disclosed yesterday.

Few veterans are refusing jobs with their former employers, personnel men reported. Skills and aptitudes acquired in service enable many to qualify for better positions. Special attention is given by employers to men with physical disabilities.

Personnel records of Inland Steel company's Indiana Harbor works showed that as of last January a total of 275 former employes had received military discharges and all had returned to Inland.

Laborers Get Promotions.

Seventeen of the men rehired were placed in better jobs. Typical are the cases of two employes, one 23, the other 27, who left Inland as laborers in the blast furnace department, learned to operate bulldozers in the South Pacific with the marines, and have returned to work as bulldozer operators on Inland's ore docks at higher pay. Other former laborers received specialized training in military service which qualified them for jobs as mechanical helpers, pipe fitters, millwrights, and other skilled and semi-skilled jobs offering higher wages and more opportunity for advancement.

Only 2½ per cent of the returned veterans were unable to assume their former duties because of physical disabilities. An artillery corporal who had worked as a "burner" in the scrap yard had lost an arm. He now works in the inspection department. A former electrical motor inspector who was wounded in the leg is back in the same department, but in a job which requires less physical activity.

All Except 20 Accept Jobs.

International Harvester company's personnel department by the end of 1944 had interviewed 1,631 returning veterans. Every man was offered a job. Only 20 declined reemployment. Some of these said they planned to go into business for themselves or return to school.

Harvester rehired 21 men in jobs offering a better future. One, under 25, was in the company's student executive course prior to his army service. As an officer and instructor of motors, he prepared technical charts for use in teaching. He now prepares specifications and descriptive material on farm machinery.

Personnel records of Swift & Co., covering its operations thruout the country, showed that as of last December 1,970 of its former employes had been discharged from military service. Of these, 1,455 had returned to the company and fewer than 3 per cent of those interviewed refused employment. The others had not sought reëmployment.

10 Per Cent Get Better Jobs.

Swift officials estimated that approximately 10 per cent of those rehired were placed in better jobs at higher earnings. Physically disabled men were placed in suitable jobs.

Ninety-five former employes of Stewart-Warner corporation returned seeking reëmployment. Seventeen refused the jobs offered them. Many of those rehired were placed in better jobs, officials said.

Typical of Stewart-Warner men benefitting from army experience is a former production line helper who earned an army rating with an armored force in Africa. He learned how to handle men. He is back on the production line—not as a helper, but as a production boss.

Sears' Stock During Ward's Troubles

Stock Market Reaction Runs Thru 3d Day

New York, Feb. 24 (AP).—The stock market eased again today after a mixed opening. Scattered utilities and industrial specialties were ahead, but losses of fractions to a point or more predominated at the close. Transfers of 620,000 shares compared with 700,000 last Saturday.

Investment hesitancy again was based mainly on the belief that the government was preparing to crack down on speculation. In addition, reconversion apprehension was revived by the big allied push swung toward the Rhine. Belief that a larger technical "correction" of the long advance was in the offing also brought trimming of accounts.

The Associated Press 60 stock average declined 0.2 to 61.4, but was unchanged in the week. This was the third successive day's dip.

New 1944-'45 highs were made by American Water Works and Pan American Airways. Wright Aeronautical rose 4¼ on odd-lot sales. Sears declined ¾ to 104.

BONDS NARROW, MIXED.

New York, Feb. 24 (AP).—Prices were mixed and generally narrow in today's bond market. The Associated Press rail, industrial, and low yield averages were unchanged and utilities down 0.1 of a point. The foreign composite advanced 0.1, with issues of Australia, Chile, and Colombia at higher levels. Some Brazilian bonds dipped. United States government loans were steady. Transactions totaled $4,320,000 against $4,240,000 last Saturday.

CHICAGO LIST DIPS.

Prices were lower yesterday on the Chicago Stock exchange. Turnover was 26,000 shares. Volume leaders included Chicago corporation common, Admiral corporation, General Finance, and Marshall Field, each down ⅛, and Midland United preferred, down ½.

WRITE DISSENT TO WLB AWARD IN PACKER CASE

Textile Wage Boost Also Opposed.

Industry members of the war labor board are preparing a dissenting opinion to the majority support of wage increases for 145,000 meat packing employes, Horace B. Horton disclosed yesterday. He is an executive of the Chicago Bridge and Iron company and one of the four members who represent industry in disputes brought before WLB.

The dissenting opinion will be made public soon by the industry members who disagreed with the four public and four labor members of WLB. They issued a dissenting opinion last week on the approval of wage increases for a large group of textile workers.

Held Up by Disagreement.

Altho a WLB majority approved the two sets of wage increases, the effectiveness of both is held up by a squabble between the board and Economic Stabilizer Vinson, who wishes the office of price administration to have veto power over wage adjustments if price increases are involved.

In their dissenting opinion in the textile case the industry members said the increases might have serious repercussions in the entire southern economy. The case involved a dispute between 23 southern cotton textile companies and the CIO Textile Workers of America.

"We believe it necessary to call attention to the fact that in the textile case and in the packing house case as well industry members voted in the negative not only on disposition of specific issues, but also on the paragraphs found under 'effectuation of order,'" said the dissent.

Seek Brake on Fringe Orders.

"We opposed this action of the majority of the board because we believe that the orders should carry the restraining language of executive order 9328 whenever this board deals with the so-called 'fringe issues.' Until that executive order has been changed by the appropriate authorities, this board should continue to operate in accordance with its explicit provisions." [This is the original "hold the line" order forbidding pay hikes which would result in price increases.]

The majority ordered a 55 cent minimum wage to the textile workers altho the board long has had a policy defining a substandard wage in terms of a 50 cent minimum.

"The 55 cent minimum is 37½ per cent higher than the highest minimum under the fair labor standards act [40 cents]," the dissenters said.

Imposes Burden on Few.

"To increase the minimum to 55 cents, the board gives a 5 cent and more across-the-board general increase to all employes. The result will be increases in these 23 mills since January, 1941, totaling more than double the amount permitted by the Little Steel formula [15 per cent]—indeed, the increases will be near 50 or 60 per cent."

In addition, they said the order affected only 23 of 854 plants and less than 5 per cent of the 360,000 employes in the southern textile industry. The dissenters held the burden imposed on these companies "well may make it very difficult for them to operate in competition."

"And if it be said that the condition will soon ameliorate itself because the rest of industry in the south will necessarily fall in line," it was added, "the board is imposing on that industry an added wage bill—about $71,600,000 per year—which may have serious repercussions on the entire southern economy."

Chicago Bank Clearings Decrease to 467 Millions

Chicago bank clearings last week were 467 million dollars, compared with $558,800,000 in the preceding week and $438,700,000 a year ago, the Chicago Clearing House association reported yesterday. The figures:

	Clearings.	Balances.
Monday	$ 82,400,000	$13,900,000
Tuesday	83,900,000	5,000,000
Wednesday	88,900,000	7,900,000

New Rail Chief Asserts Roads Can Meet Severe Competition

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Wayne A. Johnston in his first public statement since his election to the presidency of the Illinois Central railroad, said yesterday he was optimistic about the ability of the American railroads to meet their competition in the transportation industry after the war.

Admitting the advantages peculiar to the aviation, bus, and trucking competitors, Johnston said the railroads will offer faster, better, and more commodious service to obtain new and to retain old patrons. Altho the automobile is certain to regain its position as the largest means of transportation and the air lines will keep certain travelers, there will be sufficient business to provide the railroads with comfortable volume, he said.

Increase Truck Use.

Johnston indicated the Illinois Central will continue its interest in streamlined train operation and will install such trains in the areas where they are needed. He said he was especially impressed by the big improvements in passenger trains developed by the Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing company.

After the war there will be increasing coördination of freight service with trucks. Use of more trucks will speed freight service by decreasing the number of freight train stops. Under such a program, in which the Illinois Central has been a pioneer, freight is distributed by truck from central stops to the smaller intermediate communities.

Freight train time schedules have had to be lengthened because of the war, but when peace returns freight trains again will run faster, he said.

Study New Business.

Discussing the Illinois Central's study of means for improving service and developing business in commodities found in its territory, Johnston said this research will be used even more after the war to maintain its competitive position. In the past studies have been made, for example, to see how larger markets could be opened for clay and fluorspar, found in large quantities in territory the road serves. Studies will be continued with radar and radio to help make railroad operation safer.

Johnston disclosed that the Illinois Central is coöperating with other roads in the development of a steam turbine locomotive.

He said company debt had been reduced from 369 million dollars to 282 millions—24 millions in 1944—since 1942 and that the policy of debt reduction will be continued.

WLB Orders Nearly 14,000 Back to Work

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 24 (AP).—The regional war labor board today ordered nearly 14,000 striking employes of Chrysler corporation's Dodge main plant to end a strike which since Friday has "virtually halted" production of plane and tank parts. If the workers do not return to their jobs Monday morning, the board said, officers of local 3, United Automobile Workers [CIO], will be summoned to a show cause hearing.

The walkout followed the discharge of eight employes accused by the company of loafing and refusing to meet production rates. A union spokesman charged the company with a "speed-up."

Meanwhile, Mike Novak, local president, called a union meeting for Sunday afternoon.

Ship Workers Walk Out.

Pascagoula, Miss., Feb. 24 (AP).—Approximately 10,000 shipyard workers of the Ingalls Shipbuilding corporation were on strike today and the war labor board termed their action "a direct interference with the war."

E. L. Mancil, president of the local Metal Trades council [AFL], said the strike was voted at a regular meeting of the union last night because of "delays" in action on grievances filed with the shipbuilding commission of the WLB.

COUNTRY FACES RECORD LOW IN MEAT SUPPLIES

Traders Blame OPA Price Planning.

The civilian meat supply thru 1945 will be the smallest in its history as military demands grow and production falls as a result of the decline in pig raising on farms last year, leaders in the stock yards said yesterday. The scarcity will become more severe in the next few months as pork output goes into a seasonal slump which is not expected to reach the bottom until next August or September.

Production of pork always is heaviest during the winter months, with a general falling off of tonnage until it reaches lowest levels in summer, said James Dunbar, former vice president of the Chicago Live Stock Exchange and a member of the stock yards trade for more than 40 years. During his time he has never experienced demand for pork and hogs so far above supplies.

Blames Crop Planners.

He blamed the office of price administration ceiling on live hogs for most of the cut in tonnage. Called to Washington for consultation with OPA and war food administration officials two years ago, Dunbar opposed the plan to place a ceiling on hogs on the ground it would curtail production.

"Mismanagement of the entire program for hog production by the crop planners in Washington is to blame for the present situation and the threat of a meat famine the like of which this country never has seen," Dunbar said.

"Even the liquidation of many cattle herds could not counter-balance the shortage in hogs. Many cuts of pork will vanish from the American dinner table within a few weeks. Hogs can be produced quicker than any other meat animals on farms, but a full year is required to alter the pork production trend, even under the best of conditions. However, Washington is doing nothing to encourage a shift to heavier production."

Floor Support Half-hearted.

Farm labor shortage alone would not have cut the 1945 pig population 23 million head, Dunbar said. Farmers would have curtailed their output but not by 28 per cent.

"The beginning of trouble is traced directly to the OPA hog price ceiling," he said. "Imposition of a ceiling price for live hogs in October, 1943, brought a nation-wide liquidation the following six months that crashed many millions of hogs right thru the floor [WFA support prices] which was only halfheartedly maintained by the WFA. Farmers were not interested in getting back to large scale operations for another dose of that kind of medicine."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

109 BILLION IN SIX LOANS.

The six war loan drives have produced a grand total of 109 billion 436 million dollars for the treasury, an unparalleled record in United States finance.

While the government is piling up its debt to almost unbelievable totals, its vast expenditures so far appear to have had the effect of easing the problem of financing the war. The sales total of each loan drive except the fourth has been larger than its predecessor. The war is consuming the nation's tangible resources, but adding to its liquid funds in the form of bank deposits and currency. One result is to increase the volume of war loans which investors are able to absorb.

In the sixth loan climax, sales of the securities offered reached a total of 21 billion 621 million. The oversubscription of the 14 billion quota amounted to 54 per cent, compared with oversubscriptions of 44 per cent for the first drive, 43 for the second, 26 for the third, 19 for the fourth, and 29 per cent for the fifth.

Corporations and other investors not classified as individuals took a higher percentage—72.8 per cent—of the sixth loan than of any of the others. The corporation subscribers included insurance companies and savings banks, but not commercial banks. The treasury's borrowings from the latter are compiled separately, with the exception that the first and second war loans each included about 5 billion 100 millions of sales to commercial banks. While the sixth loan drive was in progress, such banks purchased 1 billion and 14 millions of four kinds of securities identical with those offered in the drive but the bank purchases are not included in the total.

Following is a comparison and sales and goals set in each of the war loans:

Loan.	Sales.	Goal.
First	$12,947,000,000	$ 9,000,000,000
Second	18,555,000,000	13,000,000,000
Third	18,944,000,000	15,000,000,000
Fourth	16,730,000,000	14,000,000,000
Fifth	20,639,000,000	16,000,000,000
Sixth	21,621,000,000	14,000,000,000

For the six loans as a whole, sales to investors other than commercial banks aggregated 99 billions, or 91 per cent. Sales to individuals were 28 billions, or 25 per cent of the total. The proportion credited to individuals was highest in the case of the fourth loan, amounting to 31.7 per cent.

In view of the 7 billion 621 million oversubscription of the sixth loan goal, financial expectations are that the next loan campaign will not be necessary until May or June.

Majority Represents Sale of Daily News Holdings.

The estate of the late Frank Knox, secretary of the navy and publisher of the Chicago Daily News, was appraised at $2,168,236 in the return for state inheritance tax filed yesterday with County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki. Virtually the whole amount is represented by proceeds of the sale of his interest in the newspaper to John S. Knight last October.

State taxes are figured at $146,429 and the federal death tax at $598,000. Other indebtedness and costs of administration amount to $115,022. Mrs. Annie Reid Knox of Manchester, N. H., the widow, is the sole heir. When the estate is cleared, she will receive $1,308,785. She also was beneficiary of $50,000 in insurance.

Holding Company Chief Owner.

Knox's interest in the newspaper property consisted of 5,301 shares of Daily News common stock and 63 14/22 per cent of ownership of Daneco corporation, a holding company he and his associates formed at the time they bought the Daily News in 1931. Daneco owns 232,000 shares of Daily News common, which constitutes 52 per cent of voting power.

For the Daneco interest, the estate received $2,072,022, it was stated in the return filed yesterday. The 5,301 common shares were sold at $15, returning $79,515.

Interest in New Hampshire Paper.

The assets also included one share of stock in the Manchester [N. H.] Union Leader, which Knox owned in partnership before he came to Chicago. It was explained that the rest of his holdings of that stock had been transferred to Mrs. Knox before his death.

Executors of the estate are Mrs. Knox, Holman D. Pettibone, president of the Chicago Title and Trust company, and Laird Bell, who had been Knox's personal attorney.

LOUISIANA LILY GROWERS REAP WAR TIME BOOM

New Orleans, La., Feb. 24 [Special].—Farmers, florists, flower fanciers, and even a United States senator are reaping huge legitimate profits these days as a result of the war with Japan—profits accruing from a 500 per cent increase in the output of Creole lilies since the war closed the door on the annual importation of 25,000 lily bulbs from Japan.

The senator is Allen J. Ellender, Democrat, of Houma, who owns one of the largest developments in the lily industry in two parishes, or counties, near his home. Ellender's crops will range in value up to $900 an acre in bulbs this year. Another large grower has sold his crop for $25,000.

Bring $9 a Dozen.

The lilies, which bring from $9 to $10 a dozen on retail markets, are shipped as bulbs by the thousands to Chicago and eastern markets, where they are placed in cold storage. About six weeks before the flowers are required, the bulbs are removed, planted in greenhouses, and immediate growth induced.

"The lily is not only a fine investment but it also brings a quick return from low production cost," said Peter Chopin of New Orleans, a pioneer grower. "Only 18 months are needed from scales [tiny cuttings from bulbs] to flower. The crop is an intelligent step toward diversification urged for years for the Louisiana farmer."

Grown in Northwest.

The Creole lily has grown here for more than a cenutry, but it took the Japanese war to bring the lily industry to its full bloom.

For 25 years preceding the war, the only major competition with the virtual Japanese monopoly came from the Croft lily, grown in quantity in the Pacific northwest. While oriental bulbs came 10,000 miles to the American market, the finest hybrid lily in the world—the Creole—grew in small quantities almost untilled in the black loam of the lower Mississippi river delta near New Orleans.

$35,000 North Side Fire Destroys Stock of Lamps

Fire swept thru the brick building at 1315 N. Paulina st. early yesterday and caused damage estimated at $35,000. The cause of the blaze was not determined, but Fire Marshal Anthony J. Mullaney said it originated in the basement. The Roxy Manufacturing company, on the second floor, suffered the worst damage. Its stock of lamps and lampshades was destroyed. A florist shop occupies the first floor, and the third floor is empty.

ARIZONA PAPERS WILL BE TABLOID 2 DAYS A WEEK

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 23 (AP).—The Arizona Republic and Phoenix Gazette, jointly owned standard size newspapers, will appear beginning Feb. 27 in tabloid form on Tuesdays and Saturdays because of newsprint restrictions.

The newspapers' announcement said there would be "nearly complete elimination of display and classified advertising on those days.

"These further advertising reductions," the statement continued, "are due to necessary war time limitations on the use of newsprint and the failure of the war production board to give fair recognition to the growth of Phoenix and Arizona in its endeavor to fairly allocate additional allotments of newsprint where hardship exists because of war caused population increases."

REAL ESTATE—SUBURBAN—WEST

RIVER FOREST MANOR—We have the pleasure of announcing that individual building sites owned by the Fort Dearborn Mortgage Co. can now for the first time be purchased by the general public. Located 8 blocks west of Harlem-av. and along North-av. This community is the desirable place to build your home and raise your family. It has the "must" qualifications: Schools, transportation, all improvements, including concrete streets and alleys, and is conveniently close to the Oak Park shopping center. Highly restricted, it has become a community of fine homes and neighbors. No development in the Chicago area has the assured future that this community has. Choose one of our wooded building sites now. Remember that land values have not yet materially increased. Rather than buy a home at a foolishly high price perhaps it would be better to "live in a tent" for a while and build your modern home after the war.

HISTORIC CANAL VITAL FACTOR IN CITY'S GROWTH

Proposed Highway Route Born of 1673 Vision.

BY ROBERT HOWARD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 24.—The Illinois and Michigan canal has been a vital factor in Chicago's prosperity and growth into the metropolis of the midwest.

The canal got its name because it connected the waters of Lake Michigan with those of the Illinois river. Over this route the Mississippi valley moved its produce into Chicago and bought its goods from Chicago concerns.

Long a transportation artery in name only, the I. & M. again is ready to play a leading role in the history of Chicago. Its route, if new plans are carried thru, again will connect Chicago's lake front with the vast and rich regions from which comes the city's prosperity. The I. & M. will become a superhighway, straight, fast, and safe. On it post-war automobiles will travel from Chicago into the Illinois and Mississippi valleys. Because of such auto traffic, Chicago can look forward to new growth.

A Vision from 1673.

Marquette and Joliet, the French who arrived in 1673, saw that the low portage at Chicago should be a waterway.

Not until April 23, 1848, however, did the first boatload of commerce pass thru the 15 locks that changed the water level and made navigation possible along the 96 miles from Peru, Ill., to the upstream terminal at the Chicago river's south branch, at the east edge of the present Ashland av. bridge. Abraham Lincoln was a congressman, Illinois regiments were serving in the Mexican war, and the pioneering Galena and Chicago Union railroad was pushing its tracks toward Elgin.

It had been a tough job to dig the ditch, which had threatened the state with early bankruptcy, but the job was worth the time and the trouble.

Barge Traffic Increases.

More and more barges were towed up and down the canal and in 1866, at the end of the Civil war, tolls reached nearly $300,000. Rates were reduced and traffic continued to grow until 1882, the peak year for tonnage.

Not until 1933 did the canal actually die, so far as its usefulness as a waterway was concerned. Then the Lakes-to-Gulf deep waterway, for bigger boats, was completed on a paralleling route, and the I. & M. sank into disuse and became scorned as a useless breeder of mosquitoes, awaiting the day when nonstop motor routes would be concrete ribbons on its banks.

Secretary of War Calhoun, a southerner, might claim to be the father of the canal. He recommended its construction in 1819, recognizing the route had economic and military importance.

The state capitol was in Kaskaskia, below the thriving city of St. Louis, when the government of Illinois, three years after statehood, got help from congress in 1822. A land grant gave the state acreage for a 60 foot canal and for a reserve strip 90 feet on each side.

The 1822 congressional act stipulated that within three years Illinois must return a map of the canal to the treasury department. That provision is of interest only because it bobbed up in 1901, when federal courts found that the state never provided the map and that land titles were under a cloud. Thru efforts of the state division of waterways, however, it was proved in 1933 that Gov. Edward Coles had sent the map to President James Monroe, who had sent it to the war department by mistake.

The Illinois government couldn't finance the canal, however, and in 1827 congress again came to its aid, granting the state alternate sections of land for five miles on either side of the canal. The state chose and sold the odd numbered sections and federal land offices disposed of the even numbered sections. It wasn't until 1836, however, that the land market was brisk enough to bring in enough money to permit construction to be started.

Meanwhile the canal commissioners, subdividing their grants, platted the original town of Chicago and sold lots for $36 each between State, Madison, Halsted, and Kinzie sts. Downstream cities from Chicago to Ottawa also got their start as canal towns. Lockport, Joliet, Morris, Marseilles, and Ottawa all came into being under I. & M. auspices.

Still Earns $25,000 Yearly.

The canal still earns $25,000 or more a year, mostly from leases, but that isn't enough to keep downstream locks in working order and drainage channels properly open, according to Thomas B. Casey, acting chief waterways engineer.

The super-highway, part of which already is a county project, would extend from the loop area and follow the canal at least as far as Summit, connecting with U. S. highway 66, the main route downstate. Engineers from Springfield are considering the advisability of a superhighway as far as Lemont. Men downstream have visions of such a road to Joliet or La Salle.

A legislative commission is studying the problem of modern usage of what once was one of the state's biggest assets. Congress is being asked to cede any real estate and navigation rights to the state.

The legislature will need to take the old waterway out of the category of a canal, transferring it to the state's highway, park, or conservation officials so they can spend needed funds for reconstruction.

Stray Raccoon

Margaret Hussauer with stray raccoon at Anti-Cruelty society's office.

"There is a strange looking animal on our back porch. It looks like a piece of fur coat walking." That's the message received early yesterday by the Anti-Cruelty society, 157 W. Grand av., from the janitor at 2506 Lake View av.

Investigation revealed "the strange animal" was a raccoon, apparently a pet. Ben Maringer, driver for the society, put a leash around the raccoon and took it to headquarters where the office girls immediately were captivated by the antics of the "carnivorous animal." Raccoons are often kept as pets because of their amusing ways, the Anti-Cruelty society says. Owner of this pet, which has been dubbed "40 yard line" by the office workers, may reclaim it by contacting the society.

WARNS CAMPAIGN FOR WAC AIDS IN HOSPITALS LAGS

Numerous applications for enlistment for army general hospital duties in the women's army corps have been received from Illinois women but the pace must be increased if the state is to meet its quota of 405, Brig. Gen. Leo M. Boyle, adjutant general of Illinois and state chairman of the campaign, said yesterday. The state campaign proclaimed by Gov. Green for the period from Feb. 16 to March 16 is part of a nation-wide drive to enlist 8,000 women for army hospital services.

"With wounded fighting men arriving in army hospitals thruout the nation at the rate of 30,000 per month," Gen. Boyle said, "it is necessary that thousands of women be recruited for hospital services if the men are to have proper and adequate care."

To be eligible a woman must be between the ages of 20 and 49, a citizen, have no dependents under 14 years old, and have two years of high school education or its equivalent.

WOMAN BEATEN AND ROBBED TWICE IN 9 DAYS

Miss Dorothy Younglove, 421 Oakdale av., a war worker, who was beaten and robbed of a valuable diamond ring nine days ago, reported that she again had been beaten and robbed of $190 yesterday. Miss Younglove told police two young men struck her on the head and stole her purse near her home. She was treated in the Illinois Masonic hospital. On Feb. 15 she reported having been beaten and robbed by a man later identified as Larry Seatone, 23, of 416 Deming pl. Seatone's trial on charges of assault and robbery has been set for March 13.

U. OF I. TRUSTEES VOTE TO PUSH 26 MILLION BUDGET

What are considered the minimum financial requirements of the University of Illinois still stood more than a million dollars above the biennium figure of 25 million dollars set by the budgetary commission at the end of a meeting yesterday of university trustees with commission members and state officials.

The trustees voted to continue their conferences in an attempt to include all items in the 26 million total regarded as necessary for the school. Yesterday's meeting was held in the University club.

Pare Budget 4 Millions.

Park Livingston, president of the board, said the original budget prepared by the trustees had been pared more than 4 million dollars. Prolonged discussion yesterday failed to bring any solution on the additional million dollar cut set by the budgetary commission. Without taking an arbitrary stand, Livingston said, university officials will attempt to convince state officials of the necessity for the higher figure.

The board also will confer with members of the state post-war planning commission to reconcile differences in the university building program submitted by university officials and that adopted by the commission. The commission put a health and recreation program ahead of some educational projects considered more vital for the immediate future by university officials.

The trustees voted to strengthen the University of Illinois Foundation, a corporation formed in 1935 to carry on certain business functions of the alumni association, by hiring a qualified director to work directly under President Arthur Cutts Willard and by making the foundation responsible for all fund raising and special gift activities and the developement and exploitation of university patents.

First in Nylon Research.

In connection with the development of patents, Livingston pointed out that it was at the University of Illinois that the first research in nylon and the blueprint for synthetic rubber had been started and that a faculty member also developed sound motion pictures. The foundation now has the patent of the "furnace of the future," which is claimed to be the first major advance in furnaces since the Benjamin Franklin stove. The foundation also will develop such patents as have been made in the faculty's war research efforts which may be of commercial value.

The trustees voted to honor the late David Kinley, president emeritus of the university who died Dec. 3, 1944, by naming the university library, the largest school library in the United States and the fifth largest in the nation, the David Kinley Memorial library. The board also voted to name the east walk of the central quadrangle on the Urbana campus the Robert Carr Memorial walk in tribute to Robert F. Carr, former president of the board who died Jan. 22, 1945.

KILLED IN FALL FROM CHIMNEY.

While cleaning the chimney of his home yesterday, John Lake, 56, of 2023 Ruble st., fell 10 feet to the roof of the next house and was killed.

King Glamor Pants

First choice among 10 male students entered by women's social clubs at the University of Chicago, Larry Keelman, 20, of 1514 W. 5th av., Gary, Ind., ruled the Midway as King Glamor Pants yesterday.

Votes for the king were cast at a carnival sponsored by 15 campus organizations under leadership of the Chapel union. At 1 cent a vote, $400 was collected and turned into the world student fund to aid needy students thruout the world.

King Glamor Pants posed for pictures yesterday in the company of Ann Duvendeck, Kalamazoo, Mich., chairman of the carnival; Inger Olson, 7441 Drexel av.; Amy Barnes, Memphis, Tenn., and Ellen O'Connor, 5816 Blackstone av., member of Chi Rho Sigma, the club that nominated Keelman for king.

DID YOU NOTICE THE BRIGHT STAR TOO? IT'S VENUS

The bright star in the west which has aroused curiosity and admiration among Chicagoans on these first clear evenings of 1945 is the planet Venus, F. Wagner Schlessinger, director of the Adler planetarium, explained yesterday. Venus has been increasing in brightness right along, he added, but atmospheric conditions have cut down visibility until recently.

The reason for the planet's present brilliance is its relative closeness to the earth. Venus and the earth both revolve around the sun, the former making a complete revolution in 225 of our days. At some times, when Venus is at the other side of the sun from the earth, the two planets can be as much as 160 million miles apart. When they are on the same side of the sun they can be as little as 26 million miles apart. The distance now is much closer to the second figure.

Venus will increase slightly in brightness until March 10, Schlessinger said, and it can be plainly seen even in the afternoon when the day is clear.

POST-WAR RENT RULE FOUGHT AS REALTY THREAT

Road to Totalitarianism, Asserts H. U. Nelson.

BY AL CHASE.

[Real Estate Editor.]

Herbert U. Nelson.

Continuance of rent control after the war would be an ominous threat to property ownership, Herbert U. Nelson, executive vice president of the National Association of Real Estate boards, said yesterday.

Control of housing and destruction of the property owner is the direct road to chaos and totalitarianism, he asserted, terming the entire philosophy of housing control and public housing a foreign importation that should be resisted "with every ounce of power that we have."

French Control Not Lifted.

Nelson recalled that French rent control, imposed in the first World war, never was lifted. As a result, he said, the property owning middle class of France was almost wiped out. The construction industry became nearly nonexistent.

CIO and President Agree.

Both President Roosevelt and the CIO wish United States rent control after the war, Nelson asserted. He quoted a recent CIO pamphlet terming such policies essential in the post-war years. It also expressed the opinion that rent control probably should be made "a permanent feature of the economy." A Presidential message recently held that economic controls must be continued after the war as long as shortages exist.

Held Bar to Investment.

"But how can shortages be overcome in the housing field if it is made unprofitable to build?" Nelson asked. "Does anyone believe that post-war rent ceilings would be high enough to make it profitable to invest capital in building? I, for one, do not.

"Present rent control policies teach us what to expect. Roy Wenzlick, one of our best real estate economists, points out how property owners have been discriminated against. A widow who owns a house finds that her gross rent receipts have a purchasing power which is 15.6 per cent lower than the average of the last 18 years. The worker who occupies her house and who receives wages finds that his purchasing power is 42.5 per cent larger than the average of the last 18 years."

Nelson said that the realty organization has been warned that large pressure groups would fight elimination of rent controls.

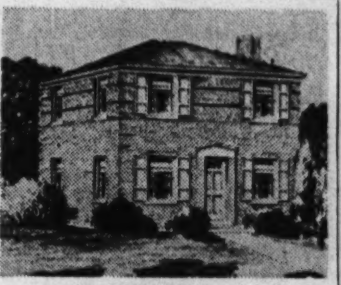
Won't Swallow Such Medicine.

"We are advised to accept division of the housing field between private enterprise and public ownership," he asserted. "For one, I'll not swallow this kind of medicine. I have seen in several other countries that control of housing and destruction of the small property owner is the direct road to chaos and totalitarianism. The whole philosophy of housing control and public housing is a foreign importation."

If the 14 million small property owners in the country were organized they would constitute a reservoir of public power that could save the property system, Nelson declared.

"In some way this vast silent group must be organized," he said. "They constitute the only countervailing force that can oppose mass pressure groups that are today calling the tune."

War Worker's Home



This is one of 116 single family brick homes for war workers to be built in the West Beverly Hills area by the Chatham Village Construction company, John R. O'Connor, president. They will be on the east side of Talman av., between 99th and 103d sts., and on the west side of Maplewood av., between 100th and 103d sts. Each home will have five rooms and one bath. Carl Kastrup is architect.

PLAN 18 FLATS AT WABASH AND 58TH ST. CORNER

Work is scheduled to start soon on an 18 flat building at the southeast corner of Wabash av. and 58th st., the Fifty-Eighth corporation announced. The building, to occupy a 100 by 160 foot site, will have eight three-room and 10 four-room apartments, each heated by an individual hot water coal fired unit. Designed by Anton Johnson, it is expected to be ready for war workers by fall. It will be financed thru H. F. Philipsborn & Co., with an $86,000 FHA insured mortgage.

River Forest Wins Lake St. Zoning Fight

Erection of a 36 apartment building at the northwest corner of Lake st. and Bonnie Brae, in River Forest, plans for which were announced recently, provides a permanent buffer against the encroachment of business into a residential district, Frederick Doyle, secretary of the Home Zoning association of the suburb said yesterday. It also was called a successful ending to a long fight to enforce home zoning, which attracted wide attention.

In December, 1940, the owner of the Lake st. corner brought suit to enjoin the village from enforcing its zoning ordinance prohibiting the use of this corner for commercial purposes. The village board and the Home Zoning association, of which Frank W. Hughes is president, opposed the zoning change. Hughes said a Chicago department store wanted the corner for a branch.

Two and a half years after the suit was started attorneys for the owner had the case dismissed.

"Altho the officers of the Home Zoning association felt that the dismissal of the suit removed a threat to our zoning ordinance, and particularly to the zoning of Lake st., nevertheless the construction of an apartment building on the Bonnie Brae corner by the Lindop interests seems to settle for all time the zoning of Lake st.," said Doyle.

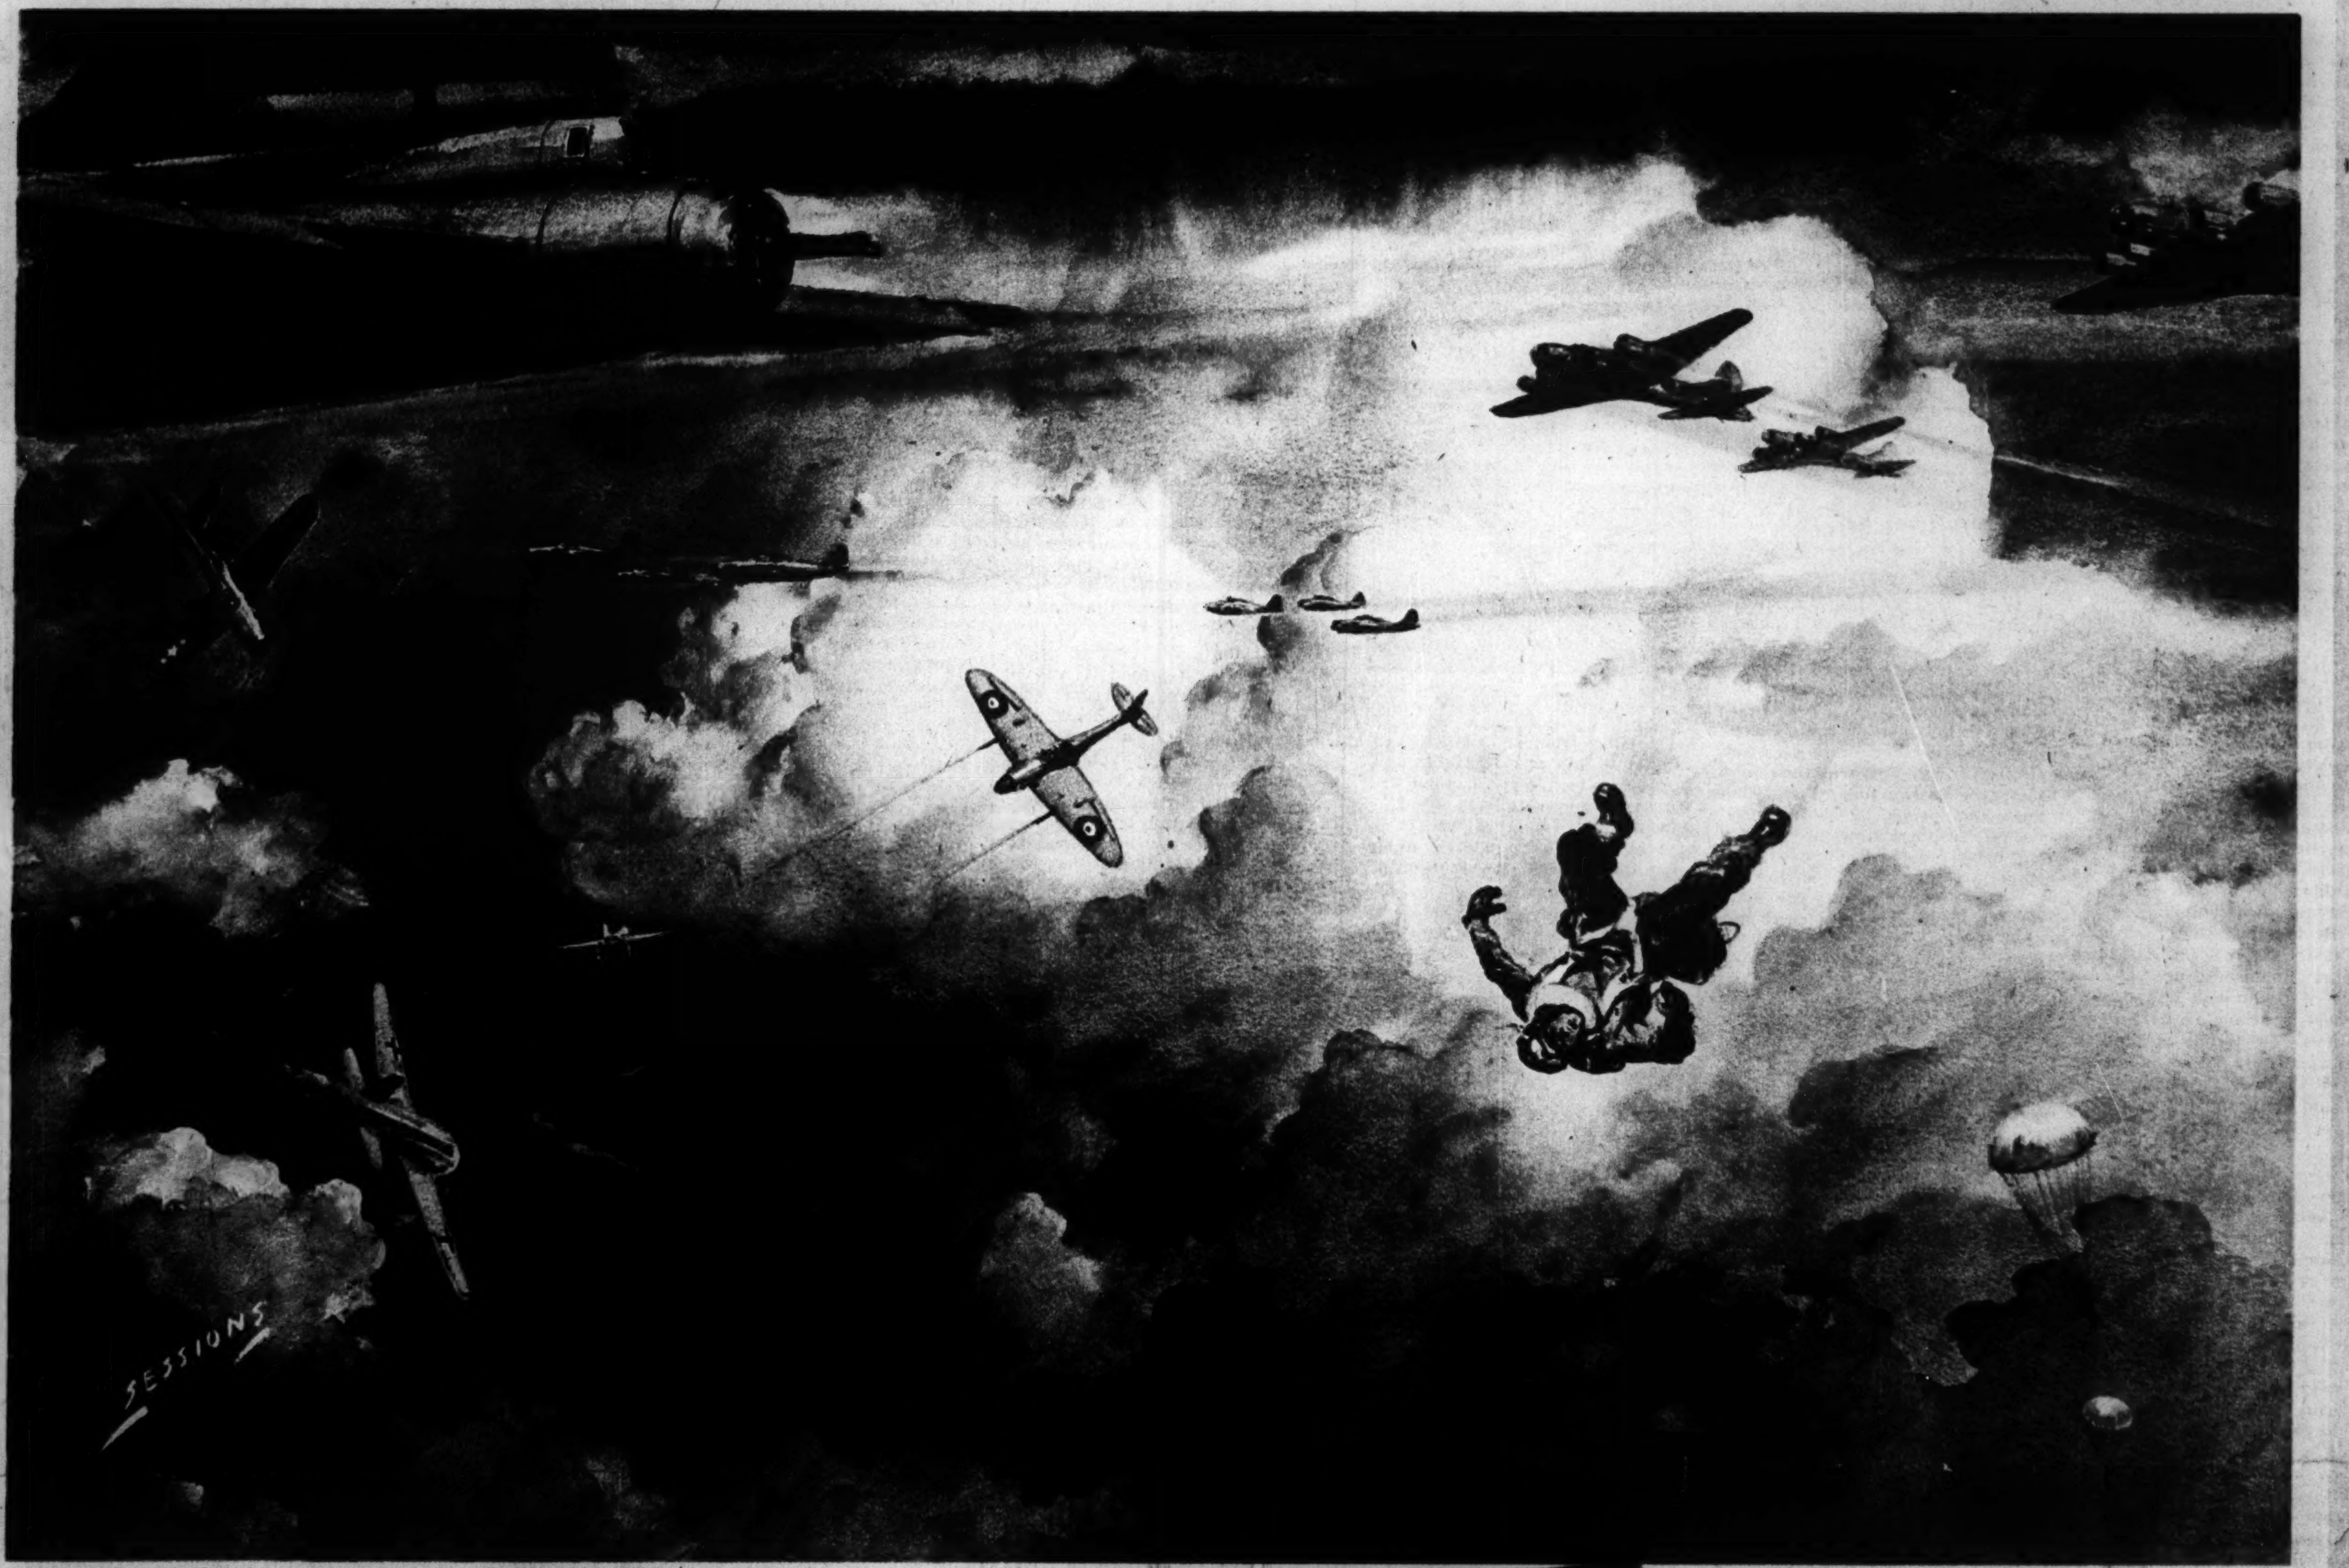
Chicago Sunday Tribune
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

FEBRUARY 25, 1945



"I had no sensation of falling, but rather of being in a terrific windstorm—the air was rushing and whistling about me." Noted Chicago artist, James M. Sessions, painted the illustration reproduced above especially for The Tribune.

This is the story of a Chicago hero's escape from German-occupied France. The names of French men and women used in this article are not their correct ones. Start this story here today and continue it tomorrow and daily thereafter in The Daily Tribune.

JOURNEY UNDERGROUND

(Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune.)

SEPT. 3, 1943—0300 HOURS. "It's time to get up, sir," said the orderly. I fumbled for my watch and saw that it was 3 a. m. We were always awakened at least an hour earlier than was necessary. This morning we were up an hour and a half too early, so I took all the time I needed to work up an appetite, which I attempted to stimulate by drinking four or five cups of hot black coffee. While doing this I prepared the sandwich which I took with me for the return journey. When I finished wrapping it I began to feel that I could face a pancake, altho 3:30 was a very grim hour to sit down to a breakfast table.

Briefing time had been set for 0430 hours, but already it was 0500. All the air crews were sitting or standing in the interrogation room, which was large and bare, with only a few chairs and tables. Most of the men were standing in small groups talking; others were trying to sleep on the tables or chairs or on their parachutes and gear that had been thrown on the floor near the wall.

Finally the tensest moment of the morning arrived. The door of the briefing room was opened. The slumbering air crews seemed suddenly to wake and quickly made their way to the door. They did not rush or push, altho each member wanted more than anything to know just what the target was. Inside the briefing room the men again started talking. Every one had something to say about the target. Some had bombed it before—they were the ones to whom we listened most, for we sometimes put more confidence in their stories of the flak and fighters than in the information given us by the intelligence officer. This was particularly true when the I. O. made the opposition out to be light.

• • •

Soon the buzz of talking died down, for the C. O. was standing up in front of the map. He told us in which position we were flying and other special instructions.

Then the intelligence officer mounted the platform and quickly told us about the mission.

"Target is Romilly. There will be 150 to 250 single-engined fighters and about 150 twin-engined fighters in the area which may engage you. You will have fighter protection to Paris: Spitfires and P 47s; then all the way back alone. Flak will be heavy at the target."

I was again assigned to Brown's crew for this flight. We were flying Tail-End Charlie—the very lowest and last aircraft in the formation.

When briefing had ended and I had prepared my maps and charts and made all my calculations, I returned to my billet to collect my special kit. I kept it in a drawer where I could easily pick out the things I would need for different missions.

I put "All You Want in Holland" to one side, but stuffed my French-English dictionary into my jacket. "Spoken German and Norwegian Phrases" were also put to one side. I took "Browning's Poems," for I thought that would be wonderful to have should I be hidden away in some farmhouse for several days with nothing more to read. The chocolate, carton of cigarets, first aid box, photographs of my mother, aspirins, band-aids all went into different pockets of my battle dress. I had collected all these things after great consideration of their usefulness in case I should be shot down. I took about 30 English pounds and $30, which I thought might be excellent for bribing purposes, in spite of the fact that I am the world's most artless briber.

On my person I also had 12 tooth brushes. Many long and painful hours of my youth spent in dentists' chairs had taught me the importance of the tooth brush and of having a good supply of them.

When I had gathered together all the things I felt that I might need I glanced at my watch and saw that I still had half an hour before I had to be back at the briefing room. I had tried to finish Faulkner's "As I Lay Dying" the night before, and still had a few more pages, so I flung myself on the bed and started reading.

I caught the last truck at the briefing room that was going to the bombers. The driver, like all the others, had no idea where 078, my aircraft, was. We tried several different planes before we found mine. The other crew members were sitting by the mechanics' tent, and when I had transferred my things from the truck to the plane I joined them. The co-pilot gave me my official escape kit while the others were talking about guns.

FLIGHT OFFICER DAVID G. PROSSER

Soon it was taxi time, and we all climbed into the Fortress and were moving down the runway. Our whole group of 21 planes was lined up on the approach to the main runway. Already some of the planes had taken off. No sooner had one aircraft left the ground than the next started to take off. The performance seemed to be almost automatic.

We circled the field, gaining altitude, and when we arrived over the English coast we were flying at 20,000 feet and still climbing. I could easily see the French coast.

When we entered enemy territory the P-47s passed underneath us and over us on their way to protect the groups ahead. The ones below flew in threes. They had white patches on their wing tips that made them look rather saucy. Those above us were very high—we could only see the vapor trails they left behind. We traveled up the Seine valley very slowly. The great bends of the river made a fantastic snakelike design stretching out to the sea. We passed Rouen and other towns along the banks of the river.

At last Paris appeared before us. From the air Paris did not look as large as I expected. I checked several land features with my map to verify its identification, but before I had finished I distinguished the Eiffel tower, the place de l'Etoile, and the Ile de la Cite. I was trying to remember some of the other landmarks that I had known before when suddenly some one shouted over the interphone, "Fighters—12 o'clock!" Both the bombardier and I had missed them. Several minutes before we sighted Paris I had noticed some fighters about three miles out to the left, but as they were making no passes on our formation, I had forgotten them; but they had gone ahead of us, and, circling around, came in on our nose. The bombardier spotted the enemy planes a moment before I did and was firing his guns.

The Germans were out of range of the navigator's guns, so I had to change my position to the other nose gun. By the time I was ready to fire the enemy fighters were only 200 yards ahead and about 100 yards below. We were closing so rapidly that I was unable to take aim at any single aircraft and had only enough time to fire in the general direction of the six or eight fighters which were speeding toward us.

I saw a few flashes on the noses of a couple of these FW-190s and thought for half a second that at long last I had really hit one, but then realized quickly that these flashes were only the 20-mm. cannon the Germans were firing at us. I had missed, as I had done so many times before when fighters came in on the nose to make an excellent if fleeting target. I was thoroly exasperated and grumbling and swearing over my bad luck.

• • •

I realized we had been hit, but did not know we were in a serious state when suddenly the bombardier started making some alarming movements. My earphones had been pulled off when I switched over to the other guns, and all I could hear was a hissing noise. I stopped thinking about the Germans I almost got when I noticed we were out of formation and losing altitude. Looking at the altimeter, I saw we had already lost 2,000 feet and were now at 22,000.

Then the bombardier shouted, "Bail out!", pushed an emergency oxygen bottle into my hand, and gave me a shove toward the door.

I seemed to be strangely unalarmed, and in this moment, which should have been the most tense in my life, I found myself wondering whether or not I should take the time to get the anthology I had in my case.

The bombardier looked so worried that I thought it better not to bother, and hurriedly looked out the window to see the damage to our engines while I slipped on my parachute.

The engines seemed to be undamaged, and this made me feel even more complacent. The fear that I had had of parachuting did not arise now—I knew that I would have to jump, but the thought of it had no effect on me. I went down into the hatch to open the escape trap door. I thought, "I must hurry—this is dangerous—the bombardier seems to be very frightened."

I wondered if the escape door would fly off when I pulled the cord. I thought about all the stories I had read in the Stars and Stripes about these things freezing, but I gave the cord a yank and instantly the hatch disappeared. In its place I saw the green, misty countryside of France and felt, "That is certainly a long way away; I don't think I like this parachuting idea after all," and backed

A Newspaper Man Continues Survey of American Periodicals

Last Sunday the author, a Tribune correspondent back in America after many years in Europe, discussed in general his personal reaction to the magazines that fill this country's newsstands. Today he continues his survey with a study of specific periodicals. The opinions expressed in these articles are Mr. Small's and are presented as of interest because they come from an experienced newspaper man who by reason of his long absence from the country can take an objective view of the subject.

HENRY LUCE

THE CIRCULATION claimed for the Reader's Digest by its own editorial board is more than 8,000,000. That of Time is 1,181,000. Together these two exercise an enormous influence in giving the average American his picture of world events. Theoretically both are impartial, but they can give a direction to currents of opinion by omissions (which can pass for condensation), by selection, by emphasis.

The Reader's Digest is a monthly, presumably of reprints from other periodicals. We shall later see that some question has been raised about the genuineness of those reprints. First let us turn our attention to Time and its allied picture weekly, Life.

Time and Life (circulation 4,040,000), as well as Fortune and the Architectural Forum and a radio-movie enterprise, the March of Time, are all produced by a huge publishing concern with headquarters in its own building rented from Rockefeller Center in mid-Manhattan, New York. Its head is Henry Robinson Luce, a man not yet 47, who has had one of the most spectacular careers of our times. He is one of the few Americans whose names have gone all over the world. So have the name and picture of his wife, Congresswoman Clare Luce.

• • •

Henry Luce left Yale in 1920 after being adjudged the most brilliant member of his class. After some short ventures in journalism at Chicago and Baltimore he met a classmate of his, Briton Hadden, and they pooled the ideas which were to result in Time.

It is said that both in their student days had felt the lack of any American periodical which in compact form would give them information on current events. The best on hand in those days was the Literary Digest, since defunct, a scrappy mosaic of quotations from newspapers and other periodicals all over the world.

The trouble with the Literary Digest was that it left its readers puzzled. It simply balanced one quotation against another without indicating, say, what value should be attached to one from the London Times and one from the Manchester Guardian. It was even suspected that the Digest's editors themselves had no sure information on such questions.

Luce and Hadden determined to avoid this error. They would not quote—or very little. They would assemble information and present their own version, condensed and authoritative. This was their first stroke of shrewd judgment. They knew that people like both impartiality (or the show of it) and authority; they want to know what to think.

Perhaps, since they were alert to hints from anywhere, they also were influenced by a weekly of that time named Town Topics. This one, always skating on the thin ice of libel, had a certain vogue from its way of giving backstairs gossip about the rich and prominent. At any rate this tone appeared in the new Luce-Hadden publication. The great of this earth were cut down to average size and talked about in an easy, gossipy way which made the reader feel not only familiar with them but that he was getting special inside information.

So these two young men evolved a winning combination. They satisfied the thirst for general information on politics, science, art, literature, or anything else, and at the same time made improvement of the mind painless. They printed no fiction, but their merchandise was found by many fully as entertaining as that offered by magazines whose purpose was to entertain.

To serve their idea Luce and Hadden devised a special technique and imposed it on the team they gathered about them. The word "streamlined" may first have been used of automobile bodies; certainly it was soon applied to the style of Time. All articles were short and snappy ("condensed" was the word). The reader was kept awake by slight twists in the meaning of familiar words, by constant analogy or comparison with the familiar. Above all, it appealed to its public by its assumption of omniscience.

Time was an expensive venture, and in spite of its popularity some years elapsed before it was out of the woods financially. About that period Hadden died (1929). Luce alone went on to new ventures and greater riches. Fortune first appeared in 1930, then the March of Time, finally in 1936 Life appeared as a picture weekly of the Luce consortium, the name being purchased from the failing comic weekly.

This last has been Luce's most spectacular success. Its excellent photography and ingenious presentation make it acceptable to people who generally think of picture publications as on a rather low level. Life also serves the purpose of giving Luce an organ of editorial opinion. In it he has revealed his growing wariness about Rooseveltism and, by the intermediary of ex-Ambassador William C. Bullitt, launched an attack on soviet Russia.

• • •

In the agitation which preceded the entry of the United States into the war Luce was on the side he was bound to take as a result of his early influences. He was born and spent his formative years in a missionary colony in China, exactly the sort of environment where the idea of the Anglo-Saxon community is taken for granted. His schooling at Hotchkiss, Yale, and Oxford was bound only to strengthen this assumption.

Time, to be sure, by its policy could not come out openly for American participation in the war. But it did everything it could to make such a course acceptable, to our public opinion, both by its slant on the presentation of news and its insinuations about the motives of any one who questioned the righteousness of either the western allies or of Russia.

Time would undoubtedly resent being put in such company, but the publication which most resembles it is Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express. Frequently in reading the latter's coverage of events at which I have myself been present I have wondered: "Could the Express writer and I really have been in the same country? Or looking at the same thing? Yet something vaguely like this story did happen."

This curious effect of "that's the way it was, only it wasn't that way" is beyond doubt the result of Beaverbrook's concept of the function of his newspaper. As one of his correspondents told me: "Beaverbrook impresses on all of us that the Express before anything else must be entertainment. It must be something the average Britisher can take down with his ham and eggs."

Likewise Time. It gives an image of the world, but it is the kind of image you would get in convex mirrors. That may be ascribed in good part to its policy of putting no strain on the reader, of being entertaining.

Besides that, and leaving aside minor errors (of which it makes plenty), Time gives the reader the distortion of brevity. It condenses the uncondensable. Events abroad and foreign policy cannot usually be disposed of with a few pert adjectives and a little spicy gossip. It's an elementary point that there's no virtue in using 500 words when 100 words will do. But it's also true that everything will be thrown out of perspective if you use only 100 words to say what requires 500.

The Reader's Digest, a monthly, has taken the place of the now defunct Literary Digest, a weekly. In form and makeup it more resembles two other publications of a bygone day, the Living Age and the Review of Reviews.

The popularity of the Digest likely lies on the feeling that for a quarter you are getting your full money's worth. In the number before me are condensed articles from 25 other publications, four other articles, and one serial part of the condensation of an as yet unpublished book. This last feature, every one would probably agree, is its really valuable one.

This periodical offers a little of everything except from the trashiest periodicals. It takes from the big popular magazines like the Saturday Evening Post and Collier's, from the genteel Atlantic and Harper's, from the vociferous leftists like the New Republic and the Saturday Review of Literature, and I see on its cover names I have seen nowhere else, like Pageant, Progressive, and Prairie Schooner.

If there is a principle of choice, other than to give the reader great variety, it is not evident. There away from the door a little. I then noticed the co-pilot, who had come down to this emergency exit. He was stooping on the other side, looking very scared and making quick motions for me to leave.

I suddenly realized that I had no idea how to jump from a plane—head first or feet first. I looked at the pilot again—he seemed even more impatient than before, so I tried feet first. The air flow forced my legs almost right back against the side of the bomber. I felt certain that I would be torn to pieces if I continued in this way, so I drew my legs into the aircraft and motioned to the pilot that he should go first.

I had a difficult time making myself understood—every time I signaled him to go out he made the same motion to me—but finally he understood and in a matter of seconds was out of the door—feet first. "So that is the way to do it," I thought. My next attempt at going out feet first was successful. With a great effort I kept my feet away from the side of the plane and stayed half in and half out only a second.

As I let go the sides of the hatch I tore my fingers a little, but did not hit my head as I expected to. Falling thru space, I was first conscious of having my oxygen mask torn from my face by the rush of air; then I realized that I was falling on my back and that my legs were above me. The resistance of the air held them in that position.

I had no sensation of falling, but rather of being in a terrific windstorm—the air was rushing and whistling about me. If I saw anything in the first few seconds after I jumped I was not conscious of it; only after I stopped tumbling and began to fall on my back do I remember seeing anything. Far above were the vapor trails of the fighters that had served as escort, and far off to the right were two tiny parachutes. "They must have pulled their rip cords immediately upon jumping," I thought.

• • •

Then I realized what a narrow escape I had had, and murmured half aloud: "Well, I'm still alive—what a miracle; but this chute hasn't opened yet, so I'd better not be too certain about my good luck. I won't pull the rip cord until I have to. I don't want any Germans to see where I come down or have time to take any pot shots at me up here."

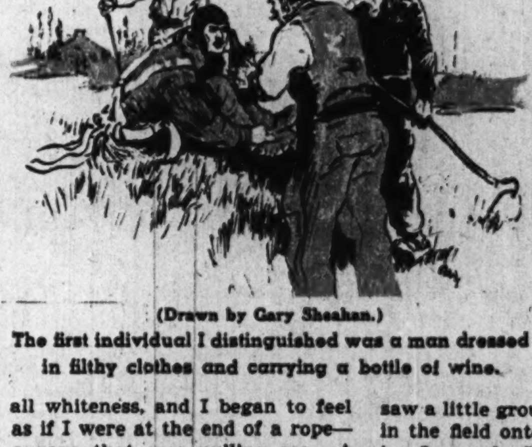
The cold was intense, and my hands [his mittens were fingerless] suffered most. In less than a minute they had lost their flexibility, and shortly afterward the fingers would hardly move. My other concern was my sinus, and as the pressure on my ear drums increased I regularly closed my mouth and held my nose, forcing air into the inner ear.

I looked at the ground very frequently in an effort to check the amount of distance I still had to fall. Major Yak had said, "When you can distinguish objects on the ground, pull that rip cord." During the time I fell before opening the parachute most of my concentration was spent on rubbing my hands, clearing my head, and checking the distance.

Gradually I began to spin. My body was still on a plane with the ground; my legs went around and around in increasingly quicker circles. Some of the officers back at the squadron had said that by putting out the left hand or the right hand a flat spin of this sort could be stopped. I tried putting each hand out separately and then both at once, but these actions had little effect upon the spinning.

I quickly came to the conclusion that only by opening my parachute could I stop the spinning. My painfully cold fingers and a vague anxiety of becoming unconscious because of lack of oxygen were the other two factors that convinced me that the time had come to pull the rip cord and open the chute.

I pulled—a blur of white and a tangle of cords darted away from me. Then the sky appeared to be all whiteness, and I began to feel as if I were at the end of a rope—a rope that was pulling me. A terrific jolt followed, and slowly I became more stabilized in the parachute harness. It took me a few seconds to realize that the parachute had functioned properly and that my life was no longer in immediate danger.



(Drawn by Gary Sheahan.)

The first individual I distinguished was a man dressed in filthy clothes and carrying a bottle of wine.

Floating earthward in a parachute one experiences the most intense and complete quiet and peace. The atmosphere seems almost unreal. The green fields and woods and the rivers and roads appear to be undisturbed by human beings. The war and guns are far away and only an occasional gust of wind reminds one that there is still life on earth. I had never felt so removed from mankind or so at peace.

Looking downward, I estimated that I must have fallen about 10,000 feet with the chute closed and that I had another 10,000 feet to go. My fingers now began to feel like stone; ridges such as appears after one's hands have been in water for a long time were discernible. Rubbing my hands together did no good; any action of my hands was agony. My efforts to readjust my harness, which was cutting my thighs, were of no avail, for my hands no longer functioned. The harness was terribly uncomfortable—so much so that at one point I thought I could no longer bear the pain and resolved to undo the leg straps and hold myself in the harness by my arms alone. I tried to unfasten the straps, but my fingers had no more strength—it was impossible to do it.

This was probably just as well, for this plan was rather dangerous, and shortly afterward the pain in my thighs diminished.

I began once again to enjoy the ride to earth. The wind became more gusty and blew me about, making me swing forward and backward like a pendulum. My legs disappeared from view and I could see only the ground below. This was rather disturbing, for even tho one knows that one's feet are not supporting one, it is a comfort to see them. I still lacked complete confidence in a parachute, and the steadier it was the more assured I felt.

Suddenly I came to the conclusion that these gusts of wind were blowing me upward and that I was not going down at all. To feel the possibility of being subjected to an indefinite ride in a parachute is demoralizing. For a few moments I was terrified, but then all at once I realized that I was falling, and falling rapidly.

Looking around the countryside, I could distinguish peasants' homes, roads flanked by tall green poplar trees, beautiful forests, and large patches of topsoil—this was certainly France. I could see people working in the fields—they were peasants; altho I had never met a French peasant before, I already felt a strong comradeship toward them. When I saw a little group of them standing in the field onto which I was falling I waved. It seemed rather ridiculous, and they did not wave back, for they probably thought I was German. By this time I was within 1,000 feet of the ground and it was easy to see that my descent was very quick.

Then I hit terra firma. For a moment I must have been dazed, and only slowly realized that my right foot was terribly painful and that peasants were rushing toward me from every direction.

The first individual I distinguished was a man dressed in filthy clothes and carrying a bottle of wine. "How French!" I thought, before directing my attention to my foot again.

Several were asking, "Blesse?" (wounded). I endeavored to explain that I was not actually wounded but badly hurt.

• • •

As I was inquiring about the proximity of the nearest German to my position, more people rushed up and excitedly asked, "Are you German?" Some one else said, "No." Then another demanded, "When will the war be over—blentot?" (soon). I put more feeling into my reply, "I hope so," than I ever had before.

The agony of my foot attracted all my attention and I did not attempt to answer any more questions. It seemed painful enough to be broken, I thought, but it still moves. Mother once told me how she had sprained her ankle while playing badminton. It had been agony, but she stood up and played the rest of the game, so I guess I can try. If the foot is broken it will soon become a compound fracture and then I shan't be able to go any farther. If it is only a sprain I ought to be able to go quite a distance from here and be well hidden when the Germans

The Winner, Say Chicago Women!

By 2 to 1 they choose the soap that cuts grease off dishes in a flash—yet helps hands stay soft and smooth

American Family Flakes Preferred By Twice As Many Women As Any Other Package Soap—Independent Dishwashing Survey Shows

"My hands feel so much softer and smoother, now that I'm using American Family Flakes for my dishes," says Mrs. Norman Larsen, 3329 W. Cortland. . . . And no wonder. For today's American Family Flakes are milder than any strong granulated soap—and so they are far kinder to hands.

"My greasy dishes come clean in no time at all, with American Family Flakes," writes Mrs. J. Falconer, 1138 N. LaVergne. . . . It's a fact. Scientific tests prove no soap in the world cuts grease faster than American Family Flakes.

"Suds just last and last," says Mrs. Russell Vette, 1319 North La Salle Street. . . . Yes, Mrs. Vette is right. American Family Flakes make more suds faster than any leading strong granulated soap, and those suds stand up 'til you're ready to empty the dishpan.

Don't Waste Soap! It's made of vital war materials. Make your American Family Flakes go as far as you can.

Heroines Are Hocking Their Halos!

LOOKING AT HOLLYWOOD with HEDDA HOPPER

(Copyright: 1945: The Chicago Tribune.)

Hollywood.

RED-BLOODED girls with plenty of vim, vigor, intrigue, and mischief in their make-up are about to supplant the long cycle of admirable women who have held the foreground in motion pictures for the last two years.

And to Ernst Lubitsch, who has created many vogues in the 30 years he has been in our business, goes credit for the initial venture in 1945.

Tallulah Bankhead as Catherine in "A Royal Scandal."

Shortly you will see Tallulah Bankhead in the red-blooded role of Catherine in Ernst Lubitsch's "A Royal Scandal." Catherine was a character both in history books and the Lubitsch film. She always got her man. Her technique was direct as the archer's arrow. Her methods fell short of murder—at least so far as her screen credit in this one goes—altho the boys who wrote the textbooks gave her wider latitude.

"Catherine might be said to represent the wish dreams of all women, especially the very repressed and quiet ones," said Lubitsch with that merry, naughty twinkle which is as much a part of his trademark as his big black cigar or his trick of making box office hits.

"Of course, Hedda, Bankhead makes Catherine a little more attractive than any other actress could possibly make her. Because the Bankhead influence is a highly contagious thing, either on the stage or in films, every woman comes out of the theater colored by the Bankhead influence.

"I remember when Bankhead was at Twentieth Century for 'Lifeboat.' All our ingenues crowded the Hitchcock set to watch her. Then all of them suddenly sprang hoarse baritone voices when they went to read their lines. Of course imitation is sincerest flattery, but a good many of them who took it seriously had to be sent back into the hands of the dialog coaches as a result."

Vincent Price of "Dragonwyck" as he appeared with Helen Hayes in the stage play "Victoria Regina."

Since this is a day of action for women, with more females active outside the home than at any time in American history, I can see where the Catherine type is singularly timely, and I'll agree with that. We've had a spate of saints and scientists, from Jennifer Jones in "The Song of Bernadette" to Greer Garson in "Madame Curie." We've had cozy Mrs. Miniver and noble, strong-hearted wives like Claudette Colbert in "Since You Went Away." We've had Maria Veronica in "The Keys of the Kingdom" and Irene Dunne's two characterizations of admirable women in "The White Cliffs of Dover" and "A Guy Named Joe." And as the motion picture industry seldom stands still sufficiently long to allow moss to grow on the pavement before the box office window, I can see where a radical change will be good all the way around.

Since Twentieth Century-Fox is snapping up all the best sellers—they now own a list of 20 or more—and since the trend of current literature is toward meatier heroes and heroines, Darryl Zanuck will be the first to inaugurate the new vogue on the screen.

Gene Tierney will draw one of the outstanding examples of this new type in the role of Ellen in "Leave Her to Heaven." Ellen is a girl with a will of reinforced concrete. She has no scruples whatsoever, even when it comes to shoving a little lad out of a boat when he interferes with her share of her husband's time and attention. Make no mistake, there are such women in the world—read your daily papers if you don't believe me—and Author Ben Ames Williams thought the tribe sufficiently interesting to make one the leading figure of a novel that hit best seller mark before the studios dared give it a nod. Before Gene Tierney begins this one she will play the young wife in "Dragonwyck," a dramatically gaited study well suited to her talents as you now know her.

In "Dragonwyck" the meaty touch comes in with the husband's role, played by Vincent Price. This is one of the finer studies in murder—or rather I should say the very fine art of murder. Price has one of the most complex and difficult personalities to interpret that he has yet attempted in his career on stage and screen. There is no mitigating quality of psychopathic taint in the master of Dragonwyck. Cold, patrician, utterly devoid of scruple, and brooking no interference when fate blocks his plans, he murders the wife who stands between him and the girl he wants. Price made good on Broadway in "Angel Street"—a play made in Hollywood under the title "Gaslight"—another study in murder.

If "Forever Amber" can be scripted in a way to skirt possible Hays office objections this will be a role to end all roles of the type. Practically any star you want to name in Hollywood would give her eyeteeth to get a crack at it.

Many of our actresses who have been satisfied to play the sweet and merely beautiful, or the truly fine and noble, as in the case of Greer Garson, are beginning to get that restless feeling. Among the pre-war civilian population such a feeling generally resulted in a study of the travel folders, purchase of an extravagant wardrobe, or, if those things were out, a trip to the coiffeurs for an absolutely different hair-do. To an actress it means change of type. If you've played Mme. Curie with those leg-o'-mutton shirtwaists with tight little collars, bell-gored skirts, and uncompromising sailor hats, Bankhead in an ostrich feather bertha, emerald eardrops, and the plush setting of the Russian court must look pretty good to you.

So it looks as if Greer Garson, too, will get her chance at a bad girl role. It's the star part in "Drivin' Woman"—a character that, morally irreproachable, gives the effect of a ruthless beauty without shred of scruple. But next to Scarlett O'Hara in "Gone with the Wind" America Moncure has the most overweening lust for money of any lady who has yet drawn the attention of Hollywood.

Paulette Goddard's recently finished "Kitty" is a study in witchery also. It is far removed from the sweet-and-lovelies of the last few years.

Come to think of it, most great acting roles center around red-blooded women. There have been a score of famous Carmens since Emma Calve. But who remembers Micaela, the sweet blonde whose chief recommendation was her thoughtfulness for Don Jose's mother? Bad girls certainly have something.

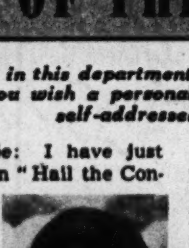
VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Miss Tinée: I have just seen Ella Raines in "Hail the Conquering Hero" and "Tall in the Saddle," and I've been wondering where Hollywood has been hiding talent and beauty such as that. Would you please print a little about her, also her address and maybe a picture? Thanks. If I could afford it I'd send you a bouquet of orchids for your swell column. Best of wishes and good luck. JOSE.



Ella Raines

Ella certainly hasn't been hidden. Did you miss "Corvettes in Action" and "Cry Havoc"? She's 5 feet 5, weighs 110, has brown hair and green eyes. Got her dramatic training in high school and college. Born and raised in Washington, and discovered by a movie scout while in New York. Married to Capt. Kenneth Trout of the army. Your verbal bouquet pleases us just as much as a real one would.

Dear Mae Tinée: I wonder if you would give me space enough in your column to register a protest. I don't think I'm a crank, but of recent years the amount of eating that goes on in movie theaters has just about driven me out of them. It used to be that one encountered that only in the neighborhood houses, and generally at the Saturday and Sunday matinees, with children in attendance. That surely is understandable and one could avoid those houses or those performances. However, even in the first class theaters, where top prices are charged, it's difficult to enjoy a film with the amount of chewing and munching and paper-rattling that goes on. Those houses are generally crowded and it's impossible to move away from the annoyers. Can't something be done about it? Surely the theater owners don't approve. M. S.

I agree with you about the obnoxious eaters, but don't see what can be done about it. It also seems to me that the owners not only condone it but encourage it when they sell candy, popcorn, peanuts, or what have you in the lobbies.

One Goodman Who Isn't Hard to Find, or Take

Benny Goodman . . . back to the band field.

BY THE time you read this Benny Goodman may have left Billy Rose's extravagant "Seven Lively Arts" for the purpose of building a big band. At least the move is imminent, with Raymond Scott scheduled to take B. G.'s place. The news is good, for the big band world needs another touch of Goodman. Ever since the days when he used to play in Chicago outfits in short pants this Goodman has been easy to find in the music world. He is a real musician, with a love of study that is amazing. His ventures into serious music are more than just the fad of a jazz great. They are sincere expressions of a talent that has seldom been topped. Benny is credited with creating the word "swing" as a noun defining a type of music. He has recorded almost endlessly with a wide variety of bands, including many of his own combinations, large and small.

• • •

Some time ago Benny was sextetting it for COLUMBIA, with Cootie Williams on the trumpet, Georgie Auld on sax, Charlie Christian on guitar, Artie Bernstein on bass, Harry Yeager drums, and Ken Kercey piano. (Okay, so it's Goodman and a sextet). Their high point was a disk featuring "Fiesta in Blue" and "I Can't Give You Anything but Love, Baby." The former is a Cootie Williams triumph, the latter a showcase for the individual players. Each takes a solo except Yeager and Kercey, who do a fast overlay for the entire side. It is not much as a musical production, but a lovely demonstration of virtuosity.

More recently Benny and his quintet cut two "Seven Lively Arts" numbers by Cole Porter for COLUMBIA—"Only Another Boy and Girl" and "Ev'ry Time We Say Goodbye." Teddy Wilson's piano in the first is superb, as is Benny's clarinet, and Lionel Hampton fills in a bell-clear vibraharp background. Jane Harvey, who may join the big Goodman band, sings a grand song. Peggy Mann does the honors on the "Goodbye" side, with the clarinet and vibes furnishing the highlights.

Do you like the idea of a recording program on the air featuring a particular jazz or swing great each time, with background and discussion? Just thinking out loud!—W. D.

Data on Dates!

(Copyright: 1945: The Chicago Tribune.)

SOMETIMES it's hard to tell which side of this boy-dates-girl setup is the more difficult. A gal may argue that fellows are sometimes rather hard to impress to the point of popping the "what are you doing Friday night?" question, but the average fellow is sure that it's much harder to cope not only with a girl but with her whole family besides. So, just to make it a little easier for those high school Joes who find fright in every father and fear in every mother, here are a few helpful hints for both the fellow and girl in the case to follow in order to lessen the strain.

First in the girl department—because meeting the family can often be a trap that ensnares even the smoothest and sharpest talking of high school characters—it's up to you, the gal, to make the process as painless as possible. And one of the biggest helps is to save the fellow from facing the family alone—at least for the first few dates. It may take a little extra planning; you may have to take your bath after school instead of waiting until after dinner, you might have to hurry thru the dishes to get ready on time, but if you can manage to be set to open the front door for the fellow when he rings, he'll love you for it. A fellow is often grateful for the sight of a familiar face in the midst of all the strangers that are your family.

Introductions don't have to be a problem, tho they often are. It's good to keep them simple. "Mother, may I present Joe Jackson?" is a fine start, and if you carry it all the way down the line to your little brother, playing tiddlywinks in the middle of the living room floor, it helps clear up any cases of mistaken identity. After all, if three men are sitting in the living room no fellow can figure out by himself which is your father, which your Uncle George, and which the man from next door who came over to play gin rummy!

There's bound to be some conversation before the two of you go on your merry way, and, especially if this is the first date, your family will want to find out a little bit about what the boy is like. So it's up to you to get the talk started. The family has probably heard you talk about this fellow before, but it will refresh their memories if you remind them that Joe is the boy who made that final basket against Central in last week's game and who painted most of the props for the class play.

From there on either your father or mother is bound to make some comments or ask a few questions, and if the character is as smooth as you think he is he'll be able to come across with a few answers. But do help the fellow get a start—after all, you know the family better than he does!

Introductions don't have to be a problem. It's good to keep them simple. "Mother, may I present Joe Jackson?" is a fine start.

If this small talk drags out more than 15 minutes or so the fellow is probably getting a little restless—he may have plans for meeting the couple you're doubling with at a special time, or he may have wanted to catch the first movie uptown. Then it's up to you to start the move toward the front door with a casual remark about it's getting late and perhaps the kids will be waiting for the two of you. He'll thank you for it, because he was probably wondering how to make the move without seeming too anxious to leave.

• • •

With all this help from the gal, the fellow shouldn't have too much trouble. But there are few things that he should keep in mind if the evening is to turn out as wonderfully as he had planned. It takes a little timing to make a perfect entrance—not too early, not too late—in fact, at exactly the time you told your date you'd pick her up. If you breeze in half an hour before the appointed time you're likely to find the family in the midst of their dinner, and they won't be too happy about that; and if you come in on the other side of the zero hour it may start nasty little thoughts about "that unreliable young fellow" circulating thru the gal's mother's head. And either one is bad—you started out to impress them, didn't you?

Presuming that the gal has met you at the door, introductions are the next in order. And let's hope you can do more in acknowledgment than just nod your head and mumble something into your coat collar. All that's required is a coherent "How do you do?", and any fellow who has talked himself into a date ought to be able to manage that much.

But suppose that the gal didn't meet you at the door, despite all your hopes that she would. Don't just assume that the entire family knows who you are—introduce

New Circular Cut Gives Sleek Lines to Hair-Do

By ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

(Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.)

NO ONE would question the fact that the American woman is the best coifed woman in the world. Nor would they question that the chief reason for this is the technical superiority of the American hairdressers. They meet every emergency, every need, every type of woman. Currently one of the behind-the-scenes factors in all this technical proficiency, the American Hair Design institute, has created a new and original styling which it claims is set to make coiffure history.

This is the circular cut, based on an entirely new principle of shaping and blocking the hair before a single strand is either cut, tapered, or thinned. The sectioning is done in a unique circular fashion that follows the exact conformation of the head. It eliminates the old square Dutch effect. It does away with uneven wisps and ragged ends, and it creates a balanced shaping all around the head.

Whether the hair is three inches long or twenty, if it is properly shaped it instantly becomes more manageable. Waves and curls automatically spring back into place without droop or drip. Best of all, it enables you to manage your own hair between visits to the hairdresser with a minimum of fuss.

It is said that the same principle applies to the circular haircut as applies to a dress with good lines. It is the cutting that gives the dress its lines.

JOURNEY UNDERGROUND!

start to search the area, so I'll try standing and walking.

Just as I came to this conclusion three explosions which sounded like rifle fire occurred. I was on my feet in an instant and was starting to move, but one of the men said that it was only anti-aircraft fire and that the nearest Germans were 10 kilometers away. With this assurance I sat down again.

This false alarm had at least showed me that I could stand on my feet, so I started to take off my parachute harness and prepare to leave. My hands were still almost frozen and were useless in undoing the buckles of the harness. Another man helped me take the chute and my Mae West off. I asked this man if he could hide me. He gave me an odd look which made me think that he would have liked to help but was a little suspicious. He said guardedly: "There are about 100 people in this field. It is too dangerous for any one person to step out and help an allied airman, if you are an allied airman, for among the hundred there may be one collaborator. Go down the road to the right, if you don't want to be seen, and eventually you will come to the Marne river. There on the wooded banks you will be safe."

I thanked him for the information and asked him to hide the equipment I had thrown on the ground. Several of the others joined him in saying they would hide the things. As I arose to my feet the pain in my foot became acute. I must have made quite a grimace, for it provoked a little girl to remark, "Quel courage!" (What courage), which made me feel that I had overdone it. Walking, or, rather, stumbling and limping, was rather difficult, but I managed.

• • •

After going 50 yards I remembered the first aid kit that was tied to my harness and thought it would be very useful for my sprain, so I shouted back at the people still gathered around my equipment, asking them to bring it to me.

The French equivalent of first aid baffled me. I tried "Premiere assistance," but the people definitely did not get the idea, so I gave up.

When I had covered another 50 yards I found myself on the edge of a little creek, surrounded by children. Altho these were country children, I was rather surprised to see that they looked so healthy in occupied France. This creek constituted a serious obstacle and it was only with the coöperation of the children, who pushed and pulled me from every angle, that I was able to cross to the other side.

In the middle of the operation some one brought up the question of my flying boots. "You must take those off," he said, and every one stopped helping me until a decision was reached. Arguments grew more heated until I could stand it no longer, and managed to cross the rest of the stream myself.

Once safely across, I took off the boots, and while one person suggested sinking them in the water, another pointed out the stupidity of this idea. This argument was finally brought to a close by a little, fat, authoritative man who rushed up to me and took the boots himself. Then he grabbed my arm and guided me on my way. This was certainly the underground type, I thought. I couldn't have been more delighted and was sure that I would soon be under the protection of the resistance movement.

• • •

This was a short-lived delusion, for soon we came to a road, and there, with my boots in hand, he parted, saying, "Allez—par la." (go that way). I found myself standing in front of a very strange looking man. He was grimy and badly but colorfully dressed and he carried a music box and a cane. The cane most attracted me, for it would have been a great help in limping along with my bad foot.

Just as I was going to ask for it I noticed the cane to be a very unusual one — gold handled and finely carved. Probably it was a family heirloom or at least a great souvenir which a Frenchman would treasure dearly, so I walked on without speaking to him.

The road soon went into a dense wood. It was a dirt road and as I walked along it I made no sound. The presence of Germans on this path seemed remote, but I felt that stealth was called for. Gradually I became a little fearful of meeting one of those Germans, and when emerging from the other side of the wood made a careful survey of the countryside that lay between me and the next patch of woodland.

There were two houses I could see and only two women plowing a field, so I sallied forth boldly. The two women quickly spotted me and rushed up with their hands full of large, delicious looking peaches. They insisted that I take them, which I gladly did, but carrying them proved to be a big problem. In order to look unmilitary I had taken my battle jacket off and was carrying it in my hands—with low shoes, green service trousers, and a tan civilian shirt. I could fool some one at a distance, but with one hand full I could not very easily manage three big peaches in the other. I tried stuffing them in my shirt, but that did not work and I quickly lost two.

The women assured me that there were no Germans near-by and said, as the others had, that I should go toward the Marne and hide in the woods there. They then guided me across the stretch of land lying before the next wood. One went about 100 yards ahead and the other on the flank, while I followed a fence. Any one observing this performance must have become very suspicious, for the girl ahead would run a few yards, then duck down, peer about her, and then stand up to wave me upward.

My foot was very painful, but I was forced to run most of the way across the plain. We safely reached the next wood, which was much thinner than the last but which nevertheless gave good cover. I thanked the women and they wished me luck and went back to tilling the soil.

Periodicals

does seem to be a general tendency to remain as neutral as possible, so the selections even from periodicals red-hot in tone are on subjects which will rouse little controversy or none.

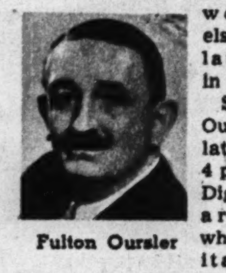
The Reader's Digest is a blessing to a large number of people intent on improving themselves and on "keeping up with things," who think that has to be done by reading periodicals. The editors of the Digest do the job for them and offer only the choice culls of the month. That is the assumption. So the reader improves himself with the minimum of effort and also saves time, an important consideration with our people.

The Digest is much used in our educational institutions to furnish examples of good writing for classes in English and material for discussion clubs. Thereby it has lately got itself into a row which looks like much ado about nothing but has revealed a report that the Digest "plants" a certain proportion of the material it later reprints.

• • •

The magazine and newspaper committee of the National Council of Teachers of English drew up a report allegedly showing this feature of the Digest's technique, a report rejected by the executive committee of the council as "unreliable, unscientific, and lacking objectivity." What the report purported to show was that the Digest was selling its goods under false pretenses, that it was posing as presenting an impartial cross section of American thought, but in reality a good part of that thought originated with the Digest's own staff and found its way back there after a first printing somewhere else.

The matter was taken up editorially in the world-saving Nation and brought a reply from Fulton Oursler, a "senior editor" of the Digest, printed in the Nation of Jan. 6, 1945. According to him, out of 1,095 articles which appeared in his periodical in 30 months ending June, 1944, only 155 were "devoted to economics, government and politics, industrial relations, and international relations." "Out of these," he continued "41 articles were first created thru the coöperation of editors of other magazines with editors of the Digest, were published elsewhere, and later reprinted in the Digest."



Fulton Oursler

So, as Mr. Oursler calculates, less than 4 per cent of the Digest's total of articles were what the uncharitable would call "plants," and he adds, "Even of the 4 per cent, very few of the atricles were controversial in character."

The Nation, which apparently wants to get the Digest on the hip, pointed out that only the 155 articles in Mr.. Oursler's enumeration counted (no one cares what's the origin of an article on trout fishing or on air-borne germs), and that on this basis Oursler admits that 26½ per cent of the Digest's articles were "plants."

Its conclusion is that the special committee of the National Council of Teachers of English "performed a useful service in calling attention to the extent to which the Digest is not a 'digest' but a staff-planned publication whose planning, by Mr. Oursler's own admission, affects the contents of other magazines as well as the Digest itself."

The point seems to be well taken. A periodical which pretends to be an impartial cross section of opinion presumably should know beforehand nothing of the articles which it will reprint. When it not only has such knowledge but may virtually be said to have written the articles itself (at least decided or agreed on the line they are going to take), something is wrong. It looks like loaded dice.

More harsh words are undoubtedly coming the Digest's way for its recent condensation of the book "Report on the Russians," by William L. White. This Mr. White appears to give the Russians a perfectly fair deal, but in some passages he shows that life in Russia is far from being any carnival; in fact, it's just plain awful. That will never do; what the professional friends of Russia in America want is not a fair deal.

Lend-Lease for Russia!

The American fighter planes lined up on this Alaskan field are awaiting Russian pilots. This is part of the tremendous lend-lease traffic between America and Russia. One of the most spectacular phases of lend-lease aid to Russia was the work of the now almost liquidated Persian gulf command of the United States army. Established in 1942 to ship critically needed supplies to Russia by the then only available route—by rail and truck from Persian gulf ports to Teheran and by truck to Kasvin (see map at right)—the command had handled 4,500,000 tons of American goods by the first of this year. Shorter routes thru the Dardanelles now have lessened the need of the Persian gulf life line.

"SUNDAY DINNER for a SOLDIER"

1 Grandpa (Charles Winninger), a Spanish-American war veteran with more generosity than financial acumen, has invited a soldier to Sunday dinner. Granddaughter Tess (Anne Baxter) asks him how he expects to provide food for an extra mouth.

2 Thru a mixup the children spot Aerial Gunner Eric Moore (John Hodiak) and bring him home, thinking he's the guest. Tess manages to serve a fitting meal.

3 Doing voluntary K. P. after dinner, the soldier wins Tess' heart by understanding her dreams of all the nice things she and the younger children can't have.

4 Later Grandpa brings out his fiddle, and with Jeep (Bobby Driscoll) calling the turns, Tess and the soldier dance.

6 At left: Then the soldier is gone. And long after the poor, lonely family remembers the happy day he brought them. One day a bomber flies over and dips its wings in salute. Eric is bound overseas. (THE END)

Fights Corrosion...so Water Fog can Fight Fire

Water fog is man-made . . . sea water forced through a nozzle with screen holes so fine they make a vapor-blanket that smothers even raging oil and gasoline flames. And, equally important, water fog does not capsize ships with needless tons of water.

The screen for the nozzle that makes water fog must stand off the corrosive bite of salt water, yet stand up to terrific pressure despite its thin construction. Therefore, it contains a high percentage of Nickel—the tough metal which is used in alloys that fight rust and corrosion.

...just as it Fights Corrosion in your Home Fire Extinguisher

If fire strikes in your home or garage, your fire extinguisher must be ready—not clogged or frozen by rust or corrosion. That's why many types have valve seats, discs and springs made of Nickel alloys—metals that stand up in "standby" service as well as in everyday use. In this, as in countless other ways, versatile Nickel is your "unseen friend"—part of your daily life, like the starch in your shirts or the salt in your food.

More than One Meat Ball

CRUMB MACAROONS

- 2 eggs, well beaten
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 cup finely rolled dry bread crumbs
- 1 cup brown or white sugar

Add salt and vanilla to beaten eggs. Combine crumbs and sugar and add. Mix well and drop from teaspoon onto greased baking sheet. Bake in 350 degree oven about 8 to 10 minutes, or until lightly browned.—MRS. JEWEL FOSTER, 401 Fullerton pkwy., Chicago.

By MARY MEADE

MEAT BALLS needn't always be served with spaghetti. They make a fine dinner served upon a bed of seasoned corn—canned or frozen corn, done up with green pepper rings.

MEAT BALLS WITH CORN

(Serves six to eight)

- 1 pound ground beef
- ½ pound ground pork
- ½ cup soft bread crumbs
- 1 small onion, grated
- 1 egg, slightly beaten
- 1 tablespoon salt
- ½ teaspoon pepper
- 1 teaspoon sage
- Fat for browning
- 1 can corn or 1 package frozen corn
- 1 green pepper, cut in rings

Combine meats with crumbs, onion, egg, and seasonings and mix thoroly. Form into small balls and roll in flour. Brown in fat until meat is cooked thru. Heat corn with green pepper rings and season with salt and pepper. Place on hot platter. Top corn with meat balls and serve hot.

Left-over roast lamb makes an excellent dish with apples and curry powder to extend it and add zest. Serve a dish like this with boiled rice or noodles.

APPLE LAMB CURRY

(Serves six)

- 3 apples, pared, cored, and sliced
- 1 large onion, sliced
- 1 clove garlic
- 1 tablespoon margarine
- 1 tablespoon flour
- 1 tablespoon curry powder
- ½ lemon, juice and grated rind
- 1 can bouillon or 1¼ cups lamb broth
- 1 teaspoon kitchen bouquet
- ½ cup seedless raisins
- 2 whole cloves
- 2 cups cubed, cooked lamb

Saute apple, onion, and garlic in margarine until brown. Remove garlic. Add flour mixed with curry powder, blending well. Add combined lemon juice, bouillon, seasoning, grated lemon rind, raisins, and cloves. Cover and simmer 30 minutes. Add lamb and heat thoroly. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Serve with rice.

• • •

If your company meal must be pointless, how about a shrimp bisque? This fish soup is hearty enough to be the main course at a luncheon. Accompany it with a tossed vegetable salad and hot corn bread. For dessert, deep dish apple pie made with honey instead of sugar.

SHRIMP BISQUE

(Serves four to six)

- 2 cups cooked or canned shrimps
- 1 cup white wine (chablis, hock, sauterne, or riesling)
- 2 tablespoons minced onion
- ¼ cup chopped celery
- ¼ cup margarine
- 2 cups milk
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1 cup cream
- 1 can mushrooms (optional).
- Salt, pepper

Chop shrimps and simmer for 5 minutes in the wine. Cook onion and celery in margarine for 5 minutes, add flour, and blend. Add milk and cook, stirring constantly, until sauce is thickened and smooth. Add cream and mushrooms. Stir in shrimps and wine. Season to taste with salt and pepper, heat thoroly, and serve at once.

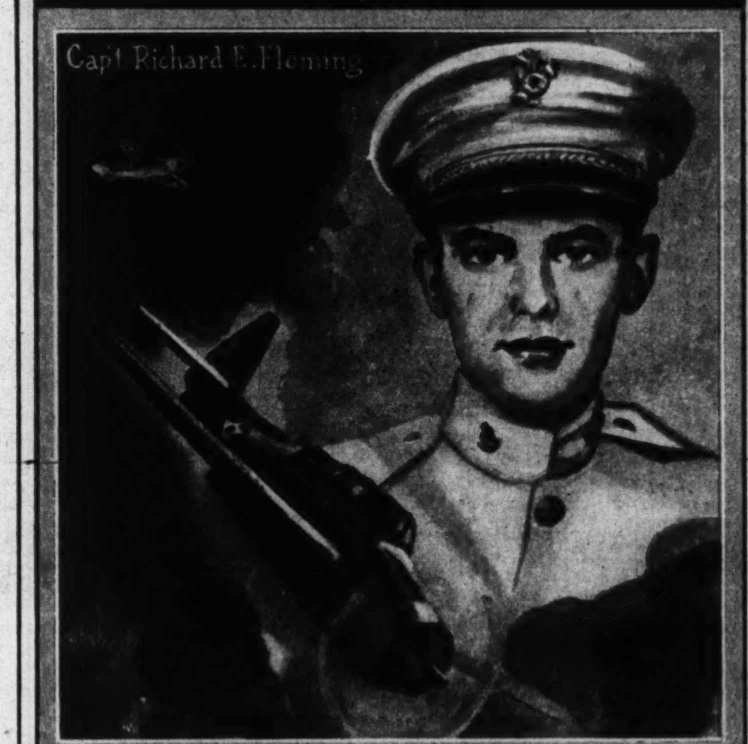
AMERICAN HEROES OF WORLD WAR II.



This is another of the series on outstanding American heroes of the present war. Subjects for the series are chosen from among heroes who have been decorated for valor. Illustrations are by Clara Fargo Thomas and Alexander Vernack.

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

IN THE battle of Midway, fought early in June, 1942, the Japanese navy suffered its first decisive defeat in 350 years. One of the outstanding heroes of this battle and of the present war as well was Capt. Richard E. Fleming, flight officer of a marine scout bombing squadron. The price that he paid for his fame was high indeed—he lost his life.

When his squadron commander was shot down during the initial attack on an enemy aircraft carrier Captain Fleming took command of the division. Leaving the remainder of his formation, he dived to the dangerously low altitude of 400 feet, exposing himself to enemy fire in order to score a hit on the ship.

• • •

On the following day Captain Fleming led the second division of his squadron in a mass dive bombing assault upon a Japanese battleship. Putting his plane into an approach glide, he again dived and succeeded in scoring a near miss on the target. His plane was hit by anti-aircraft shells and caught fire, and, unable to pull out of the treacherous dive, Fleming, with his ship a mass of flames, crashed into the sea.

The mother of the gallant flyer, Mrs. M. E. Fleming of St. Paul, Minn., appeared at the White House in Washington on Nov. 24 of that year to receive from the President the medal of honor (congressional medal), which had been awarded posthumously to her son. Captain Fleming was the first marine corps aviator to win the medal of honor in World War II. and the fifth in the whole history of marine aviation. The citation accompanying the award stated that his "dauntless perseverance and unyielding devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States naval service."

YOUTH ON THE CAMPUS

By ELEANOR NANGLE

Lafayette, Ind.

THERE IS A JILL for every Jack at Purdue university these days, in striking contrast to the past decades of its history as a school famed for engineering, science, and agriculture, when the men students outnumbered the women by about five to one. The change is partly due to the war, which drains every campus of most of the men over 18, but partly due, too, to the great growth of Purdue's home economics school, which is attracting girls from all over the state and the country.

"Imports" were always a feature of Purdue festivities in the past, because there were just never enough girls to dance with all the budding engineers and agriculturists. But no more. We venture to say that at least 95 per cent of the girls who attended this year's interfraternity dance in the Memorial union were campus residents—and there was beauty all over the place.

The acknowledged beauty of the evening was Mary Teal, a freshman out of Detroit, and a Pi Phi, who was crowned "queen of the campus" by no less a personage than the dignified university president, Edward C. Elliott, who placed a tiara of gardenias on her blonde head and bequeathed to her "all powers that are light and gay." In her court were Nancy Unthank of Chicago, a senior; Jane Smith of West Unity, O., a junior, and Patricia Harding of Gary, a junior. These three, with Queen Mary, are the four official Debris (yearbook) beauties for 1945.

In the broadest possible sense Purdue is dedicated to the winning of the war, operating on a year 'round basis and throwing almost all its resources, which are vast and peculiarly suited to the needs, into war training. Since Pearl Harbor, marines, soldiers, and sailors have been assigned to the university for various types of specialized training. And war training programs for groups of girls have been conducted on the campus for the Radio Corporation of America and the Curtiss-Wright corporation. At the moment 82 of the latter group are here, being trained as engineering aids who will eventually work at the Wright plant in Dayton, O.

And there is research galore, of course, much of it secret. Not long ago the university was presented the distinguished service award of the ordnance department of the United States army for its achievements in the development of war material for the armed services.

Purdue, you'll gather, is simply humming. Even the girls, we discovered, are enthusiastic about acceleration. More of them here than at any campus we've visited recently have sustained their original enthusiasm for attending consecutive terms without a break so that they can do four years' work in two years and eight months.

MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS BY BOB BECKER

DOG OWNERS usually have questions to ask about dog care or training. Here are some typical inquiries in this week's mail:

"Our dog always has fleas. We have tried everything to get rid of them. He has been bathed every two weeks with a flea soap. Then after he's dry we rub plenty of flea powder in his coat. We also tried bathing him with a strong laundry soap, followed by a rinse with a strong disinfectant. But the dog still has fleas. Can you tell us how to get rid of fleas?

"RAY C. H."

It sounds very much as if you were unknowingly running a flea hatchery accessible to your dog. There are none of these insects outdoors now, so there must be a flea-breeding spot which the dog frequents. We suggest you disinfect the dog's bedding. It's very likely that the pet is acquiring new crops of fleas from his bed. Eradicate them there or in other places frequented by the pet and he should be flealess after one more application of a powder or dip made especially to kill fleas and lice. However, better go easy with strong soaps and disinfectants on your dog, as they may develop a skin irritation.

"Can you tell me the name of a good kennel where I could obtain a trained pointer? I also have a cocker spaniel pup, so I'd like to get a book on the training of this dog both for the home and for hunting. I. G., Aurora, Ill."

We are sending you a list of kennels which may be able to locate a trained pointer. Dogs are scarce (especially trained hunting dogs), so you may have to try several kennels. If you want an inexpensive handbook on training a cocker for the home, "Training the Dog," published by this department, will help you. This illustrated book tells how to teach a dog to obey simple commands which give you control over him and make him well mannered. The book is sold by the Public Service Office of The Tribune, 1 S. Dearborn st., for 30 cents by mail. Remittances should be made direct to that office. An old but very good book on training spaniels for hunting is "Spaniels, Their Breaking for Sport and Field Trials," by H. W. Carleton.

"I have a beautiful female dog, coal black. I bought her believing she was a cocker spaniel. When I tried to get her papers I was told that her sire was a springer. Since then I have heard that there is a breed of dogs called sprockers, a combination of the two. Is this true? If there is such a breed, what about the possibility of it being registered?

"MRS. W. H. W."

If there is such a breed as the "sprocker," a cross between the springer and cocker spaniel, the promoters behind it certainly have kept it a secret from us. There would be no particular advantage in crossing these two beautiful breeds.

"We are buying a Kerry blue terrier puppy 7 weeks old. Since we never have owned a dog before, we would like to know if you have a booklet on care and raising of this particular breed.

"MRS. F. O."

This department has no booklets on how to raise Kerry blue terriers. However, you do not need a special booklet on any specific breed in order to raise a puppy. Puppies of these medium-sized breeds thrive on the same foods. There isn't much difference in the general care of the breeds. All of them should receive the same obedience training. Any good book on puppies will help you with your Kerry, for such a book will tell you about meals for the pup, early care, distemper, and other subjects. One that may be mentioned is "How to Raise and Train Your Puppy," which is on sale in any book store.

"We have a new setter about 4 months old. Is it necessary to give cod liver oil to dogs of this age?

"J. L. B."

At this time of the year it's a pretty good idea to give puppies a little cod liver oil. Most breeders include it in the diet of young dogs.

The English setter has been a favorite with sportsmen and those interested in showing dogs for many years. This well groomed specimen which poses so expertly is the champion show dog End o' Maine Sorry, owned by Dr. Milton O. Hager, New York.

yourself! This taken care of, no doubt they'll ask you to sit down. If they motion toward one particular chair, that's fine. That simplifies things. Just sit down in it.

But if they leave the choice up to you it's sometimes hard to decide between an uncomfortable looking stiff-backed chair on one side of the room and an overstuffed number on the other. So just pick the one nearest you. This avoids all coffee table hazards and keeps you from tripping over the little brother who is still playing tiddlywinks in the middle of the floor.

Without the gal's help to get the conversation rolling it will be a little more difficult, but you might try to get the honey chile's father started on a discussion of how long the war is going to last in Europe or whether he thinks the social security tax ought to be increased, and then just sit back and listen. That should take at least 15 or 20 minutes, and by that time your little piece of date bait for the evening ought to be ready.

• • •

It's easier to make conversation with mothers, because all that's necessary is to point the talk in the direction of her daughter and you're off to a fine start. Anything complimentary is bound to make a hit, because the mother will be happy to find some one as interested in her little honey chile as she is.

When the gal finally puts in her appearance, making apologies for taking so long but looking well worth the wait, it's up to you to make a gracious exit. The gal will probably make the first move toward the door, but it's up to you to take the cue. Help her on with her coat, share her struggle with her stadium boots, and then get ready to roll. But not before you say good night to the family.

If you find yourself a little tongue-tied just say you are happy to have met them or that you hope to see them again. (And the way your date looks tonight, you certainly do hope to be around this way again, and often!) But whatever happens, do say more than good-by. There's no use spoiling the good impression you worked so hard to make.

Once safely out of the house, with no blunders made and all the gal's family your friends, you're on your own. From here on in the evening's up to you!

"and more vitamins per glass!"

Six years of independent scientific tests prove it! California navels—the top-quality winter oranges with that tempting, full-bodied flavor—give you more health per glass. You get more vitamin C. (Authorities say this is a vitamin every good breakfast should supply). You get more vitamin A and calcium, too, plus valuable amounts of vitamins B_1, B_2, and other needed minerals.

So insist on bright, clean-skinned California navel oranges for juice. You can see the difference. You can taste the difference. And science proves the vitamin difference!

Good eating, too! California navels are truly seedless, and easy to peel, slice and section. They are perfect for salads and desserts, for lunch boxes and between-meal treats.

Dependable quality has made Sunkist Oranges America's largest selling brand. They are the finest tree-ripened fruit from 14,500 cooperating California and Arizona citrus growers.

"My favorite beauty trick—the 1-Minute Mask"... NANCY LEEDS

How to have a smoother, clearer, "new" complexion

Cover your face from chin to forehead (everything but your eyes) with an ermine-white Mask of Pond's Vanishing Cream.

Leave the Mask on for one whole minute. Pond's Vanishing Cream has "keratolytic" action—it loosens and dissolves scaly little "chappings"! Goes after imbedded dirt particles, too! After one minute, tissue off.

The Mask "re-styles" your complexion! Makes it look clearer and lighter. Makes it feel smoother—beautifully "finished" for make-up! Give yourself a 1-Minute Mask 3 or 4 times a week.

STUDEBAKER WEASEL

BUILT BY STUDEBAKER . . . POWERED BY STUDEBAKER CHAMPION ENGINE

IN the forbidding tropical undergrowth of the Pacific islands, Studebaker's amazing new Weasel personnel and cargo carrier is now in action with our armed forces.

It's advancing, as it has been doing in Europe, over terrain that seems impossible for any mechanized military vehicle to negotiate.

Swiftly and stealthily, the Weasel glides forward in mud and swamp as well as on sand and snow. And it floats like a boat in lakes and rivers, as its tracks, powered by its Studebaker Champion engine, propel it from shore to shore.

A many-purpose vehicle, this new "Champion" in invasion warfare not only transports men and supplies but it also serves to carry wounded back to hospital areas. It's geared to clamber up difficult grades on its flexible, rubber-padded tracks. With the Weasel's help, light artillery pieces and the ammunition to feed them, can often be moved up to otherwise inaccessible positions.

Built by Studebaker and powered by the famous Studebaker Champion engine, the Weasel is just one of a number of Studebaker war production assignments which include Wright Cyclone engines for the famous Boeing Flying Fortress as well as heavy-duty, multiple-drive Studebaker military trucks.

ROSEWILL II is a fine example of pre-war yacht construction by the Defoe Shipbuilding Company. Designed by William E. Ferman, Detroit, for the owner, W. C. Rands of Detroit, this 126-foot ship was first of the yachts pointing toward streamlining. Built in 1931, it is Diesel-powered—very roomy for its length and incorporates many outstanding features. She has been in service with the Navy since early in the war.

When It's Clear Sailing Again

In these crucial days every shipbuilder is producing only for Victory. So Defoe's job for the duration is to build fighting ships for the Navy. But some day there'll be clear sailing again for pleasure vessels. Then, it will be anchors aweigh for safer, swifter, more beautiful new yachts, embodying new materials, new power plants, new comforts and economies. One of the most interesting developments for ocean-going yachts will be seen in the advance of instrumentation. This will include the magic of radar, improved radio, electro sounding and gyro-compass control—combining the most perfect ship protection in the history of the sea. Postwar private craft built by Defoe naturally will reflect this organization's forty years of yacht-building experience as well as the new techniques and high standards of precision craftsmanship developed here in record-breaking construction for the Navy. Defoe's Yacht Division invites correspondence and will give individual attention to all inquiries.

Tonight and Every Night ~ GIVE YOUR DINNER NEW GLAMOUR WITH THIS CHOICE Burgundy

★ GOOD TASTE WITH ANY FOOD ★

Few households keep an assortment of table wines. Many choose Burgundy because they like its flavor best. So—forget the "do's and don'ts" you've heard about serving wine and just remember that "Valliant Burgundy is good taste with any food."

The soft glow of candlelight! Sparkling glasses of Valliant California Burgundy! Such an easy way to bring romance to your table—every night. Valliant Burgundy is so smooth, so well-rounded, so full-flavored.

If you acquired a taste for choice Burgundy abroad, Valliant Burgundy will revive happy memories. Its authentic character is a heritage of vineyard cuttings imported long ago from Europe. Its fine flavor reflects the care with which it is blended and developed. And to protect its precious bouquet, it is bottled by the winery in California.

As you know, Burgundy is a dry (not sweet) wine. Sip Valliant Burgundy with food, and see how delightfully its pleasant tartness blends with main course dishes. Here, indeed, is a wine that wins men's favor . . . and compliments for the cook.

Also try these distinguished Valliant California wines: Valliant Dry Sherry, Valliant Port, Valliant Muscatel, Valliant Sherry. Sole distributors for U. S. A., W. A. Taylor & Company, New York City.

WARTIME NEEDS restrict the civilian use of cans for certain products. But stocks on dealers' shelves are yours to buy freely. And remember, foods packed in cans come to you with their vitamins, minerals and nutritional values sealed in.

● Next time you stop at your druggist's, just notice how many products he stocks to guard the health and comfort of your home. And, after Victory, most of these products will again come to you in protective cans. Dental, bath, and baby powders—medicine and health tablets—salves—bandages—adhesive tapes—insecticides—antiseptics—deodorants—and dozens more—all kept clean and sanitary in modern steel-and-tin containers.

Why are these things so much safer in cans? One reason is, cans don't break. Another reason is, the names of the products, and instructions for their use, are generally printed right on the can itself. No labels to fall off and cause mistakes! And these cans are so easy to open and close!

This same safe-and-sure protection also applies to the myriads of fine foods—and to the thousands of other products—that come in cans. Cans are easy to carry, easy to store, easy to dispose of. And they give their contents lasting protection against light, air, dirt, germs, and spoilage . . . No wonder the familiar can is the preferred container for more than 2500 products normally packed in cans by over 135 different industries. For no other container combines all these advantages.

No other container protects like the CAN

TERRY AND THE PIRATES by MILTON CANIFF
ALL RIGHT, DRAGON LADY, EITHER SHOOT OR EXPLAIN ALL THIS!
THE YELLOW-HAIRED TERRY HAS BECOME QUITE MARTIAL WITH THE ACQUISITION OF BARS AND WINGS?
DID YOU EXPECT ME TO ACT LIKE THE KID YOU USED TO KNOW? PAT RYAN TRUSTED YOU WHEN YOUR CHINESE GUERRILLAS FILTERED INTO INDO-CHINA AND BUILT THE AIRSTRIP ON WHICH WE LANDED RADIO EQUIPMENT...
THE NEXT THING I KNOW YOU SLICKER ME INTO COMING TO THIS PLACE AND GRILL ME AS IF I WERE AN ENEMY!
THE YOUNG WARRIOR IS QUITE DISTURBED!
WHO WOULDN'T BE?... WHEN HU SHEE SAID SHE WANTED TO ASK ME SOMETHING I FOLLOWED HER AS AN OLD FRIEND...
BUT WE ARE YOUR OLD FRIENDS... THAT IS WHY WE SELECTED YOU TO QUESTION AS TO THE INTENTIONS OF YOUR EXCELLENT COMMANDER RYAN!
DO YOU THINK I'D TELL YOU?
ONE NEVER KNOWS... HOWEVER, YOU WILL SERVE AS INSURANCE THAT PATRICK RYAN WILL NOT ABANDON THE DRAGON LADY'S PEOPLE TO THE JAPS!
NOW I SEE THE POINT! IN THE OLD DAYS THE DRAGON LADY RAN THE SHOW... NOW YOU'RE ANGRY BECAUSE PAT RYAN IS THE BOSS... BACKED UP BY THE UNITED STATES!
CALL IT WHAT YOU LIKE... YOU WILL ASSURE OUR SAFE RETURN TO OUR OWN TERRITORY!
DO YOU THINK PAT WOULD HESITATE TO LOSE ONE MAN IF THE SAFETY OF HIS WHOLE COMMAND WAS AT STAKE?
AMERICANS DO MANY FOOLHARDY THINGS... TRY NOT TO APPEAR SO MISERABLE, YELLOW-HAIRED TERRY...
NONE OF YOUR FRIENDS NEED KNOW THAT YOU WERE LURED AWAY BY TWO MERE WOMEN!
WOMEN?... I OFTEN WONDER IF YOU'RE NOT SOMETHING A FRANKENSTEIN DREAMED UP!
REALLY?

"PRESCRIPTION FOR YOUR TEETH!"

I had been at the USO dance five minutes...time enough to notice that there were about five hundred service men there...and ONE in particular...Bob! Two seconds later he came whizzing my way. One dance led to many dates... and our wedding today! As Bob puts it, "Darling, it was your smile that got me...it flashed across that dance floor ...right into my heart!" P.S. You can bet my standby, Listerine Tooth Paste is one of the musts in my trousseau. I'm going to keep my smile glowing...for Bob!

It Pays to be Particular About Your Tooth Paste

Most of the ugly decay that can ruin a smile, starts in tiny, hard-to-get-at, "pin-point" cracks in enamel...more than 75% of it, say some authorities. That's why it's so sensible to use a dentifrice that is especially created to get after and help clean these troublesome "pin-point" areas . . . Listerine Tooth Paste!

"Pin-point" cleansing is important in smile-insurance...and so is the wonderful polishing job Listerine Tooth Paste does! How it makes enamel gleam...and helps you to a radiant smile! And as for taste-appeal! How you'll love that cool, minty flavor! Better ask for the big tube of Listerine Tooth Paste today. It costs just a few cents . . . and it lasts and l-a-s-t-s!

LAMBERT PHARMACAL COMPANY, St. Louis, Mo.

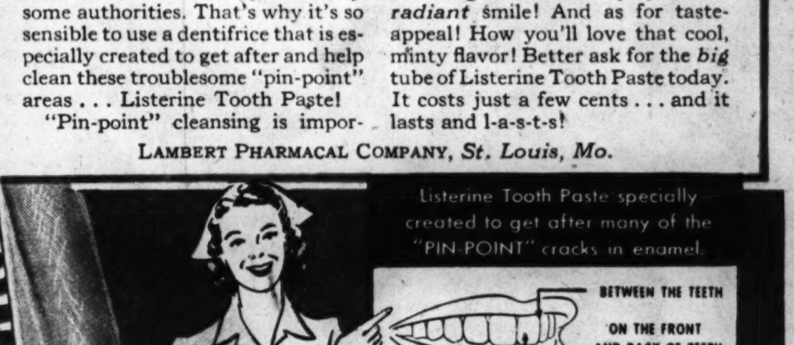
For more than 60 years THIS NAME HAS STOOD FOR HONOR, INTEGRITY AND MERIT



THAT'S WHY IT IS SO EFFICIENT!

UNMOUSED

THE Dunce asked for a second serving of dessert. The General cut a slice of baked raisin which had been stuffed with finely chopped beechnut and seasoned with wintergreen.

"Wish I had a doughnut to eat with this," said the Dunce, as he dipped his Teenie Weenie spoon into the raisin.

"Well, I've told you I'll make the doughnuts if you'll get me the fat to fry them in," said the Cook.

"I've hunted all over the neighborhood and all I could find was that piece of old bacon the skunk took from us," said the Dunce.

"I heard where we might be able to get a few walnuts," put in the Cowboy.

That news delighted the Teenie Weenies, for no doughnuts are as good as those fried in black walnut oil, and all the little people around the tiny dinner table began to scream, "Where?"

"I heard that a Scotch gray squirrel had quite a lot of walnuts stored," answered the Cowboy. "Maybe we can make a deal with him to let us have a few. He lives over in Whimpie's Woods and, as I'm breaking in a new riding mouse, I thought I would ride over and see if the squirrel would sell us a few nuts."

The next morning the Cowboy saddled his mouse and set off before daylight, for it was a long trip to Whimpie's Woods. It was a clear, cold day, with some snow still lying beneath the dense bushes, and the Cowboy jogged along in fine shape until he had nearly reached the tree in which the gray squirrel lived. Suddenly the mouse began to tremble, and before the Cowboy, who is a fine mouseman, could stop it the mouse started to run away. It ran under some low hanging branches of a bush, which caught the Cowboy and scraped him off.

There was a faint smell of cat in the air, which probably was the cause of the mouse's strange behavior. The Cowboy hunted for the mouse a long time, but it had completely disappeared. He did find his saddle, which had been scraped off the mouse's back, however, and he was glad of that.

He walked on to the gray squirrel's house, but he was not at home, and so the little chap swung his saddle over his shoulder and trudged off on the long walk back to the Teenie Weenie village. It was after dark before he arrived at the shoe house and he was very hungry, but the Cook gave him a good supper of fried frog ham, corn bread with apple butter, and plenty of sassafras tea, without doughnuts.

CITIZENS SHOW TO PAY VISIT TO EVANSTON HIGH

Learn by Doing on 65 Acre Campus.

BY GENEVIEVE FLAVIN.

With a wide choice of fields to conquer, students at Evanston Township High school enjoy being educated. They may enter courses of study from a list of 11 curricula, and are allowed to arrive at their objectives thru use of their own initiative. The school employs methods which give students the opportunity to learn thru doing.

Evidently this formula is successful. Thirty per cent of the present student enrollment of 2,072 is on the honor roll. This group will be represented by William Harwood, outstanding senior pupil, when Evanston Township High school is saluted by the Citizens of Tomorrow program of W-G-N at 10 a. m. Saturday.

On 65 Acre Campus.

The 62 year old school stands in the center of a 65 acre tract. Landscaping of the grounds is the responsibility of students of horticulture. They meet in a greenhouse, planned and built by students in the building trades classes and financed thru funds raised by the PTA at its annual spring festival.

Each spring, the students horticulturists work in the war garden, where they are given practical application of their winter lab work. Vegetables and plants from this project are sold to faculty members, while extras are released to the commercial greenhouse at Greenwood av. and Brown st., which is staffed with students. Already 40,000 pansy plants have been sold.

Seek Garden Solutions.

Evanston gardeners take advantage of the war garden sessions, arriving with questions about soil treatment and plant culture.

Application of doing to learning can be pretty muddy for horticulturists according to the contingent appointed to pull weeds around the school pool before it was filled for the summer. Three landed at the bottom, covered with slime and mud, and had to be fished out.

Seldom is a dandelion seen on the campus. This is because of a fine levied on students of the spring sessions by Instructor Henry Krul. When late to their 9 a. m. class, a student must dig five pounds of dandelions as punishment.

Use Metropolitan Technique.

City room newspaper techniques are applied in the journalism classes. Pupils are assigned as copy readers, reporters, space salesmen, and executives. The Evanstonian, school newspaper, is published by senior students.

For the last three years the Evanstonian has won the National Scholastic Press association's Pacemaker award which is given to the 15 leading high school newspapers in the country. For the last 10 years it has received all-American rating for ranking among the first 35 high schoool newspapers in the country.

Trace Drama Assistance.

Skills learned in various departments are applied in the scene shop where carpentry students build frames for sets used in dramatic productions. Members of the arts and crafts division cover these with canvas and fireproofing, while students of drawing and painting finish the job.

Of particular interest to boys is the machine shop where cars are stripped and rebuilt, and where faculty cars are serviced. The boys purchase broken down jalopies and bring them to the shop for repairs.

Girls Seek War Training.

Following Pearl Harbor girls requested preparatory course for the WAC, WAVE, and army and navy nursing corps. Thus the girls' drill corps was born.

Since the war student participation in war bond and stamp sales each week has ranged between 90 and 98 per cent. The service flag shows 4,609 stars, 101 of them gold.

When the Citizens of Tomorrow program is recorded Wednesday, Francis L. Bacon, principal, will act as host. Philip Maxwell of THE TRIBUNE, conductor of the program, will introduce James Harper, Slade Gorton, Richard Bennett, Joanne Foster, Wynn Mason, all seniors, and Katherine Parson, junior, as quiz participants.

Will Honor Comdr. Eadie.

Tribute will be paid to the memory of Comdr. William F. Eadie, former student of the school remembered as the rescuer of Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, and his companions. Eadie was killed in the Pacific last Jan. 8. Colors will be posted by William Weber, Stephen Cook, Sergeants David Morris, William Metcalf, Avery Penley, and Gail Bennett.

The school choir and festival chorus, directed by Miss Sadie Rafferty, will sing. Harold Hanover, cornetist, will be soloist. Interscholastic News will be reviewed by Bob Wieczorowski. Mr. Maxwell will then enroll William W. DesAutels of Central High school, Kalamazoo, Mich., on the honor roll.

FATHER MEYER'S 1ST MASS TODAY AT ST. ANDREW'S

The Rev. Charles R. Meyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis A. Meyer, 1245 Eddy st., will celebrate his first solemn mass at noon today in St. Andrew's church, Addison and Paulina sts. He was ordained to the priesthood yesterday in Mundelein. Father Meyer was educated at St. Andrew school, Quigley Preparatory seminary, and St. Mary of the Lake seminary.

High School Students Duplicate Many Activities of Modern City

After Pearl Harbor girl students requested instruction in preparation for the WAC, WAVES, and nursing corps. The girls' drill corps, organized shortly after, is commanded by Maj. Barbara Seaquist (right). Marching across the gymnasium (left to right) are Sgt. Maj. Mary Ann Williams, Sgt. Maj. Colleen Marsh, Capt. Barbara Daniels, Capt. Adj. Julie Floyd, Capt. Joyce McClelland, and Capt. Jean Thomas.

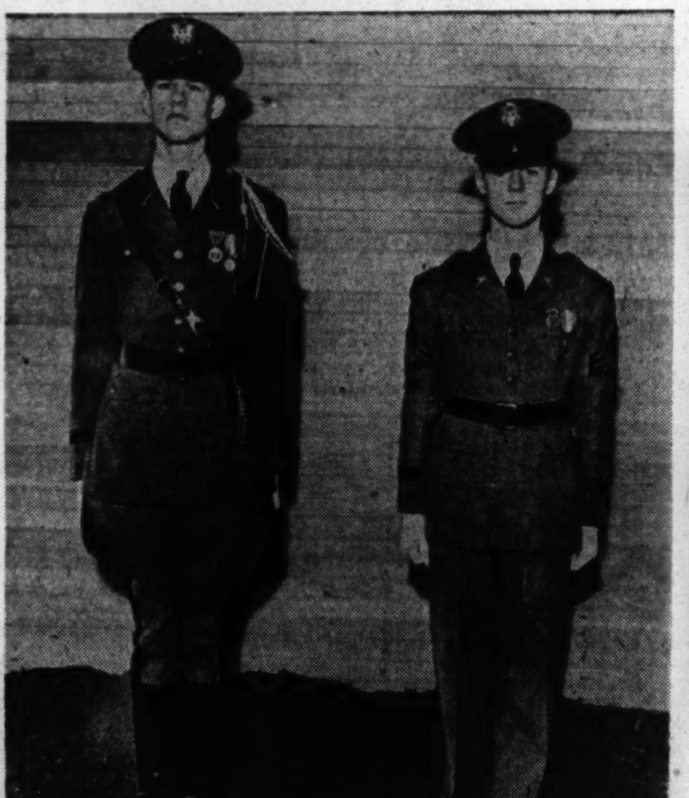
Operating an electric hotbed for seedlings is an old story to Judy Garner, who has been in charge of the horticulture class project for a year. The class meets in a greenhouse constructed and planned by students in the building trades courses, and financed thru funds raised at the annual PTA spring festival.

In a miniature city room the staff of the Evanstonian writes and edits the school newspaper. The staff includes a city editor, news, sports, and society desks, and business and advertising departments. On the outside or "rim" of the survey copy desk are Margo Rand, John Pauly, advertising manager, and Joan Birdeye. Seated inside or in the "slot" is Evelyn Kelly. Mary Lou Southard (front right) types school news as does Courtney Cavanaugh. In the rear, center, George Morrison (standing) consults with Win Mason, while in the corner Editor Dick Davis (seated) tells Bob Christian how a story should be written.



Phil Naber (left) and Sydney Anderson of the Evanston High school military training corps recently were awarded Tribune medals for efficiency in military training.

L. Bruce Gustafson rebuilds an eight cylinder motor, while Dick Eitel, supervised by Instructor John G. Terhune, repairs the clutch of his car. Students in machinery repair or rebuild their own vehicles and service faculty automobiles as a part of the course.

TWO SCHOOLS WILL GET GYM AND HALL UNIT

Four Classrooms to Be Added.

Additions of a combination gymnasium and assembly hall unit and four classrooms to two north side elementary schools are among board of education plans of a proposed post-war building program. The additions, each identical, will be built at Chappell, 5200 N. Leavitt st., and Rogers, 7345 N. Washtenaw av., neither of which has a gym or assembly hall. Estimated cost of the additions is $95,000 each.

The gymnasiums, according to blue prints drawn by John C. Christensen, school architect, will be two stories, and will measure 60 by 40 feet to supply ample room for physical education classes as well as sports contests.

PTA to Use Hall.

A platform measuring 24 by 18 feet will be erected at one end of the gymnasium which, when filled with chairs, will convert the gym into a hall seating the entire student body. The assembly hall also will be made available to the PTA and other community groups.

Floor plans for the addition provide for a separate entrance to the assembly hall-gymnasium. Persons will not need to pass thru corridors by classrooms and evening meetings will not necessitate lighting of entrances and corridors within the school building itself.

More Locker Space.

The classroom additions, which will be directly connected to the present classroom area, will include a small recitation room and a regulation sized 30 foot classroom on the first floor, and two regulation classrooms on the second floor. Additional locker space also will be provided.

The proposed additions are the logical extension of these two buildings, according to Christensen. Both schools were built in 1937 with additions at a later date in mind.

These additions are a part of the $7,300,000 building program planned for schools on the north side over a period of five years. The city-wide program calls for the expenditure of nearly $30,000,000, and is contingent on the granting of federal funds to cover 50 per cent of the cost, and the lifting of war time building restrictions.

Based on Surveys.

The school construction program, most comprehensive in the city's history, is based on a survey by Christensen, and is largely a project of modernization and replacement, designed to eliminate substandard facilities now in use, and to provide modern and uncrowded schools in areas where population growth is anticipated.

The addition to Chappell school is scheduled for 1946, and to Rogers for 1948.

S. A. I. WILL HOLD MUSICAL NEXT SUNDAY AT N. U.

A silver offering will be taken for benefit of the group's scholarship fund. Mrs. J. V. New, president, is arrangements chairman.

Highland Park Red Cross workers will launch a five day house to house canvass with a kickoff rally at 8 p. m. Wednesday in the Community center. All persons interested in the drive, which will open Thursday and continue thru March 5, are urged to attend.

Because last year's Red Cross campaign was the first major charitable drive in Highland Park to reach its quota on schedule, time allotted the canvass has been shortened this year, which fact will place an additional burden on workers, leaders of the drive said.

FATHER FITZGERALD ORGANIZES ARMY OF ROSARY AT DE PAUL

Father Fitzgerald.

A gold pin, an inch long and in the form of wings attached to a red shield, binds 300 students of De Paul academy together in a novel organization, the Army of the Rosary. There are no officers and no rules except that each member agrees to say a rosary daily for some one in service and to carry his rosary with him at all times.

The group was organized by the Rev. Bernard Fitzgerald, C. M., registrar of the academy, who also designed the pin. The emblem bears the letters A. O. T. R. and has the school's name written in blue across the shield.

Father Fitzgerald felt that such an organization was needed, he said, because of the increase in war casualties and the recurring reports of juvenile delinquency.

STORAGE SPACE PLANNING VITAL FOR NEW HOME

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

One feature to be stressed in postwar housing will be adequate provision for needed storage space. Lack of such provision in many homes and apartments has been cause for much complaint in the last decade.

It has been estimated there are some 19 different types of storage space needed in the average home, that is the family type home where there are children.

Among Storage Needs.

General space should be allotted for storage of seasonal articles including storm sash and screens, porch furniture, as well as air-tight spaces for woolens and furs.

Then there is the space needed for outdoor wraps of children and grownups, and for outdoor games and vehicles as well as for indoor interests. These include clothing in use daily, bedding, linen, towels, laundry supplies and equipment, fuel for furnace and fireplace, and garden tools.

Nor does the above include generous provision for kitchen materials and food reserves, for frozen foods, and canned and root vegetables.

Hard But Necessary Job.

It may seem quite a task to check on the amount of storage space needed in a home, but it is a help to your architect or builder to know your needs.

It also is wise to consider future needs as well as present ones. More space for clothing is needed as children grow older, an extra bedroom requires more storage space for sheets and blankets. About the only way to know what one needs is to measure one's present space and, from what you have, figure what you will need and want in your next house.

Nurses' Aid Class.

N. U. to Exhibit Life Paintings Seen by Nurse

With deft strokes, Eleanor Piasecke, 2100 Lincoln Park west, has transferred many of her experiences as a nurse to canvas. Her "Mexican Sick Bed" together with the gayer "Dancers," "Opening Night at the Opera," "Animated Map," and other works will be exhibited under sponsorship of the Northwestern university Polish society from 3 to 8 p. m. today in Thorne hall on the downtown campus.

Miss Piasecke, awaiting assignment to the army nurse corps, studied painting, life drawing, and design at the university college of Northwestern from 1941 until this year. She managed to sandwich these classes with nursing assignments.

But even while nursing her pen, pencil, or brush are always busy. When writing to her two brothers fighting in Germany and to her friends and relatives in service, she sends the letters off in envelopes decorated with water color or pen drawings of the areas in which the recipients are located.

The committee in charge of the exhibit includes: Mary Mix, 1500 Lake Shore dr.; Alyce Baron, 2301 N. Maplewood av.; Lucille Grislow, 3064 Avers av., and Lillian Brzezicki, 1327 N. Ashland av.

Among guests will be the consul general of Poland, Dr. Julius F. Szygowski, and Mrs. Szygowski, 49 E. Cedar st.; Dr. and Mrs. Rollin B. Posey, 1127 Grant st., Evanston, and Prof. Clara McGowan, 1569 Howard st.

Proceeds will go to the educational fund established by the society to provide scholarships to Northwestern for students of Polish descent.

GARY SERGEANT TAKES HIGH DIVE IN SPLIT CHUTE

Finds Trip Bit Breezy but Brief.

What started to be his 29th mission over Germany didn't count as a mission at all, but Sgt. Marion L. Mason, 1909 Delaware st., Gary, said "it was a rougher trip than all the others I made."

Considering that he bailed from a crippled plane with a parachute split from top to bottom, Sgt. Mason's description seems rather mild.

Trouble Starts Now.

He began shaking hands with trouble when the Liberator bomber on which he is engineer-gunner took off from a 15th air force base in Italy. Roaring down the rutted, mud caked runway, the right wheel of the heavily laden plane struck a depression and snapped off. Only the quick action of the pilot in lifting the disabled craft averted catastrophe.

"For six hours the plane circled the field, after jettisoning the bomb load, in order to consume most of the gasoline. "During this time we had a bull session," Sgt. Mason relates, "and decided that, for safety's sake, six would bail out to lighten the load. I had a few misgivings as this was my first jump.

Closes Eyes and Jumps.

"I closed my eyes, counted to 10, and pulled the ripcord. As I swung lazily in the air I looked up and saw—daylight! A huge tear split the chute from top to bottom! Any gust of wind might have collapsed the chute, and it would have been all over for this boy!

"I prayed! I prayed so long that the next thing I knew, I was flat on my back in an Italian orchard without a bruise to show for my 3,000 foot fall."

Sgt. Mason concluded, "I'll bet I get that 29th mission under my belt if I have to carry two 'chutes to do it!"

Ward Rule Is Issue with Schlaeger.

BY EDWARD SCHREIBER.

Altho the runoff election in the 10th ward on March 5 ostensibly concerns only a city council seat, observers view the contest as one that will influence the political future of both Congressman Rowan [D., 2d] and County Treasurer Schlaeger who are backing rival candidates.

Rowan, the ward's Democratic committeeman, is supporting Emil V. Pacini, 8607 Phillips av., who received 6,426 votes in the Feb. 5 election. Schlaeger is backing Max A. Pieczynski, 8755 S. Saginaw av., who trailed Pacini by more than 1,000 votes.

See Schlaeger Ambition.

Altho Schlaeger has repeatedly said that he has no fight with Rowan except on his choice of aldermanic candidates some interpret the contest as an expression of a Schlaeger ambition toward Rowan's jobs as congressman and ward committeeman.

With his own prestige as well as Pacini's future to protect Rowan, who previous to his election to congress three years ago was the ward's alderman for many years, has returned from Washington and has indicated that he will back Pacini to the limit.

Pacini Popular.

Pacini has been popular as the secretary of the Democratic ward organization for several years. He is a former aviator, auto race driver, and contractor.

Pieczynski is the nephew of the late alderman, William Pieczynski, and has had a varied career. At one time an assistant superintendent of a large life insurance company, he later served as secretary to his late uncle, as a war plant worker, and as a tavern owner.

RETIRED TILDEN LEADER HIGHLY VALUES STUDY

A good teacher should also be a good student, says Frederick E. Price, 7356 Merrill av., recently retired principal of Tilden Technical High school, 4747 S. Union av. He has practiced what he preaches. During 38 of the 44 years he taught in the Chicago public school system he was also attending school.

Frederick Price.

A south sider for 56 years, Price has helped organze the shop programs of the Chicago schools. He supervised installation of machinery and shops in Bowen High school. He has taught at Englewood and Hirsch High schools, at Bradwell, Von Humboldt, Farren, Libby, McLaren, and Barton grammar schols, and at Washburne continuation school.

Sets Example in Grades.

Price, who often urged his Tilden students to work for high grades, set a high example at old South Chicago High school, now Bowen, when as president of his class he was graduated fifth with an average of 90. After attending normal college he studied at Armour Institute of Technology, Northwestern university, and the University of Chicago, and took several post-graduate courses in industrial education.

His theory of education is that "the dull fellow has just as much right to succeed as the bright student but can't take as rich a course." He believes that students should take courses which their aptitudes indicate they can handle and that all students should not be required to compete on the same material at the same speed.

Improvements Are Cited.

Improvements at Tilden during Price's four years of leadership include a remodeled welding shop, installation of gas fired furnaces in the forge shop, new millroom machinery, and a new airplane engine shop.

Price inaugurated at Tilden the sponsor system whereby one teacher is in charge of each semester grade with direct supervision of programs and records of that grade. The student council was reorganized and a new constitution written.

Activities Flourishing.

During his tenure Tilden has enjoyed considerable success in many activities for students. The R. O. T. C. unit, under command of Staff Sgt. Michael J. Moore, won top honors in the federal inspection and first place in picked platoon competition during three of the last four years. The football team coached by Charles Harvey won the public high school championship in 1941, 1942, and 1944 and won over Weber High school for the city championship the last year.

The Craftsman, school annual, sponsored by Mrs. Esta G. Aldrich, received All-American rating from the National Scholastic Press association at the University of Minnesota.

Hobby Is Woodworking.

Woodworking, a subject Price has taught many boys, is his hobby. He has made several pieces of furniture, and drew the plans for his seven room home where Price and his wife, a former school teacher, have lived since 1911.

Price recently reconditioned a cradle which had been in his family for 100 years for his granddaughter, Carol Ann Lane, 8 months. She and her mother, Mrs. Helen Lane, the Price's daughter, are living with them until Lt. Kenneth Lane, Carol Ann's father, returns from the army with which he is stationed in France.

SEES CHICAGO DREAM OF '60S A REALITY AT 92

Family Moves with West Side.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

In all but four of his 92 years Guilford S. Wood has been a consistent west sider. Born in Burlington, Vt., he came to Chicago with his parents in 1856 and the first family residence was a three story brick house between Dearborn and State street in what is now the loop. The family moved as Chicago grew, always westward.

The westward ho! trek took the family to Halsted st., then to Aberdeen st., then to Hoyne av. Mr. Wood moved to Oak Park in 1894 and his son, Chester, today resides in the family home at 716 S. Ridgeland av. Now living with his grandson, Walter H. Strom, 7811 Greenfield st., River Forest, Mr. Wood feels he has reached the limit of his westward migration.

No Place Like Chicago.

"The Chicago that I knew as a boy before the Civil war and where I still maintain a business has developed as my father and my uncles told me it would many decades ago," said Mr. Wood.

While Mr. Wood has not "left the premises," as he puts it, of his grandson's fine home in River Forest for the last year or two, he still conducts the business of the Guilford S. Wood company, railroad supplies, in the Old Colony building by telephone.

Liked to Shovel Snow.

"I was an errand boy," Mr. Wood went on. "When I was 11 my father volunteered in the 72d Illinois regiment and we didn't see him for two years. Before going to war my father had a grocery business and we took the stock home and lived on that. One of the jobs that any boy could find to do in winter time those years was shoveling snow and, if I do say it, I had a zest for such tasks.

"Parents of that period seemed to try to set a good example before their children and I remember my father telling me that if I kept busy I would keep out of mischief.

Fire Seared Into Memory.

"Impressions of youth stay with us longest and details of what happened during the Chicago fire are as clear to me as tho they happened but a month ago.

"I had gone in the early morning to the store where I worked. The front door of the store had been broken in and the goods were being loaded at the rear to be taken to a place of safety.

"The roar of the flames and the smoke were terrible, but what alarmed me most was when the cornice of a building at State and Washington fell in front of me and took part of the sidewalk with it. It was at Dearborn park, where the library now stands, that a policeman asked me if I didn't know the world was coming to an end. He advised me to seek a place of safety at the Illinois Central station.

Sees Lincoln Nomination.

"My father took me to the Wigwam in 1860 to see Lincoln nominated, but as a boy I missed the significance of the occasion. The great fire seared itself into my memory."

Mr. Wood does not give the impression of being a man nearing 93. His hearing and sight seem unimpaired.

On attaining manhood Mr. Wood joined a surveying group building the C. & E. I. railroad, then known as the Chicago, Danville, and Vincennes. This work led to the selling of railroad supplies, a career which still holds his keen interest.

Cinderella's Tiny Feet Dance to Happiness in Oak Park High Play

"A Kiss for Cinderella," by James M. Barrie, will be presented Friday and Saturday nights by Oak Park-River Forest Township High school seniors. Central figure in the riddle scene is Lord Times, whose turban sets him apart from other courtiers. Edward Potts, who enacts the role, proposes the vital question which must be answered before a bride for Prince Hard-to-Please is chosen. Others in the scene (left to right) are Joan White, William Schaefer, Dorothy Wilkinson, Ronald Carlson, and Joanne Shorney.

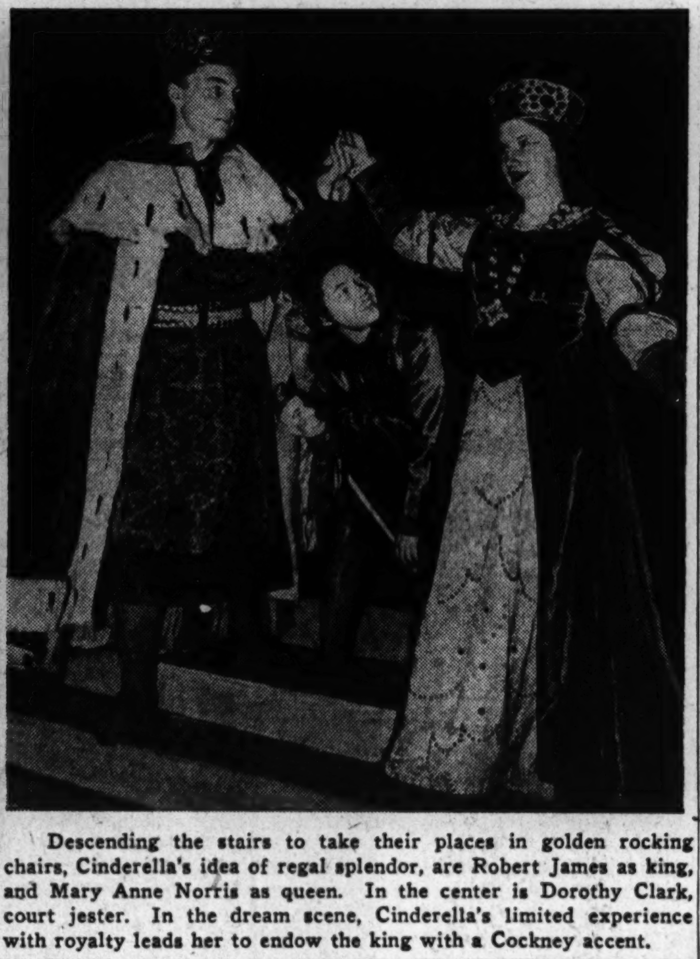
Cinderella, triumphant, is chosen to be bride of the prince. Playing the role of the London waif in the fairy tale is Mary Elizabeth Manning. The prince, central figure in Cinderella's dream world, is Paul Gebhard, who also enacts the role of policeman.



Descending the stairs to take their places in golden rocking chairs, Cinderella's idea of regal splendor, are Robert James as king, and Mary Anne Norris as queen. In the center is Dorothy Clark, court jester. In the dream scene, Cinderella's limited experience with royalty leads her to endow the king with a Cockney accent.

With AMERICA'S FIGHTERS

Award of the bronze star medal to Sgt. Walter J. Wroblewski, 2927 S. Throop st., was announced recently at headquarters of the air service command in France. Overseas more than 30 months, Sgt. Wroblewski is supply sergeant for mobile pressrooms where maps, graphs, and reports are printed. Before entering service, he was employed by a Chicago printing company. He has two brothers in the army.

W. J. Wroblewski.

Sgt. Jerry Pondelicek, Brookfield, is serving as a surgical technician at a field hospital in China. Inducted in May, 1942, he was transferred to India in July of the following year. He was stationed two months near the head of the Ledo road, in Upper Assam, before being sent across the Himalayan hump to China in September, 1943.

Pvt. Robert M. Edwards, son of Mrs. Eleanor Edwards, Maywood, has returned to duty on the European front. Wounded less than a month after beginning overseas duty, he was awarded the bronze star for bravery in treating the wounded under heavy enemy fire, disregarding his own wounds. He was a student at the University of Chicago before his induction in October, 1943.

The silver star, for gallantry in action at Maffin bay, New Guinea, has been awarded Pvt. Edward Zasowski. As the driver of an LVT, he made repeated trips under heavy Japanese fire, landing troops and supplies on a hostile beach. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Zasowski, 2627 Cullerton st., he entered the army in April, 1942, and has been overseas 17 months.

Edward Zasowski.

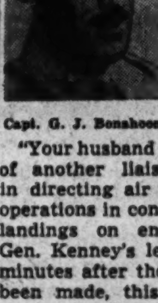
At an 8th air force bomber station in England, the air medal was awarded to Sgt. William Goetz, 2126 W. 23d st. A ball turret gunner on a Flying Fortress, he has taken part in 10 daylight bombing assaults against the Nazis.

Lt. Donald J. Duffy, 4249 Maypole av., has been transferred to Italy, where he will serve with the 15th air force's heavy bombardment squadron as a pilot of a Liberator. A graduate of St. Mel High school, he was a pay roll clerk before entering service in January, 1943.

Lt. Donald Duffy.

Lt. Robert N. Belanger, of the navy, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Belanger, 639 Hillside av., Glen Ellyn, is serving in the Pacific theater of operations. In recent strikes against the Philippines by Adm. Halsey's 3d fleet, he flew a carrier based dive bomber. Lt. Belanger's sister, Jean, is a WAVE stationed at Sampsen, N. Y.

The bronze star has been awarded Capt. George J. Bonahoom, for heroic achievements at Hollandia and at Dutch New Guinea. His wife, who lives at 3637 Harrison st., recently received a letter from his commanding officer, Lt. Gen. Kenney, describing the action by which Sapt. Bonahoom merited the award.



Capt. G. J. Bonahoom.

"Your husband joined the members of another liaison party engaged in directing air support of ground operations in connection with initial landings on enemy strongholds," Gen. Kenney's letter said. "Thirty minutes after the first assaults had been made, this party established communications, and thruout the operation maintained excellent radio contact, enabling allied aircraft to locate their targets, and keeping the commanding general of the attacking infantry division fully advised regarding air support. The heroism and devotion to duty displayed by your husband contributed, in a large measure, to the success of these operations."

CITY TO REOPEN GARFIELD AS VOCATION UNIT

Put Cost of Project at $188,000.

Plans to convert abandoned Garfield school, 14th pl. and Newberry av., into a modern vocational center have been announced by James B. McCahey, president of the board of education. Bids on the job, estimated to cost $188,000, will be sought in about three months, according to John M. Christensen, board architect in charge of plans.

The decision to reopen Garfield school, closed in 1931 because its enrollment could be absorbed easily by near-by schools, was occasioned by a population growth on the near west side. In the last two years 700 pupils have been added to the enrollment of Smyth school, 1059 W. 13th st., Foster school, 720 O'Brien st., and Medill High and Elementary school, 1326 W. 14th st. Influx of war workers, stimulated by the recent completion of the Jane Addams housing project, is cited for the increase in student population.

Will Be Unique in City.

Garfield school will be the first in the city devoted exclusively to vocational center students, who are termed "not academically minded," by educators. Because they belong, for the most part, to the 13 to 16 year old aged group, and because their course of study varies from that of the elementary school, segregation of these pupils into a school of their own is deemed "educationally desirable."

"We at the school board are enthusiastic at the opportunity provided to carry on the vocational center work in such ideal circumstances," says Don C. Rogers, assistant superintendent of schools. "We expect to make Garfield a school to show visiting educators, a model of successful teaching and administration. And I'm sure the students will prefer the more homogeneous surroundings the new building will provide."

To Hold 20 Divisions.

After rehabilitation Garfield school will accommodate 20 vocational center divisions, or approximately 400 students. At present 12 divisions of vocational center pupils are housed at Foster school, and five at Smyth. By moving this type of work to Garfield, regular elementary pupils can be accommodated without crowding at the other schools.

"With the exception of two west wings built in 1882 and 1884 Garfield school is a sturdy building," Rogers said. "It was boarded up in 1931 because it was too good to raze."

Will Raze Old Wings.

Conversion plans call for razing of these obsolete west wings. Vocational facilities will be confined to the fireproof portion of the building. Plans call for rearranging partitions to include a mechanical drawing room, metal shop, wood shop, print shop, cooking room, lunchroom, administrative offices, and nine regular classrooms.

Altho it is hoped to have the building ready for occupation in the fall, the project depends on the school board's ability to obtain priorities for building materials.

COL. SILAS R. RICHARDS OF NAPERVILLE TAKES COMMAND OF AIR BASE

Col. Silas R. Richards, Naperville, has been appointed commanding officer at Mather field, Cal., the air transport command has announced.

Col. S. R. Richards.

Col. Richards recently returned to the United States after 22 months of foreign duty. For his work in setting up the 9th troop carrier command and helping to whip it into shape for D-day, he was awarded the legion of merit. His work with the air bourne outfit during the invasion and in the period that followed earned him the bronze star.

In civilian life Col. Richards was a United Air Lines pilot on the Chicago to New York run. His wife and two children reside in Naperville.

WEST SUBURBAN SENIORS TO GIVE PLAY BY BARRIE

'Kiss for Cinderella' Will Open Friday Night.

A fairy tale with modern implications will be brought to the suburban stage Friday and Saturday nights when seniors of Oak Park-River Forest Township High school present "A Kiss for Cinderella" by James M. Barrie.

More than 100 seniors who will take part in the production have been rehearsing since early in January. Members of the cast were selected thru a series of tryouts held in the school auditorium before the Christmas holidays.

Locale in London.

The play, which has its locale in London during World War I., deals with an English waif whose tiny feet lead her to identify herself with the fairy tale Cinderella. In a dream sequence which comprises the greater part of the second act she projects herself into a world where people she actually has known mingle in whimsical fashion with characters created by her imagination.

In the concluding act David, the policeman, idealized in her dream as Prince Hard-To-Please, gives a note of reality to her fantasy by presenting her with glass slippers instead of an engagement ring when she agrees to marry him.

Take Leading Roles.

Leading roles in the play are taken by Mary Elizabeth Manning as Cinderella; Paul Gebhard as the policeman and Prince Hard-To-Please; Robert Lightfoot as Mr. Bodie, the artist whose studio Cinderella cleans; Marion O'Brien as Cinderella's godmother; William Schaefer as the lord mayor; Edward Potts as Lord Times, representing the all-powerful press; Rônald Carlson as the censor; Robert James as the king, and Mary Anne Norris as the queen.

Student Chairmen to Aid.

Chairmen of student committees assisting in the production of the play are Josephine Swett, costumes; Marie Koch, make-up; Sonia Hazen, hand properties; Robert MacKenzie, stage properties; Harold Luce and Allen Matter, lights; Donald Rhebergen, scenery; Lois Altemeier, off-stage committee; Joseph Biagi, photography; John Tatge, programs; Zanella Herrmann, publicity, and Barbara Russell, typing. George Wright is stage manager.

The play is directed by Miss Althea Payne, a member of the English faculty.

LaGrange Church Women to Have 2 Guest Speakers

"In Peace as in War—Teamwork" will be the topic of Miss Thecla Doniat and Mrs. Harold W. Ruopp, who will speak Thursday noon before the Women's society of the First Congregational church, La Grange. Farm Buildings Become Home, Studio, and Workshop to Northwest Side Craftsmen

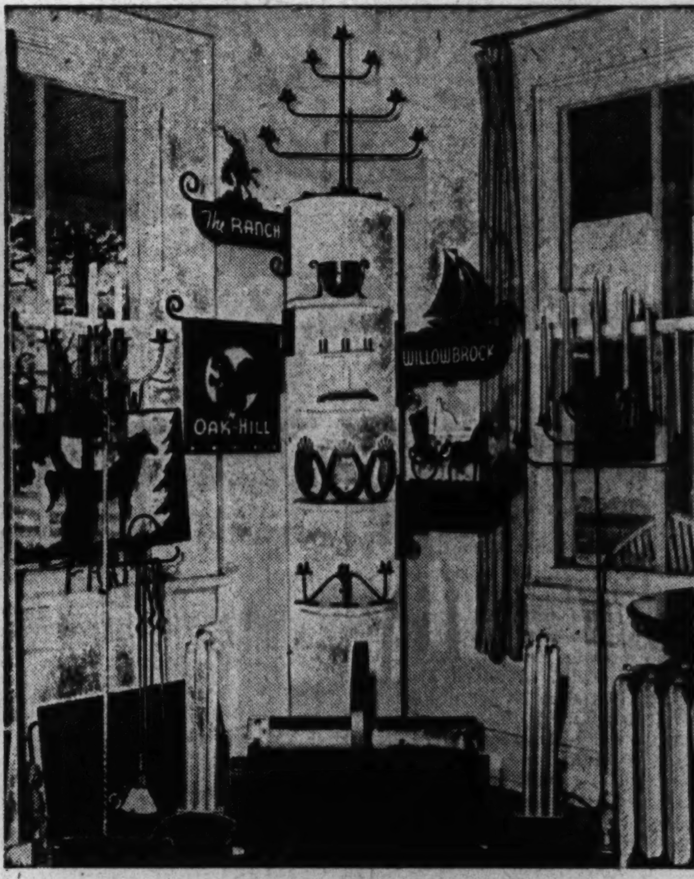
A craft and a business have formed a happy combination for Ernst Hagerstrom, Wheeling. For the last three years the big, rambling farmhouse and barn belonging to the Hagerstroms, on Milwaukee rd. just north of Dundee rd., has housed the Hagerstrom Metalcraft studios. At his draughting board Ernst Hagerstrom designs the weather vanes, fire screens, wrought iron signs, and lawn markers which are his stock in trade. In the compact workshop set up in the barn, a small staff of craftsmen executes his designs.



What was once the front parlor of the farmhouse now is filled with metal farm signs, door knockers, candelabra, and fireplace hardware—all products of the Hagerstrom craft. This room, as are all others in the house, is decorated in the characteristic, clear colors of the couple's Scandinavian homeland.

Mrs. Hagerstrom, who handles the bookkeeping end of the business, displays one of the items in their pre-war stock, a chrome punch bowl, dipper and glasses, all hand crafted. Mr. Hagerstrom still turns out an occasional piece similar to these items. But the majority of Hagerstrom projects is made of scrap metal and surplus materials released by the government.

When the Hagerstroms came to this country from Sweden, they brought with them more than the Scandinavian skills. The love of fresh, bright colors they demonstrated in decorating their home, where they entertain frequently with typical Swedish hospitality. Their remodeled breakfast room, with its big window overlooking the studio-barn, is done in blue and orange. Here the Hagerstroms look over a book on the sculpture of Carl Milles, a personal friend.

CHIN UP GIRL, 63, DOCTORS HEARTS OF 18 FIGHTERS

Her Gifts and Notes Ease Heavy Loads.

Three well filled scrapbooks prove that efforts of Mrs. Martha Elsner, 63, of 2319 N. Harlem av., to boost the morale of service men have not been in vain. Most of the fan mail in the books is addressed to "our favorite chinup girl" as she has been voted by the men to whom she has sent gifts, food, or money as the occasion warranted.

Mrs. Elsner, tho a wheelchair invalid, feels that she as much as the next fellow should do something for the men in service. Not able to work actively, she has set for herself the task of boosting the morale of 18 soldiers, sailors, and marines stationed overseas. During 14 years in a wheelchair she has learned fine needlework, crocheting, and embroidery. She uses the money derived from the sale of her handiwork to purchase gifts.

Most of the boys on her list were in her son's class at Steinmetz High school and many of them used to run errands for her in civilian life. "When the boys began to leave," Mrs. Elsner said, "I wanted to do something for them but didn't know just what. One day a friend, whose boy was overseas, wanted to purchase a piece of my work. At first I said no, but when she insisted I said I'd use the money to send her boy a box. I've been doing it ever since."

Her work basket is close at hand. She figures she spends at least six hours a day "on the job." In addition to this, she keeps house for a son, bakes cookies by the dozen, and is working on a fourth scrap book.

BOYHOOD PALS RECITE PRIEST'S VOWS TOGETHER

Will Say First Masses at Same Church.

Two northwest side boys were among 43 Chicagoans ordained to the priesthood in ceremonies at St. Mary of the Lake seminary, Mundelein. They are the Rev. Raymond A. Pavis and the Rev. Harold P. Voss.

Rev. H. P. Voss.

Rev. R. A. Pavis.

The boys, both 24, live within a block of each other. They attended Immaculate Heart of Mary school and Quigley Preparatory seminary together and played on the same neighborhood athletic teams. Both will say their first mass in their home church, Immaculate Heart of Mary, Grace st. and Spaulding av.

Father Pavis, one of seven children of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Pavis, 3801 N. Christiana av., will celebrate his first mass at 8:30 a. m. today. The Pavis' are one of the original families to help build the church in 1913 and Father Pavis is the first boy baptized in the parish to become a priest.

Assisting at his first mass will be the Rev. Charles Macinkiewicz, pastor; the Rev. Leon V. Czyk, deacon; the Rev. Gerard Weber, subdeacon; the Rev. Raynor E. Richter, master of ceremonies, and the Very Rev. Msgr. Raynold Hillenbrand, S. T. D., who will deliver the sermon.

Also one of seven children, Father Voss is the son of John Voss, 3707 N. Christiana av. His brother, James, also a priest, is an instructor at Quigley Preparatory seminary and attached to St. Cecelia's church. Father Voss will sing his first mass at 1 p. m. next Sunday with his brother serving as deacon, and an uncle, the Rev. Frank Uzdrowski, as subdeacon.

KIWANIS CLUB OF N. W. SIDE TO HEAR SPEAKERS

Three members of the Chicago Round Table of Christians and Jews will speak on "In Peace as in War—Teamwork" Tuseday at a meeting of the Northwest Town Kiwanis club.

The speakers are the Rev. Edward V. Cardinal, professor of history at Loyola university; Dr. Jitsuo Morikawa, assistant pastor of the First Baptist church, 953 E. 50th st., and Rabbi Morris A. Gutstein, Humboldt Boulevard temple. The meeting will begin at 12:15 p. m. at the Division st. Y. M. C. A., 1621 Division st.

Leo Shapiro, director of intercultural education for the Anti-Defamation league, will address the Americanization club at 2 p. m. Tuesday at Schurz High school.

THREE SCHOOLS WILL GET GYM AND HALL UNIT

Four Classrooms to Be Added.

Additions of a combination gymnasium and assembly hall unit and four classrooms to three northwest side elementary schools are among board of education plans of a proposed post-war building program. The additions, each identical, will be built at Garvy school, 5200 N. Oak Park av.; Sauganash school, 6050 N. Kilpatrick av., and Edgebrook school, 6565 N. Hiawatha av., none of which has a gym or assembly hall. The new additions will cost an estimated $95,000 each.

The gymnasiums, according to blueprints drawn by the office of the board of education architect, John C. Christensen, will be two stories in height, and will measure 60 by 40 feet to supply ample room for physical education classes as well as sports contests.

PTA to Use Halls.

A platform, measuring 24 by 16 feet, will be erected at one end of the gymnasium which, when filled with chairs, will convert the gym into a hall seating the entire student body. The assembly hall also will be made available to the PTA and other community groups.

Floor plans for the addition provide for a separate entrance to the assembly hall-gymnasium. Persons will not need to pass thru corridors by classrooms and evening meetings will not necessitate lighting of entrances and corridors within the school building itself.

More Locker Space.

The classroom additions, which will be directly connected to the present classroom area, will include a small recitation room and a regulation sized 30 foot classroom on the first floor, and two regulation classrooms on the second floor. Additional locker space also will be provided.

The proposed additions are a logical extension of these three buildings, according to Christensen. Garvy and Sauganash schools were built in 1936 and Edgebrook in 1939 with additions at a later date in mind.

Part of $3,000,000 Plan.

These additions are a part of the $3,000,000 building program planned for schools on the northwest side over a period of five years. The city-wide program calls for the expenditure of nearly $30,000,000, and is contingent on the granting of federal funds to cover 50 per cent of the cost, and the lifting of war time building restrictions.

The school construction program, most comprehensive in the city's history, is based on a survey by Christensen, and is largely a project of modernization and replacement, designed to eliminate substandard facilities now in use, and to provide modern and uncrowded schools in areas where a population growth is anticipated.

The additions to Sauganash and Edgebrook schools are scheduled for construction in 1947, and that to Garvy school for 1945-46.

Park Ridge O.E.S. to Have Play at Meeting Tuesday

The Park Ridge chapter, O. E. S. will sponsor an entertainment at 8 p. m. Tuesday in the Park Ridge Masonic temple. "The Life of Mary Todd Lincoln" will be dramatized by Sylvia Anne Johnson. Mrs. Oscar Goetz is worthy matron and Mrs. John Bjornseth is program chairman. Proceeds will go in the charity fund.

Medical Auxiliary.

The Irving Park Woman's auxiliary of the Chicago Medical society will meet at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Henry C. Sweany, 5601 N. Pulaski rd. Mrs. Hjalmar Wallin is president.

FINE OLD CRAFT LIVES THRU DIN OF MACHINE DAY

Metal Artist Still Busy if with Scrap.

In an age of machinery and mass production, the craft worker often becomes the forgotten man. But not Ernst Hagerstrom of Wheeling whose metalcraft studio is proof enough that fine workmanship can be built into a paying business.

Altho the Hagerstroms have been in Wheeling only thre years, their association with Swedish crafts is not recent. As a youth in Sweden Ernst Hagerstrom studied metal work, and before coming to this country in 1926 he had executed important commissions in Stockholm and smaller cities, restoring the metalwork in churches and town halls, and making modern ware. Mrs. Hagerstrom, who came to America in 1910, also had a background of training in the crafts, including wood carving and weaving.

Worked for Churches.

When Hagerstrom opened his first shop in Chicago in 1927 he was engaged primarily in commissions for churches, universities, and large private estates. During the 10 year period in which he maintained this shop he completed such projects as the Fountain of Science at the Century of Progress exposition, the altar rail for the First Methodist church in Evanston, bronze gates for the Benedictine chapel at Mundelein, and the wrought iron railings and gates for the Arts club in the Wrigley building.

In 1937 the Hagerstroms returned to Sweden for a year's visit, during which time they studied their craft thruout the continent. When they returned to the United States in 1938, Hagerstrom opened a shop in Evanston, and began the mail order business which they still operate.

Settles in Wheeling.

Three years ago they bought several acres of land in Wheeling on Milwaukee rd. just north of Dundee rd. On the property was a stout old barn, which Hagerstrom converted into a studio and shop, installing metal cutting apparatus, forges, and the other tools of his trade. There are now four helpers, and that is as much expanding as Ernst Hagerstrom plans. "Any more, and one goes into mass production," he shudders.

The products of the Hagerstrom studio include weathervanes decorated with the graceful silhouettes of flying geese or frisky pups, wrought iron signs carrying estate names and appropriate designs, fire screens, antique style lamp posts, and fireplace hardware.

Projects Limited by War.

Before the war, Hagerstrom also made chromium and brass into tea sets, cocktail shakers, and table settings. Now his projects are limited by the material available, and all the items in his current catalog are made of scrap metals and surplus materials released by the government. The craftsmen also spend much of their time renovating and repairing fireplace hardware.

The big farmhouse on the Hagerstrom property serves a double purpose as showroom and living quarters. Into it they have brought the fresh, clear colors of their Scandinavian homeland. Its furnishings are rich with articles Mrs. Hagerstrom has woven, the one-of-a-kind silver and chrome and brass items Hagerstrom turns out as his "hobby," and the paintings and sculpture of artistic friends.

She Handles the Books.

Mrs. Hagerstrom handles the bookkeeping. Tho they do no shipping outside continental limits now, there are often orders from England and China, and at least one letter a week from South America. Before the war they shipped to all these countries, and to Holland and France. Their most popular item, and the only one Ernst Hagerstrom will make in "mass production," is a small, inexpensive bird feeder, made of glass and wood.

Ernst Hagerstrom is a voluble champion of craftsmanship in this country. He believes the trend is toward more interest in handcrafts and thinks the army and navy programs of occupational therapy will do much to stimulate such interest. He already has plans for a post-war project, a correspondence course in metalcraft work. He already has tried the course out experimentally on a few students and is enthusiastic over results achieved.

"If people only could realize the benefit and satisfaction to be obtained from making beautiful things with their own hands, the cause of craftsmanship would be advanced tremendously," he declares.

R. C. Ingersoll, president of the company, will unveil the plaque and make a brief address.

TAKES PICTURE OF EXPLODING GERMAN SHELL

BY CLAY GOWRAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Sgt. John Mulcahy.

The photograph was published widely in newspapers thruout the United States upon its release by the army signal corps. It shows a German high velocity 170 mm. shell exploding a few feet in front of an American army truck in the war blasted village of Loiano, just behind the 5th army front. Mulcahy was crouching, ready with his camera, when the shell slammed in just 20 yards from him, hurling earth and rock 200 feet in the air as it exploded. A split second after he snapped the shutter, the shell's concussion hurled him onto his back.

Tells How He Made Shot.

The 29 year old Tribune man, whose home is at 5614 Green st. in Chicago, described recently how he managed to make the memorable picture. He is a staff photographer with the army pictorial service.

"Pvt. Leonard Ryan of Clifton Heights, Pa., jeep driver, and I were ordered to the front last Jan. 19 to obtain pictures of enemy terrain ahead of our lines," Mulcahy said. "We were just driving into Loiano when the first shell hit, about 200 yards away, so we drove behind a ruined building for shelter. Then another 170 whammed into a house nearby, throwing debris down upon us, so we left the jeep and dug into our building.

Shell Each 8 Minutes.

"Another Jerry shell hit in the road 50 yards away. We began to time them and found they were just eight minutes apart. I thought maybe I could get good picture, so I fitted a filter on the camera and stood at the window, waiting."

Ryan, who was with Mulcahy when I interviewed him, interrupted the Tribune photographer at this point.

"When John went to the window I told him he was crazy, that no picture was worth such a risk," Ryan said. "So what does he do but leave the window and go stand in the doorway, which was twice as dangerous."

Crouches in Doorway.

"I crouched in the doorway, steadying the camera on my knee because of the concussion," Mulcahy continued. "Then it happened. The seventh shell hit directly in front of my lens, and 20 yards away, right in front of a truck from which two soldiers had been unloading rations. One soldier was lying on the ground directly on the other side of the exploding shell from the camera. He was unhurt, but the other soldier, just out of camera range, got it in the hand. The blast knocked me over backward and also picked Ryan up off the floor and bowled him over. For a few minutes we were so dizzy from concussion we didn't know whether we were hit or not, but it was worth it—it was a whale of a picture."

Have a "Home" of Own.

Another army photographer, Sgt. Robert Tracey of Indianapolis, Ind., who is one of Mulcahy's closest friends, was in a near-by artillery observation post. He saw the shell strike and thought Mulcahy and Ryan had been hit.

The three men, when up forward, live together in a stone walled dugout which they made from a crater left by an American 240 mm. shell. The 8 by 15 foot room is fitted with cots, tables, chairs, a wood stove, and electric lights. Its name—Shell Inn.

FOUR SCHOOLS WILL GET GYM AND HALL UNIT

Four Classrooms to Be Added.

Additions of a combination gymnasium and assembly hall unit to four southwest side elementary schools are among the plans of the board of education in its proposed post-war building program. The additions will be built at Byrne school, 5329 S. Oak Park av.; Kellogg school, 9241 S. Leavitt st.; Foster Park school, 8500 S. Wood st., and Sherman school, 5116 S. Morgan st. None of these schools now has a gym or assembly hall.

At Byrne and Kellogg schools the additions, which will include four additional classrooms, are estimated at $95,000 each. The addition of the assembly hall-gymnasium alone at the other two schools will cost an estimated $50,000.

Two Stories in Height.

The gymnasiums, according to blueprints drawn by the office of the board of education architect, John C. Christensen, will be two stories in height, and will measure 60 by 40 feet to supply ample room for physical education classes and sports contests.

A platform measuring 24 by 16 feet will be erected at one end of the gymnasium, which, when filled with chairs, will convert the gym into a hall seating the entire student body. The assembly hall also will be made available to the PTA and other community groups.

Plan Outside Entrances.

Floor plans for the addition provide for a separate entrance to the assembly hall-gymnasium. Persons will not need to pass thru corridors by classrooms and evening meetings will not necessitate lighting of entrances and corridors within the school building itself.

The classroom additions to Byrne and Kellogg schools will be directly connected to the present classroom area, and will include a small recitation room and a regulation sized, 30 foot classroom on the first floor and two regulation classrooms on the second floor. Additional locker space also will be provided.

The proposed additions are a logical extension of these four buildings, according to Christensen. Sherman school was erected in 1928, and the others in 1936-'37, with additions at a later date in mind.

Part of Large Program.

These additions are a part of the $6,170,000 building program planned for schools on the southwest side over a period of five years. The city-wide program calls for the expenditure of nearly $30,000,000, and is contingent on the granting of federal funds to cover 50 per cent of the cost, and the lifting of war time building restrictions.

The school cnstruction program, most comprehensive in the city's history, is based on a survey by Christensen, and is largely a project of modernization and replacement, designed to eliminate substandard facilities now in use and to provide modern and uncrowded schools in areas where a population growth is anticipated.

The addition to Kellogg school is planned for construction in 1948, according to present plans, and those to the three other schools for 1947.

Sends Congratulations.

Papers had been sent to his commanding officer who was asked to see that the examinations were written without assistance and to verify the fact to the state board of examiners.

Official notice of his passing, as well as a congratulatory letter from Horace B. Garman, secretary of the state board of law examiners, have been sent. After affidavits are submitted regarding his character, the oath, usually administered in Springfield, will be mailed to Zelezinski to be sworn before commissioned officers before the license is sent.

Was Honor Graduate.

RETIRED TILDEN LEADER HIGHLY VALUES STUDY

A good teacher should also be a good student, says Frederick E. Price, 7356 Merrill av., recently retired principal of Tilden Technical High school, 4747 S. Union av. He has practiced what he preaches. During 38 of the 44 years he taught in the Chicago public school system he was also attending school.

Frederick Price.

A south sider for 56 years, Price has helped organze the shop programs of the Chicago schools. He supervised installation of machinery and shops in Bowen High school. He has taught at Englewood and Hirsch High schools, at Bradwell, Von Humboldt, Farren, Libby, McLaren, and Barton grammar schols, and at Washburne continuation school.

Sets Example in Grades.

Price, who often urged his Tilden students to work for high grades, set a high example at old South Chicago High school, now Bowen, when as president of his class he was graduated fifth with an average of 90. After attending normal college he studied at Armour Institute of Technology, Northwestern university, and the University of Chicago, and took several post-graduate courses in industrial education.

His theory of education is that "the dull fellow has just as much right to succeed as the bright student but can't take as rich a course." He believes that students should take courses which their aptitudes indicate they can handle and that all students should not be required to compete on the same material at the same speed.

Improvements Are Cited.

Improvements at Tilden during Price's four years of leadership include a remodeled welding shop, installation of gas fired furnaces in the forge shop, new millroom machinery, and a new airplane engine shop.

Price inaugurated at Tilden the sponsor system whereby one teacher is in charge of each semester grade with direct supervision of programs and records of that grade. The student council was reorganized and a new constitution written.

Activities Flourishing.

During his tenure Tilden has enjoyed considerable success in many activities for students. The R. O. T. C. unit, under command of Staff Sgt. Michael J. Moore, won top honors in the federal inspection and first place in picked platoon competition during three of the last four years. The football team coached by Charles Harvey won the public high school championship in 1941, 1942, and 1944 and won over Weber High school for the city championship the last year.

The Craftsman, school annual, sponsored by Mrs. Esta G. Aldrich, received All-American rating from the National Scholastic Press association at the University of Minnesota.

Hobby Is Woodworking.

Woodworking, a subject Price has taught many boys, is his hobby. He has made several pieces of furniture, and drew the plans for his seven room home where Price and his wife, a former school teacher, have lived since 1911.

Price recently reconditioned a cradle which had been in his family for 100 years for his granddaughter, Carol Ann Lane, 8 months. She and her mother, Mrs. Helen Lane, the Price's daughter, are living with them until Lt. Kenneth Lane, Carol Ann's father, returns from the army with which he is stationed in France.

KELLY UPHOLDS LEADERSHIP IN PAPER DRIVES

Students Top 130,000 Pounds in Day.

Kelly High school, 4136 S. California av., which holds the national student record for waste paper collected in one day, maintained its leadership in the city-wide collection on Feb. 16. Early tabulations show that Kelly students brought in more than 130,000 pounds.

Other southwest side high schools which ranked high in the city contest were Lindblom, 6130 S. Wolcott av., which was second with 77,650 pounds, and Harper, 6520 S. Wood st., which was third with 62,500 pounds.

During the monthly one day collections in the last 12 months Kelly High has never fallen below a 100,000 pound mark. It established the national record of 237,000 pounds last November. The school also holds the state record in scrap metal collection with 311,000 pounds. This total was second highest in the country.

"We find that both boys and girls join in the patriotic salvage effort," said Mrs. Mary R. Prendergast, war coördinator of the school's faculty. "Month after month we find girls coming to school with huge bundles of waste paper and returning home for more. The boys have a regular system of collection, and use hand carts, small trucks, and almost every possible means of transportation, including even baby carriages, to get the paper to school."

Of the 2,291 students enrolled at Kelly, Mary M. Arendt, 5200 S. Monitor av., was the outstanding collector among girl students in the Feb. 16 drive, with 2,300 pounds.

A group of home room leaders called shock troopers head the salvage campaign. They aid in gathering the paper, stack it in the school yard, and even load it on the trucks hauling it to yards of dealers on its way to the mills to be manufactured into blood plasma boxes, shell containers, and ration boxes, and other containers.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Two new radio shows will have their premier in Chicago today. Helen Hayes, currently starring in "Harriet," will introduce a Sunday dramatic series from W-G-N studios at 9:15 tonight. Miss Hayes tonight will play the lead in a dramatization of the story of Maj. Flora Fellmeth of the army nurse corps. Maj. Fellmeth was the last American nurse to escape from Manila before it fell to the Japanese. She is stationed in Chicago now. The program will be devoted to the recruitment of nurses for the military services. The cast will be recruited from members of the "Harriet" company. Hal Lansing will be narrator.

FOUR S. W. SIDERS WIN D. F. C. FOR JOBS WELL DONE

Navigation Feat Brings a Reward to One.

Peter Vanderkamp.

George Zavadil.

Staff Sgt. Peter Vanderkamp, son of Mr. and Mrs. Garrett Vanderkamp, 6327 W. 55th pl., was presented the award at an 8th air force Liberator base in England. He also holds the air medal with three clusters. An aerial gunner, he entered service in February, 1943, and reported for foreign service in May, 1944.

Both on 35 Missions.

Staff Sgt. George Zavadil, son of Mrs. Margaret Zavadil, 3109 W. 59th st., also flies as a gunner for the 8th air force in England. Both Zavadil and Vanderkamp received the distinguished flying cross for extraordinary achievement during their 35 bombing missions.

His efficiency as navigator of a 15th air force Flying Fortress has won the D. F. C. for Lt. John D. Costello, 8043 Peoria st., stationed in Italy.

After being hit during a bomb run over a German city, Costello's aircraft lost speed and dropped behind the formation. Costello set his own course for the home field and, despite many detours to avoid known positions of enemy aircraft, he maintained complete knowledge of geographical position. When the fuel was almost gone Costello gave the pilot a precise bearing for an emergency landing field.

Wins Medal in Burma.

He has flown 50 missions over enemy territory and, in addition to the distinguished flying cross, has been awarded the air medal with two oak leaf clusters.

Corp. Walter S. Zysko, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Zysko, 4840 S. Kedvale av., received the D. F. C. at a 10th air force base in Burma. He has flown more than 550 combat hours as an aerial radio operator during five months in the India-Burma theater. Zysko was a student at Kelly High school prior to entering service.

THORNTON BAND TO GIVE FRIDAY NIGHT CONCERT

The 16th annual concert by the Thornton Township High school band will be presented Friday night at 8:15 o'clock in the high school auditorium in Harvey. The band of 70 members is under direction of L. A. Hopkins.

Mother Takes 4 Days in Writing Letter of Love

Mrs. Josephine Muscaiello, 4710 Wentworth av., recently finished the four day job of writing a birthday letter to her son, Pvt. Salvatore Muscaiello, who will be 23 Thursday, and who is with the marines in the Southwest Pacific.

Mrs. Muscaiello devoted four days to the task because the letter measured 69 by 59 inches, approximately the size of a bedsheet. She ran out of words to fill the last few inches of the huge sheet of paper, and about 40 friends pitched in and inscribed greetings.

Mrs. Muscaiello was unable to find an envelope large enough to accommodate the massive missive, so she will mail it to him rolled like a scroll. It will go airmail, if she can find a plane large enough to carry it. Estimates on how much postage will be required range from $1 to $5.

Reading the letter, Mrs. Muscaiello figures, will give her son something to while away the time until at least his 24th birthday.

Chicagoan Given Bronze Star for Exploit.

While leading a supply train with the 5th army in Italy, Pvt. Carmen J. Salerno, 4724 S. Princeton av., and two companions discovered a group of Germans digging in with three machine guns. At the Yanks' order 21 Germans surrendered with their weapons which action was credited with having prevented an ambush of the supply train.

Salerno is one of 11 southwest siders who recently received the bronze star for heroic service. One award was made posthumously to John Wallace, father of Corp. Gordon J. Wallace, 5758 S. Christiana av., who was killed by a sniper's bullet on Kwajalein atoll. Corp. Wallace had been awarded the Purple Heart. While guarding a command post, Wallace and his squad beat off several enemy attacks and all thru the night he was a constant source of inspiration to his men by his expert leadership and cheerful comments, the citation disclosed.

Clerk Fires Machine Gun.

Tech. Sgt. Joseph J. Rudis, son of Mrs. Barber Yonikas, 2434 W. 69th st., won the bronze star by distinguishing himself in military operations against the Japanese in South Central China. John F. Jesse, son of Frank Jesse, 5522 S. Lowe av. Dunn's action was credited with saving the lives of three comrades. He treated them and remained with them until they were evacuated.

Aids Comrades Under Fire.

Jesse, who also has been awarded the combat infantryman's badge, made several trips under enemy fire across a 300 foot ravine to aid in the evacuation of several wounded members of a patrol.

Similar heroism brought the award to Tech. Sgt. Theodore J. Janus, 4946 S. Justine st., serving with the 5th army in Italy. He and three other volunteers made their way 300 yards across exposed terrain under shell fire to administer first aid to three wounded men and evacuate them.

The Philippine liberation ribbon—awarded by the commonwealth government of the Philippines to all troops actively participating in the campaign to free the islands, has been awarded 1st Sgt. Leslie W. Carlson, Blue Island, in addition to the bronze star.

Lindauer, 2718 W. 42d st., flight chief of a ground crew in the 15th air force in Italy, has received the bronze star. Yet he turned down love, riches, career — to journey the world over in search of life's greatest secret! But what was he seeking? And did he really find it? Could that explain why he became so fascinated by drunken, drug-ridden Sophie, broken plaything of Paris?

Over 1,000,000 copies of this leading best-seller have already been published! You will thrill to this absorbing, worldly wise novel—by the master storyteller, who gave you "Rain," "Of Human Bondage," "The Moon and Sixpence," and other masterpieces!

HUNGRY HILL
DAPHNE du MAURIER

Her Playthings Were—Money and Men!

HUNGRY HILL, by Daphne du Maurier. Fanny-Rosa was only seventeen—yet a tantalizing smile haunted her red lips, and in her sea-green eyes flashed a reckless challenge no man could resist! Impish, teasing, devil-may-care, she tossed men's fortunes to the winds; and her boldness robbed them of their faith in women!

Here is a gorgeous, turbulent, swift-moving book! "A century of excitement, violence, drama and melodrama fill its 400 pages," says the Chicago Tribune. Daphne du Maurier, who gave you REBECCA and FRENCHMAN'S CREEK, has surpassed herself in this fascinating story of hotheaded men and warmhearted women!

The Strange Woman

Angel or Devil—Which Was She?

THE STRANGE WOMAN, by Ben Ames Williams. To her New England world, Jenny Hager was known as a righteous woman. But to the eight men who really knew her—her father, husbands, sons, lovers—this Maine Cleopatra was a shameless, passionate she-devil! She drove her father, Big Tim Hager, to drown himself in rum in fear of his own unholy desire for her! And as a child-bride, she brought banker Isaiah Foster a new zest for living—for all his seventy years!

Nearly 500,000 readers have gasped at this daring story of an utterly amazing character. A rich, gaudy, full-bodied novel that you'll long remember!

Theaters and Concerts Escape Early Closing Order

Some Operas, Tho, May Have to Be Pared

By Claudia Cassidy.

Curfew shall not ring for theaters or concert halls which have a Cinderella complex about folding up before midnight, but it may mean that some of the longer winded operas have to start earlier or remove larger chunks of what the irreverent describe as Gurnemanz' garrulity and Trsitan's longevity. Myself, I have never minded how long they took when Kipnis was intoning the Good Friday spell or Melchoir was asking about that ship. But I will settle with the incomplete Wagnerite if in turn I can get some of those theater curtains to go up a little nearer 8 than 9 o'clock, just for the sake of war time deadlines. As the length of plays has been shrinking, the starting hour has been retreating. If some of the current ones rang up at 8:15 the customers would be out on the streets by 10, and I admit they might feel more cheated than grateful. Maybe the whole thing will work around toward Arthur Hopkins' prophecy of plays without intermission, giving two performances a night. If you hear screaming, it's actors.

Mae West.

Still sticking to the old fashioned scheme, and arriving within a month or two, are a batch of shows, none precisely new. "Dear Ruth" will be the freshest of the lot, when it decides on a date and theater for the Chicago company headed by Augusta Dabney. Otherwise, the youngest is Mae West's bout with "Catherine Was Great," in which she impersonates her own idea of the Russian empress whose lovers rose in rank as in favor. This takes place at the Studebaker the night of March 12 under the auspices of Michael Todd, who presented the spectacle to Broadway last August with something less than the unforgotten impact of Miss West's earlier frolic, "Diamond Lil." It got poor notices but recovered to last out most of the season. One story goes that Miss West's first nighters, assembled for fun, got art instead, and as Abe Cohen says, Art didn't like it, either. Anyway, Miss West dropped art like a hot cake and returned to opulent undulations in some of the season's more curvaceous velvets.

• • •

If Miss West returns as vintage wine of somewhat musky bouquet, Mary Martin comes for the first time as champagne in the thinnest of glasses, spectacularly fragile at the waistline. She is and has been the star of "One Touch of Venus" since October, 1943, so her arrival at the Opera house April 2 [note the one night postponement] comes under the banner of it's high time. Miss Martin will be a little girl in a big place, and I hope she can be cozy there with her confidential songs. They are the best thing in the show.

Most venerable of the spring crop, naturally, is "Othello," due at the Erlanger April 9, but it has been given a boxoffice twist by casting Paul Robeson as the Moor. And while "Blossom Time" is dropping in at the Opera house on its 25th annual junket, "Rosalinda" can date it by almost half a century. The difference is that the Shuberts are touring their Schubert pot of gold virtually unchanged, while the New Opera's "Rosalinda" is Johann Strauss' "Die Fledermaus" in the guise arranged for continental and later New York production by Erich Wolfgang Korngold and the late Max Reinhardt.

"Fledermaus" has waltzed across the stages of the nation for decades, starting with its Viennese première in 1874. In 1904 is was presented at the Metropolitan with Sembrich as Rosalinda, and at the next performance that season there was an interpolated concert with Nordica, Homer, Caruso, Scotti, Fremstad, Eames, and Plançon helping out. The Chicago Opera put it on in English for New Year's Eve, 1927, call-

THE GOLDEN TOTEM

BY BARRETT WILLOUGHBY

(Copyright: 1945: By Barrett Willoughby.)

INSTALMENT VIII.

AFTER they had talked a while about other things, Perry burst out: "Boy! Will the boss be glad you're staying on as his secretary! He'll be doing handsprings all over the place."

"Most likely he'll conclude I don't know my own mind and refuse to trust me with his correspondence."

"Not our boss, Lynn. He's the most understanding guy I ever knew. I might have missed seeing you tonight if it hadn't been for him.

"He came to the bunkhouse a couple of hours ago to see how I was making out. I was dead to the world. So he woke me, got me under a shower, whacked me into shape, and sent me over here with his blessing."

Some one, somehow, began playing a flute in a way that made her forget everything else for the moment.

The notes drifted down thru the night, a crystal thread of melody, dim, yet clear and lovely and continuous as the rise and fall of a fountain. They seemed to dwell in the wilderness spaces, the music of dream and longing, of gentle remorse and lost felicity.

"Wha—who's that?" Lynn was wondering, incredulous, charmed.

"That must be Flan O'Hara up on Melody Hill. The boys say when he's in remorse after a spree, he always walks thru the woods playing the flute."

Lynn introduced the name of Court Faber deliberately. She recounted the incident of the swinging block aboard the Prince Hal. Perry was impressed. He caught her to him and held her close for a moment. "To think I might have lost you, Lynn, if it hadn't been for him. I'll make it a point to thank the guy personally, altho there seems to be some sort of a feud on between him and the boss."

• • •

"Do you know what a bulldoze king is," Lynn asked with seeming irrelevance.

He laughed. "What a gal! Using the mining lingo already. A bulldoze king, darling, is the boss of a crew of bulldozers."

"Yes, but what is——"

"Bulldozers are hard rock miners who do special work deep down underground in the chambers—or stopes—that are blasted out of the heart of a mountain.

"They dynamite the big chunks of ore so they can fall thru the chute. That's not the safest business in the world, darling. But compared with the bulldoze king's job, it's like snuggling in God's pocket. For in addition to bossing his crew, the king has to take over all the difficult and really dangerous bulldozing the ordinary bulldozer dares not tackle.

"It takes a cool head and steel nerves to go up against that sort of thing day after day, Lynn. Klasby—he's the super at the Golden Totem—told me he worked in a mine once where as many as three kings were carried out feet first in 24 hours. But of course such things don't get talked about in a mining town."

"O-o-o. . . ." Lynn breathed a long sigh. "But I don't see yet why a mining engineer, even a young one, should have to take on such a dangerous job, Perry."

He looked at her. "What mining engineer?"

"O——er——on the steamer I heard that Court Faber paid his way thru the University of Alaska by such work, and then, even after he was graduated, he worked all last year as a bulldoze king in the Alaska-Taku."

"Ummm. Well, last year was still pretty much of a depression year in Alaska and there weren't any jobs for cub mining engineers. But there's always call for a bulldoze king. And, because of the risks they run, they get comparatively big wages. So I suppose the guy kept on kinging because he needed money. And if you ask me, lovely, he certainly must have needed it mighty bad."

Later, in the Ivory Room, she slipped between the sheets, tired and pleasantly conscious of a scent, clean, soothing, illusive, and so-faint she sometimes thought she was imagining it. This was the loveliest, most luxurious bed she had ever been in, yet sleep eluded her. For a long time she lay, wide-eyed, wondering about many things: What woman had furnished Illahee? Why books, and the monograms from had the fly-leaves been cut from the the linen? Why the bitter hostility in Tonglaw's black eyes when he saw her taking possession of the Ivory Room? And why was he, Greer's trusted houseman, secretly meeting Court Faber in the deserted cabin on Periwinkle Isle and for what purpose Court needed money so desperately that he worked for a whole year as a bulldoze king? . . .

The office of the Golden Totem Mining company took up half the big log cabin in the grove back of Illahee lodge. Next morning, when Lynn began her work there, all suspicion that Greer had hired her only because of her father and Perry, vanished. The place was a chaos of wire baskets full of assay reports, old business letters, form letters, and bills. The filing cabinets were stuffed with mis-filed papers and there was, as Greer stated, nearly a sack full of unanswered mail.

That was 10 days ago. Now, except for a basket of folders filled with mis-filed papers, and Greer's personal press-book to be brought up to date, the office was in order. This was payday. Lynn at her desk was filling in checks for her employer's signature. She was alone, with only MacFarlane sleepily watching her from a deep, sunny window sill. Greer had taken Perry off in the Prospector to the deserted Thlinget village outside the Bottleneck to see that the Chief's house was prepared as a launching place for the Baxter party expected later in the week.

Lynn filled in the last check and leaned back in her chair with a contented sigh. Then, as her gaze fell on a bowl of black lustrous wood that stood on her desk, her fine brows took on a quirk that was both pleased and slightly puzzled. The bowl was oval in shape and about a foot long—a savagely beautiful thing decorated with iridescent ovals of abalone shell and strange, boldly carved symbols of the Thlinget warrior's might. A chief's eating dish, Tonglaw had told her one day.

• • •

The first morning Lynn came to work in the office the ebon bowl had been sitting there on her desk filled with the heart lifting beauty of wild white hyacinths. And with them was an unsigned typewritten note:

> Here, at Illahee, you would never have to sell one of your loaves of bread to buy hyacinths for your soul.

Lynn was utterly surprised and charmed. Never had the most expensive floral offerings of civilization meant as much to her as did these Alaska wild flowers placed there to welcome her on the first morning of her working career. She pictured Perry getting up very early in the morning so that he might go to the meadows and gather them for her. And she pressed the most beautiful spray between the leaves of the dictionary so that she might keep it as long as she lived.

When Perry found her alone at noon she sprang up from her desk and thanked him. "Darling!" She took his face between her hands and placed quick kisses on his eyes, his chin, his mouth. "That's the nicest thing you've done for me since I landed in Alaska."

He seemed surprised at her warmth; started to say something, then stopped and in silence held her closer to him. Lynn felt that he was boyishly embarrassed to have her notice his effort to make up for his cavalier treatment of her in Juneau; and so she said nothing more about the flowers.

A few morning later when she came to work the bowl was filled with wild roses and short lacelike sprays of yellow cedar with tiny chartreuse cones on them. An odd but singularly delightful combination that made her feel tenderly proud of Perry's unexpected knack with flowers. The typewritten note under the edge of the bowl read:

> At Illahee all the linen was scented with wild rose petals and the tips of cedar boughs.

Lynn thought: How lovely. That must be what I smell in my nice bed. But I wonder how Perry learned about this?

She didn't ask him. It was enough that he was shyly revealing his finer and more thoughtful side. She savored her new happiness in silence.

Today she felt sorry for girls who had to work in prosaic city surroundings. Here in this frontier office the desk and chairs were sturdy, attractive homemade pieces of Alaska yellow cedar that gave off a fragrance like sandalwood. All about the room were low shelves on which ore specimens were displayed.

Lynn had not yet gotten over her surprise that mineralized rock could glow with such pure, exquisite colors: alabaster threaded with gold; azurite and malachite, copper-blue like a kingfisher's feather and bronze-green like a humming bird's breast, and there were pieces of cinnabar red as crushed ripe strawberries are red, and lumps of coal iridescent as a peacock's tail.

The peeled log walls, painted yellow, were hung with interesting framed maps, photographs of celebrated mines, and many enlarged, captioned snapshots of Jefferson Greer. Each snapshot identified the big Alaskan with some commercial enterprise of the north.

As Lynn leisurely looked them over now, a twinkle came into her blue eyes. Greer, in his impeccable Alaska trail clothes, had a slightly theatrical air—like a hero in one of Cousin Henriette's pulp adventure stories. Here he posed in front of an oil derrick at a place called Katalla. There he stood, aware of himself, in a circle of bored blue foxes on a fur farm in the Aleutians. Another picture showed him at a Matanuska Valley farm, one expensively booted foot planted on a 40 pound cabbage! But in the largest one he was really the impressive Alaskan in a reindeer parka, holding by the collar a spirited malemute with prick ears and great intelligent eyes. The dog, said the caption, was Greer's famous leader, Moccasin. Lynn had not yet seen the animal, but she took it for granted it was kept at the cookhouse at the mine.

• • •

Because she had been working long hours, even on Sunday, and because Perry had been absent on two trips to Juneau, Lynn had not been to see the mine. In fact, she had never been out of sight of Illahee lodge. The only time she had ventured for a walk in the woods by herself, Greer had materialized soon after she got started. He was enthusiastic about some petroglyphs he had just discovered on a stone which the tide had uncovered; and he insisted on her coming with him to the beach to see the crude chiselings.

On their way to the petroglyph stone they came to a swift, shallow stream. Greer casually said, "I'll carry you over." Without waiting for her assent, he lifted her in his great arms—and then a curious thing happened: That first instant of physical contact seemed to release in him some powerful emotional current that poured thru her, interpenetrating every atom of her body and paralyzing her mind with helplessness and terror and surrender. The confusion came and went in a flash; but when he finally set her down on the opposite bank, she could scarcely control a wild impulse to run from him.

Recalling the incident now in the peaceful, sunny office, Lynn thought: How perfectly coo-coo of me—feeling like a cave damsel being rushed off by the primitive boy friend. Even tho he doesn't look it, he's old enough to be my father. And men that old——

She didn't finish the thought, for memory suddenly gave her back Greer's face as he had looked when he gently set her down on the bank that day. His still, locked face with eyes gone beautifully, strangely brilliant, and a tiny pulsebeat moving under the faint scar across his cheek bone.

She shook her head. That couldn't have meant anything, because he had gone on talking in his usual calm, semi-paternal way about grizzlies. They were abroad in great numbers at this season of the salmon run, he said. "And they're monsters, Lynn. Some weigh over half a ton. Ursus Horribilis. One jumped me on Melody Hill last fall, but I killed him with my revolver, the only weapon I had with me. He measured 12 feet from tip to tip. I had him made into a rug for my sitting room." He smiled. "The next time you have the urge to wander in the woods by yourself, Lynn, first open my door and take a look at the creature."

The urge had been growing on Lynn ever since morning when she had arrived at the office to find the ebon bowl filled with thick petaled yellow water lilies.

> These water babies came from the high lake back of Illahee.

As Lynn read the typewritten note, she made up her mind to quit work early and go in search of the lily lake where Perry must have picked the flowers before he left on the Prospector. In preparation she had changed into a mist green slack suit when she went home for lunch. It was 3 o'clock now. If she left at once she'd have plenty of time to get back before Perry and Greer returned.

She rose and put the cover on her typewriter. McFarlane leaped down and ran to the open doorway where he stood bounding from side to side on his forelegs. "Just a minute, little pie," Lynn called to him. "I must obey the boss and take a peep at Ursus Horribilis."

Lynn had never before looked in at Greer's private quarters—a sitting room and bedroom which Tonglaw put in order each morning when he came to clean the office. As she opened the door, a faint close smell of cigarets and liquor met her nostrils. Odd, thought Lynn. Greer doesn't drink nor smoke.

Lynn made a face at it. "We are not impressed," she said aloud. And then the finger of memory began tapping at her mind. According to Greer's story, he had shot the animal and he'd had the skin mounted for his sitting room. But before that . . hadn't Mrs. Strum said a big game guide had given Greer the bear rug for a present? The discrepancy bothered Lynn for a moment. Then she shrugged the subject aside, walked from the room and closed the door.

"Let's go!" she gave the word to the eager MacFarlane.

• • •

She broke thru timber at last and found herself looking across a long narrow lake curved round the foot of the last high upthrust of Melody Hill. There were the yellow water lilies. Lovely flotillas of them edging calm water that mirrored summer clouds and a wide buttress of white stone that rose from the opposite shore.

The distance across was less than a city block, and Lynn could see a dark square affixed to the face of the white stone. She made her way around the shore until she arrived at the weathered bronze plate fastened to the outcropping. It bore an inscription:

To the Memory of Martin Court
E'en as he trod that day to God.
So walked he from his birth;
In simpleness and gentleness
And honor and clean mirth.

Lynn repeated aloud: "In simpleness . . . and gentleness . . . and honor . . ." Court Faber would be this man's grandson. Court Faber, whom Greer accused of trying to sell a worthless mine. . . . But why should Court's grandfather be buried here on the property of Jefferson Greer?

As tho in answer to her thought an unexpected voice, soft and very Irish, said, "The body of him isn't here, young lady. But his spirit is—perhaps. Perhaps."

Lynn looked about, startled. Flan O'Hara had risen from the shade of some alders on one side of the great white rock—a tall, slender, bareheaded man with a surveyor's chain over his shoulder. He had thick, wavy silver hair, and dark violet eyes that were now regarding her with quizzical intentness. Lynn recalled the character Greer had given him: "the biggest periodical drunkard, the biggest liar, the most undependable man in the country." Yet, instantly, she liked him.

"Hello!" she said, smiling.

After they had told each other their names, he apologized: "I'm sorry I bolted out on you, little lady. I thought you saw me taking my ease in the shade yonder, and I watched you with wonder on me because of your sunshiny hair and your little green jacket."

"I was so interested in finding out what was written on the bronze plate I wasn't looking anywhere else. Did you know Martin Court?"

"I did that. He was like an older brother to me. In the splendid old days he and Mary, his daughter, and I were forever coming over here from Juneau to fish and hunt and play. After Mary was wed to Alan Faber, the four of us came. Then Martin—may God rest his soul—went down in the wreck of the Sophia, some twenty years ago. We never found him. 'Twas Mary's idea to put the memorial here in the spot he loved best."

Lynn nodded. "I see. That was a long, long time before Mr. Greer owned this land."

Flan O'Hara lighted a cigaret before he answered. "Mr. Greer doesn't own this land—yet. The line between the Illahee ground and Court's ground runs down the middle of the lake—Martin Lake—and on across the head of the salt water gorge."

"Salt water gorge?"

"There's no salt water in it at all, except once a month during the full moon tides, but the crack that runs out from the other end of this lake empties into it."

• • •

MacFarlane, furiously digging a hole, stopped and looked up with a dab of dirt roosting on his nose. He pricked his ears, sniffed, and suddenly was off like a black streak toward the end of the lake where the creek ran out. Lynn turned to look after him and saw a man coming along the shore. With a lift of the heart she recognized Court Faber. He was carrying a transit over his shoulder. It gave Lynn a curious pleasure to watch his splendid, indolent walk, and the angle of his disreputably jaunty sombrero.

Some distance away he paused and bent over to welcome MacFarlane. The Scott jumped to the curve of his extended arm and permitted himself to be lifted to the young man's unoccupied shoulder, on which he rode proudly toward his mistress.

Court came up, pulling off his hat. "Surprise!" He smiled at Lynn in a way that made her know he was glad to see her. The clean scent of freshly cut spruce wood clung to his trail clothes.

She said, with a nod of her head toward the bronze plate, "Mr. O'Hara has just been telling me about your grandfather."

Court's quick, uneasy glance moved to Flan and back to her before he responded. "I hope my old friend hasn't been boring you with the family history."

"Not a word, Court, my boy. Not a word," emphatically interposed the Irishman. "But do you take charge of the young lady now and turn your transit over to me. 'Tis time I was off and away to the Pent House, if I'm to have supper ready on time."

"Where's the Pent House?"

Flan chuckled. "That's what Court calls the fine cabin I built for the two of us up on Melody Hill." He swung the transit over his shoulder and started up the trail that zigzagged thru the timber above the lake. But almost at once he paused to look back at Lynn. His thin face broke in a mordant, puckish grin. "Come up some time, little lady, when His Nibs is off prowling for prey, and we'll show you the kingdoms of the world."

Court turned hastily to Lynn as if to forestall any further remarks from Flan. He said, "May I take you to the top of Martin's Rock? It was my grandfather's favorite place for expanding his thoughts, so I've been told."

What Has Gone Before

Lynn Clonard, alone in the world, spends her Easter vacation with one of her Aunt Julie's friends and meets Perry Holloway, gay and irresponsible, who is heading for Alaska. Perry asks her to put the Clonard motto, "When two roads open up before me I choose the more venturesome," to work—to marry him, that they may go to Alaska together to seek their fortune. They become engaged and will marry at Christmas time. Perry wires her he has a job as foreman in a mine and pleads with her to come immediately to Alaska and marry him there. Lynn has enough money for a small trousseau and a one-way passage. Court Faber, young mining engineer, rescues Lynn and her dog from an accident on the boat. Perry is late meeting the boat, arriving with two friends—all three hopelessly drunk. At the hotel Lynn tells Perry she will not marry him. Jefferson Greer is approached by Faber and refuses to grant him a right of way to Faber's claim. Lynn finds she has less than $2. Greer tricks Lynn into asking for a job as his secretary at his mine, the Golden Totem. En route to the mine Lynn learns that Perry is aboard the boat and that Greer is Perry's boss. She demands they return at once to Juneau. Out canoeing, Lynn sees Faber and Tonglaw, Greer's houseman, studying over papers. Perry arrives, repentant, asking for another chance.

AMONG THE AUTHORS

By Frederic Babcock.

ONE of the coming spring's publishing sensations promises to be Harrison Forman's "Report from Red China." . . . "I believe I told you I had spent the five months up to last October with the Chinese Communists in the north," Mr. Forman says in a letter to his former professor, Philo M. Buck Jr., at the University of Wisconsin. "I got some wonderful material on the biggest and most hush-hush story in China today—the story of an undeclared 'civil war' with 90 millions of Chinese in north China [they're really not Communists]. There's been an almost complete news blackout on this story because of the strict censorship from Chungking and the Chinese government's refusal to allow a single foreign correspondent to go up there in the last six years. Well, I've let fly with both barrels on this story, and there may be something of a stir when my book comes out next month. . . . My publishers, Henry Holt & Co., are highly enthusiastic about it."

Adria Locke Langley, the friendliest and most genuine person I've met in a long while, came to town the other day to see her 17 year old daughter, a student at the Goodman theater. . . . A native of Stanton, Neb., and educated at Northwestern university, Mrs. Langley has spent much of her time in the south, thereby gathering local color for her "A Lion is in the Streets." . . . This novel, to be published May 7, will be one of the season's headliners on the Whittlesey House list. . . . Another book for which that house holds high hopes is Gerald Kersh's "Faces in a Dusty Picture." That novel of a British regiment's march across the desert will be issued tomorrow.

• • •

Arch Ward has received word that his "Frank Leahy and the Fighting Irish" has gone into the third edition; the first two editions were quickly sold out. . . . Phyllis Whitney and Doris Needler, successful authors of books for children, have started a class in juvenile fiction writing on the Chicago campus of Northwestern's Medill school of journalism. . . . If you're thinking of entering in M-G-M's 1945 $200,000 prize novel award competition, you may obtain a free copy of the rules by writing Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer at 1540 Broadway, New York 19. . . . A picture of life in Chungking is provided in "Crows Are Black Everywhere," by Maj. Herbert O. Yardley, author of "The American Black Chamber," and Carl Grabo, professor of English at the University of Chicago. . . . The novel will be published tomorrow by Putnam's.

• • •

Emily Hahn, whose "China to Me" has been on the best seller lists ever since it was published by Doubleday last fall, has recovered from her long illness in Evanston and has returned to New York. . . . Miss Hahn's Chicago relatives include her brother, Manel, of the Rotarian magazine. . . . Once a famous publisher in Munich and now editor of Pantheon Books in New York, Kurt Wolff was a recent Chicago visitor. . . He fled Germany in 1930, when he saw the Nazi menace approaching, and for 10 years maintained an apartment in Paris and a farm near Florence, Italy. . . . When he came to America four years ago he didn't know a word of English. . . . Now his publishing firm [in which he is associated with Kyrill Schabert] is doing very well, thank you. . . . Its revival of "Grimm's Fairy Tales" went over so big when issued last year that a formidable second edition had to be ordered and has just come off the presses. . . . Mr. Wolff relates that when he left Europe the favorite American authors there were still Sinclair Lewis, Thomas Wolfe, and William Faulkner.

• • •

As forecast in this column some weeks ago, the two Chicagoland groups sponsoring annual get-togethers for established and beginning authors have been merged. . . . As announced by Kenneth E. Olson, dean of the Medill school of journalism, the new organization will be known as the Midwestern Writers' conference, with the board of directors made up of writers, editors, professors, and others who have been conducting the conferences for the last six years. . . . A spring session on the Chicago campus of Northwestern was originally planned, but this year it will be canceled because of war time restrictions. . . . A summer session will be held in Scott hall on the Evanston campus.

Repertory—But No Casts—of Met Season Announced

THE Metropolitan Opera association announces its repertory and prices for the week's engagement opening at the Civic Opera house Monday evening, April 30, but withholds casts and directors because, it explains, the Chicago booking was added late and the snarl of previous commitments by artists has not yet been disentangled. This has a familiar and faintly depressing sound. It popped up last year to give us inferior substitutions for the real thing. Considering that Chicago has known the Met was coming for months, it seems odd the Met was not similarly informed.

However, tho would-be ticket buyers were told weeks ago that mail orders for approximate prices might be sent in any time, it now has been decided that mail orders will be accepted starting April 1. By that time, at least, full information should be available, so that you won't be buying a pig in a poke. Operatic pigs are luxuries and you ought to be able to find out in advance if they are razorbacks. This year's crop will cost from $2.40, $3.60, $4.20, $4.80, $5.40, and $6.60 to $7.20 for box seats. All prices include tax.

The one name actually in the bin is Lily Pons'. She opens the season in Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor." Other operas listed are Wagner's "Lohengrin," Tuesday evening, May 1; Mozart's "Don Giovanni," Wednesday evening, May 2; Rimsky-Korsakoff's "The Golden Cockerel," the English version of "Coq d'Or," Thursday evening, May 3; Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," which brings back the Chicago Opera settings, not necessarily for keeps, Friday evening, May 4; Bellini's "Norma," probably with Zinka Milanov, Saturday afternoon, May 5; Puccini's "La Boheme," Saturday evening, May 5.

Lily Pons.
[De Bellis Photo.]

To many of us, the most hoped for item is missing from that list. I mean Lotte Lehmann, no substitute, in "Der Rosenkavalier," specifically listed in the Metropolitan's prospectus, which is artistic for bait. Perhaps Maestro Cleva can arrange it for fall. Considering that Lauritz Melchior will not be coming, it will be no hardship to give up "Tristan and Isolde" or "Die Walküre," which make dwarfs out of less than giants, nor did the New York reviews suggest that the revival of "La Gioconda" was anything to rival memories of Rosa Raisa's great days. "The Barber of Seville" dropped out, too, when the tentative list of 10 performances shrank to seven. How "Lohengrin" and "Norma" popped in I don't know, but they are among several I would trade right back for "Rosenkavalier."

A Quobble—Not a Quibble.

"Maybe," writes Edward Buczynski, "it isn't cricket to quibble about anything in connection with 'The Glass Menagerie.' It is such a satisfying job from every point of view. But how about that account of Eddie Dowling's activities in the program notes? It says that Dowling productions of 'Richard II.' and 'Hamlet' introduced 'the English actor Maurice Evans to American playgoers.' I seem to recall being 'introduced' to Maurice Evans several years before that, when he played Romeo in Katharine Cornell's staging of 'Romeo and Juliet' and later, again, when he was the tremulous Dauphin in her production of 'Saint Joan.' Don't jobs with Katharine Cornell count?"

You not only have a quibble, Mr. Buczynski, but if I may amend the dictionary, you have a quobble, which is my idea of a whopper of a quibble. I long since gave up program notes as bad for my nerves, so I hadn't come across that one. No doubt Mr. Dowling meant to say he introduced Mr. Evans to American playgoers as a Shakespearean star in the famous Margaret Webster combination. Evans wasn't a very good Romeo, but he was a superb Dauphin [I like that word tremulous] and a magnificent Richard. But not even the Cornell productions were his sole previous introductions to America. He starred as Napoleon in "St. Helena," remember? And we should be calling him Maj. Evans. He is still in the Pacific area with the army's special services division, which gave soldiers the Evans-Judith Anderson "Macbeth." He has a new co-worker at the moment, and you'll never guess, so you might as well give up. It's Boris Karloff.

A Protest on Proposed Prices.

Since the "Secretary to Miss Grace Moore" episode, my mail and telephone calls have developed a distinctly secretarial outbreak, including a letter from Ethel Paul, whose signature is subtitled, "Secretree to Miss Ethel Paul." In both incarnations, she wishes to protest to Mr. Dowling about those proposed prices for his Chicago producing theater, when, as, and if. Too high, she insists, and if you mention gallery, she comes right back, "Go up there yourself and see how you like what happens to your ego, not to mention your eyes, and ears, and your neck." She also wants to know how come Billy Rose can reduce the top price of a show to $1.10 after his investment has been paid back, saying he expects to make a million dollars from a million people. "His show," she goes on, addressing Mr. Dowling, "is a gorgeous extravaganza requiring an enormous investment. You said yourself that your type of theater does not require so huge an expenditure. Why then can not you start out with $1.10 top? Don't you want to make a million dollars?"

Answering for myself and for Mr. Dowling, who hasn't read this letter, I can only say, "Whoa, Miss Paul and secretree, you are going too fast." It's a question of capacity and length of run. Extravaganzas thrive in big theaters but intimate plays die a thousand deaths. Put "The Glass Menagerie" in the Broadway, where "Carmen Jones" was housed, and it wouldn't be worth two cents. Yet it cost about $60,000 to stage, in a small theater, which means that not even capacity business can make a cleanup. The combination of fine theater in small houses at low prices can be answered in terms of contemporary costs only by subsidy. Modern design, if we ever get it, should solve the cricks in the neck. As for the galleries we have now, I used to climb pretty high before I became an aisle seat deadhead, and tho the Auditorium peaks often made me dizzy, they never even dented my ego. And if you don't think that truthful statement is an invitation to the slaughter, you don't know some of my less cozy correspondents.

Helen Traubel, Milstein, Vola Jacobs Listed

By Albert Goldberg.

Each of the three Chicago Symphony orchestra programs of the week will have a soloist. Hans Lange will conduct the Tuesday matinee and the Saturday night "Pop," and Désiré Defauw will return to the podium after a week's absence to conduct an all-Wagner program at the Thursday-Friday concerts.

Helen Traubel, leading Wagnerian soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, will make her first downtown appearance with the orchestra at the Thursday-Friday concerts. A native of St. Louis, Miss Traubel's rise to her present eminence has been one of slow but constant growth. She began her vocal studies in St. Louis at the age of 16, and her debut was made with the St. Louis Symphony orchestra in 1925 under the direction of Rudolph Ganz, as a result of which she toured as soloist with the orchestra. Radio appearances and concerts with leading orchestras followed, but her entry into the Metropolitan was not made until 12 years later, in a very modest manner, when she sang the principal soprano role in Walter Damrosch's "The Man Without a Country," during a supplementary spring season of that organization.

Nathan Milstein again will appear with the orchestra under Mr. Lange's direction on Tuesday afternoon, playing the Tschaikowsky violin concerto for the fourth time at these concerts. Saturday night's "Pop" soloist will be Vola Jacobs, who will be heard in Weber's "Konzertstück" for piano and orchestra. Mrs. Jacobs is the wife of Harry Jacobs, a new member this season of the orchestra's French horn section.

The original Don Cossack chorus and dancers will return to the Civic Opera house this afternoon at 3:30 for their second concert of the season under the direction of Serge Jaroff. Amherst College May Abandon Fraternity System

Post-War Plan Approved by Alumni Group

By The Rev. John Evans.

Old Amherst college, Amherst, Mass., may come out of the war with the fraternity system abandoned. Organized debate on that subject by the alumni committee on post-war Amherst as reported in the February Amherst News entitled "Amherst Tomorrow," at least, veers strongly in that direction.

In addition to the fraternity question with its Greek and barbarian caste system, the Council News edition on "Amherst Tomorrow" comprises one of the most thoughtful and provocative surveys dealing with the entire academic and social setup of a typical men's liberal arts college. President Stanley King will address the Chicago Amherst alumni at the University club on March 6.

Particularly illuminating was the discussion of the relevancy of the small liberal arts college in days to come. The prospective student and his parents and educational advisers scarcely could find a better base for discussing the question of small college versus big university for undergraduate study than that provided by the Amherst alumni reports.

However, for old Amherst, with its deep roots of tradition in fraternity life even to entertain a fair-minded discussion of the abolition of "frats" is sheer revolution. But facts are facts [and they are all printed in full], and after reading them one would not be greatly surprised to see Psi U, Chi Psi, Alpha Delta Phi houses and the rest never reopened again as such when guns become silent again.

After assessing various values derived from the fraternity system, and all the arguments for the fraternity system that this writer, a fraternity man, ever heard were there, the liability side was appraised. Here were new considerations in addition to the old anti-democratic arguments. For example, the $11,000 collected by national offices of the fraternities from pre-war Amherst students was mentioned. Amherst had 13 fraternities.

SOLOIST

Helen Traubel, soloist in the Chicago Symphony orchestra's Wagner program, to be played at Orchestra hall Thursday night and Friday afternoon, under the direction of Desire Defauw.

[Abresch Photo.]

"That there is adequate value received for such a substantial tax," the report asserted, "is doubted by all."

How proved? Studies of grades of Amherst students over a 19 year period showed that the nonfraternity group has a 60 per cent better academic record as judged by summa cum laude and magna cum laude degrees awarded it than the fraternity group achieved. Moreover, two and a quarter more nonfraternity men were invited to membership in the academic honors society of Phi Beta Kappa than were social Greek letter men during that period.

The majority report on this subject concluded as follows:

"The majority thus finds little in recent fraternity tradition or character calculated to give assurance that fraternities at Amherst can be made important supports and leaders toward intellectual interests and attainments. For these reasons the majority recommends proposal D which entails abolition of Greek letter fraternities at Amherst and development of other groups as suggested in broad outline."

BOOKMAN'S HOLIDAY

By Delos Avery.

THIS department's recent mention of the golligub luncheon offered by the late James Gibbons Huneker to H. L. Mencken brought so many letters from readers pleading for "more about golligubs" that I appealed to Mr. Mencken, feeling that he, as a specialist in the American language, and the only living man known to have eaten a golligub, would be best qualified to enlighten. His reply, not entirely disappointing, follows:

> "I can't find golligub in any dictionary of any known or unknown language, so I must assume that Huneker invented it. He was very fertile in that department, especially when working under malt and hops power. Every time I go to New York I miss him all over again. He was the most charming fellow ever heard of in this great Republic, the wonder and despair of all other nations."

• • •

This suggests a project. If golligub is not in the dictionary, why not put it there? I have already done so, by way of a marginal note in my Webster's; but that is only one copy, and the need is for a whole new edition. Mr. Mencken could help. So could Ambrose Bierce, who is now 102 years old if still alive—and nobody has proved that he isn't.

Bierce, like the irascible Dr. Samuel Johnson, had an admirably independent attitude toward dictionaries. Like Johnson, he wrote definitions to suit his own peppery fancy; and like Johnson, he ruthlessly exiled words which failed to please him. Johnson barred civilization from one edition; and Bierce not only banned militate but denied the existence of the word. In "Write It Right," a blacklist of literary don'ts, Bierce said, "If militate meant anything it would mean fight, but there is no such word."

• • •

The fact that militate had been a part of the language for some centuries before Bierce was born did not disturb him at all. It was used by De Quincey, Gibbon, Burke, and [circa 1640] by William Prynne himself. It is true that Prynne for his literary audacity had his ears cut off by order of Archbishop Laud. And Laud had Prynne branded on the cheek with "S. L." supposed to mean "seditious libeler," tho Prynne's interpretation was "stigmata laudis." But Prynne, having lost his ears, lived to see Laud's head severed by the executioner. Note: it was not for the word militate that Prynne was be-eared—or de-eared, but the point is that both he and the word survived.

• • •

Slight as was Bierce's reverence for dictionaries, he made one himself, and called it "The Devil's Dictionary." In it he gave his own definition of other dictionary makers:

> LEXICOGRAPHER. n. A pestilent fellow who, under the pretense of recording some particular stage in the development of a language, does what he can to arrest its growth, stiffen its flexibility and mechanize its methods. For your lexicographer, having written his dictionary, comes to be considered "as one having authority," whereas his function is only to make a record, not to give a law. . . . The bold and discerning writer who . . . makes new words . . . is tartly reminded that "it isn't in the dictionary"—altho down to the time of the first lexicographer [Heaven forgive him!] no author ever had used a word that was in the dictionary. . . .

Bierce goes on to praise the "golden prime and high noon of English speech, when from the lips of the great Elizabethans fell words that made their own meaning and carried it in their very sound."

• • •

I am quite sure that Bierce would have accepted golligubs with delight. The word would have pleased his ear, the thing his palate. He might have used the word to illustrate his definition of edible.

> Edible, adj. Good to eat, and wholesome to digest, as a worm to a toad, a toad to a snake, a snake to a pig, a pig to a man, and a man to a worm.

• • •

A case could be made out, I fancy, for the assumption that when Bierce's parents named him Ambrose—obviously derived from ambrosia, "food for the gods," they may have looked upon their son himself as a sort of celestial golligub, an offering to Olympus. His father's name was classical, too—Marcus Aurelius Bierce.

Ambrose lived at least 71 years, for that was his age when he was last heard from. In 1913 he "disappeared into war-torn Mexico," says the Oxford Companion to American Literature, "to seek 'the good, kind darkness,'" and "probably found in 1914 the euthanasia he desired."

• • •

WELL SAID DEPARTMENT.

[Let Bierce do the saying, in his "Devil's Dictionary."]

HARANGUE, n. A speech by an opponent, who is known as an harangue-outang.

HATRED, n. A sentiment appropriate to the occasion of another's superiority.

THE LITERARY SPOTLIGHT

by Fanny Butcher

MIGNON G. EBERHART, who can always be counted upon to make a good mystery more complicated by giving love a hand in the proceedings, has of late added another ingredient to her skills of character and murder chronicling: The skill of giving the scene of the murder as vivid a reality as the crime and the perpetrators. . . . For her latest, out last Monday, "Wings of Fear," she flies her heroine to Mexico City from New York and makes her a guest in a lovely old house in the Mexican capital, and thus gives her readers an exciting picture of a place that some of them have visited and many more hope some day too see.

She has added international intrigue to the excitement in "Wings of Fear," and the bumping off and discovery of an assortment of Nazi agents give the reader an extra thrill. . . . The book also makes the reader wonder who can be trusted these days—whether that popular Greek god of a blond young man with the manners of Lord Chesterfield himself may not be really a Nazi agent in wolf's clothing. . . . "Wings of Fear" is a thriller-diller. . . . Mrs. Eberhart herself flew on that perilous [in the book] jaunt, and lived for a thrilling few weeks in Mexico City getting the scenic effects.

Martin Flavin visits Chicago.

A visitor last week to Chicago was Martin Flavin, author of the Harper $10,000 prize winner and the Pulitzer prize winner [1944] "Journey in the Dark." . . . His most memorable feature is the curtain of thick white eyebrows growing straight across his face and curling straight up on his forehead a couple of inches. . . . There is a general air of leading character actor about him, altho he is an extremely modest, almost shy person—some one you'd notice in any room, want to know who he was. . . . We lunched at the Arts club. . . . It was, he told me, that organization that produced the first play he ever wrote, in days long ago when it had a floor in an old building on South Michigan av. . . . The play was called "Mignonette," he said. . . . At that time he was working in the family business—wholesale wallpaper—and had only dreams of some day being a writer. . . . He was born in San Francisco, but he spent his childhood and youth and young manhood in the middle west. . . . That's why "Journey in the Dark" has such a genuine middle western feel. . . . He went to the Alcott school in Chicago with Alice Gerstenberg, who also became a well known playwright. . . . Martin Flavin was a successful playwright for many years before he began writing novels. . . . His first was "Mr. Littlejohn," published in 1940 when he was 57 years old Tripped by a Questionnaire.

A couple of years ago, feeling that he might be able to help the war effort—and also to gain much rewarding experience—he went to school to learn how to run an electric lathe preparatory to working in a war factory. . . . When he applied for a job and he had to fill out the lengthy questionnaire, he was baffled by the blanks which were destined to record the years he graduated from high school and college. . . . Altho he had studied two years at the University of Chicago, he had never technically graduated from high school and, altho he had a handsome citation from Columbia university, designating him in impressive Latin the winner of a coveted award as writer of the year's best novel, he does not have a sheepskin proclaiming him a bachelor of arts. . . . He could not record himself as either high school or college graduate, and he was turned down for the job. . . . He tells about it with a chuckle.

Martin Flavin was in Chicago officially as guest of honor at a Sigma Chi dinner, a fraternity which not only is known to every radio listener as the fraternity with the "Sweetheart" but has among its loyal and lyric alumni two of the best loved men of the middle west, George Ade and John T. McCutcheon.

A Publisher's Pun.

Ben Huebsch, pater familias of the Viking Press, and one of the most loved men in the publishing business, sometimes tries his friends with the worst puns in the language and sometimes delights them with the best. . . . He was here last week on his way to the coast. . . . When I told him about the visit before Christmas of Howard Fast, author of "Freedom Road" [published by Duell, Sloan & Pearce, not by Viking], he said, "Now, there's a young man I have always wanted to sign up. I've got an idea for a collaboration for him with Claire Boothe Luce. Think of the advertising possibilities of a book by 'Fast and Luce!'"

And speaking of visitors, Mary Hastings Bradley has been commissioned by Collier's magazine to visit Africa, India, and China and write articles about women's activities, especially the WAC. . . . She hopes to drop down, on her literally flying trip, on Europe and the British Isles. . . . She will be the first Chicago woman novelist to make such a trip.

Chicago Cafes Schedule Early Shows to Beat Curfew

Hotel La Salle Presenting Its Smartest Show

By Will Davidson.

Presumably by now all the stay-out-lates have traded their benzedrine in on a membership in some good book club, and have rearranged schedules to include the new matinee performances at the Chez Itizntso.

What the curfew, Jack Dalton, will do to the night clubs is a question that won't be settled for some time. It will mean a considerable change for some spots, very little for others. For instance, hotel cafes like the Bismarck's Walnut room, the La Salle's Pan American, the Palmer House's Empire room, the Steven's Boulevard, long have been staging early dinner shows.

The La Salle, as an appropriate case in point, has been starting its early show at 7:40, with an eye to getting pre-theater trade. So has the Bismarck. The La Salle right now is presenting its smartest show of the year. It's a revised version of that package entertainment which Harold and Collette Barry have been putting on for some weeks. Harold is the lean, handsome, and hard working dancer with quite a flair for comedy. Where he gets the energy, I don't know, but he's always an amusing chap and one of the friendliest you'll find anywhere.

The current show features Collette and Barry in several neat dance turns, especially a high kicking version of "A Pretty Girl," and an amusing, fast, Charlestonish number. With their dancing troupe, the five Dancing Delights, Harold and Collette do a gay skit to "McNamara's Band" in which Florian Zabach's very nice little band takes the name role. There's a Samba that is pert and pleasant, too. And that is the way you feel about Harold Barry's show—it is entertainment of the pleasantest sort. Not heavy, not posing as great art, just good fun, with a lot of action and color.

Handsome, highly talented Florian Zabach stars in the show, too, with his violin solos. There is effective artistry in his "Star Dust," his "Stormy Weather" with sound and lighting effects and at least one turned up coat collar in the orchestra, and a rhythmic version of "Between the Devil and the Deep Blue Sea." The latter is done with guitar, bass and percussion background, and was originally an army show stunt that the then G. I. Florian did with the visiting Tommy Dorsey. The La Salle should be happy with this Barry-Zabach combination, and handsome Headwaiter Bill should be increasingly busy.

Altho it has not been one of the early starting rooms, the Drake's Camelia house won't find it hard to advance its closing time an hour, and right now it has another good reason for your going over there in the person of six foot 3 and handsome Richard Smart. Mr. Smart is a romantic singer with a pleasant manner and a becoming modesty on the floor. He finds equal opportunity for his easy style of singing in "I'm Glad There Is You," "I Can't Give You Anything But Love," "I'll Walk Alone," or the magnificent "Mucho, Mucho, Mucho." He even essays "Jenny" with good enough results.

Richard Smart.

Terry Helgesen is his adroit accompanist.

It will be a two week run for Mr. Smart, and then Fred Waring's ex-vocalist, Donna Dae, comes in. Always in the background, of course, is Jerry Glidden and his good music. I enjoy listening to Jerry. Without intruding his own virtuosity, he manages to make his piano a most effective focal point for the small band's music.

The Bismarck, with a 7:15 show, continues to salaam before the drawing power of beautiful Talia. She will be held over until April 5. They tell me that the next time Talia comes around she'll have added singing to her act.

The Bismarck continues its three-show policy, the second one being at 9, the third at 10:55. The Stevens has moved its dinner show forward from 8 o'clock to 7, and its supper show to 10 p. m. The Rio Cabana's new schedule is now 7 and 10:30, and you can count on approximately those hours at all the favorite spots.

Boswelling the Bistros:

When Jose Manzanares opens the new Colony restaurant March 8 he'll have as vocalist, blonde Margarita Varga. . . Beautiful Dolores Gray, who sings so well in the Zero Mostel show at the Chez Paree, looks like a cinch for radio fame on the new show they're cooking up for Wayne King. Skip Farrell's in it, too. . . Comes Friday, comes Fiske. Dwight, the leering leprechaun, will be back at the skullduggery in the Mayfair room then. . . Dick La Salle's orchestra will replace Bill Snyder in the Mayfair. Bill goes to the Baker in Dallas the middle of the month. . . You should hear Pat Willis sing "Rum and Coca Cola" in the Buttery. Those lyrics! . . . Two very grand cocktail parties a week ago—Phil Regan's gathering at the Blackstone, and Bill Hunt's big shindig in the Ambassador for his and Variety's big boss, Abel Green.

A big factor in the success of Rio Cabana shows is the music of Cee Davidson's band. He's so coöperative with the acts that he turns them all into sailors. Every time they want a change, they go to Cee.

Drama Notes

"The Voice of the Turtle" is spreading over the map, with Alfred De Liagre Jr., the producer, planning a London company, in addition to selling the South American, Scandinavian and Australian rights. Harry Ellerbee may act Sgt. Page in Australia, and Signe Hasso, the Swedish star, may go back home for Sally Middleton. Mr. De Liagre hopes to cast the London troupe, or so he now says, from the Chicago and New York companies, which makes it something in the not too near future.

• • •

"The Glass Menagerie" will play three extra matinees at the Civic theater on Wednesday afternoons, March 7, 14 and 21, in order to take care of as many customers as possible before the play closes March 24.

• • •

"Foolish Notion," Philip Barry's play for the Theater Guild, will open March 13 at New York's Martin Beck theater, with Tallulah Bankhead, Henry Hull, and Donald Cook heading the cast. Mary Barthelmess is now in the role previously rehearsed by Mary Welch and Barbara Kent.

• • •

Kip Good, who plays the young lieutenant whose good fortune it is to be married to handsome Jane Sterling in the Studebaker's "Over Twenty-One," has more than an actor's claim to that uniform. He served with the 131st field artillery early in the war and received his honorable discharge in 1942.

The University of Chicago Players, under the direction of Jere C. Mickel, will present "Driftwood," a folk drama of the Indiana dunes written by Maurice Tei Dunn, Friday and Saturday evenings at Mandel hall.

• • •

Edward L. Hubler, associate professor of English at Princeton university, will speak on Shakespeare's comedies at Cahn auditorium on the Evanston campus of Northwestern university Tuesday afternoon at 3:30. The public is invited.

• • •

Walter Hampden is back on familiar boards, but with something different to act. With Violet Heming he is appearing at New York's National in a comedy, "Come Be My Love," and that is the very house where he originally staged his version of "Cyrano de Bergerac," back in 1923. Mr. Hampden has been telling people he is thru with cloak and sword stuff and that comedy is for him from now on.

• • •

"The Silver Cord," Sidney Howard's play about a possessive mother, will open Friday evening in the little theater of De Paul university's downtown building at 64 E. Lake st.

• • •

New York's current Cinderella story concerns Chicago's Maureen Cannon, who scored the personal hit of "Up in Central Park." When the show opened on the road she was understudy to the leading lady, and just before it went into New York Mike Todd gave her the job. She previously appeared in George Abbott's "Best Foot Forward."

ing it "The Bat." Raisa, Pavlovska, Hackett, Rimini, Lamont, and Baromeo were in the east, with Weber conducting. The Shuberts brought us a version called "One Night of Love," long enough ago for the movies to snatch Archie Leach and make him Cary Grant, and last season the Philadelphia Opera brought us a production so bad it broke up the troupe. "Rosalinda," due at the Erlanger March 12, has a cast including Lorraine Bridges, Ralph Herbert, John Dudley, and others. The ballets are by Balanchine.

• • •

"Blossom Time" finds figuring pleasant on its first quarter century, and decides that it must have earned the Shuberts something like $6,000,000 in that period. It would be nice to discover that some of that money had honored Franz Schubert, long out of royalties' reach, with a production as charming as the operetta's popularity deserves. The current company, opening at the Opera house tomorrow night for three weeks, has a good Schubert in Earl Covert, who appeared in the ill starred "Alaskan Stampede," and a new Mitzi in Virginia Card, briefly seen here in the first engagement of "The Waltz King." Ruth Gillette, William Marel, and Edmund Dorsay have other leading roles.

But you never know about theater until you see it. Last week's single opening, "The Searching Wind," was so far below the Lillian Hellman-Herman Shumlin level of craftsmanship I couldn't believe it was created by the same people responsible for the bitingly brilliant "The Little Foxes" and the warmly human "Watch on the Rhine." Miss Hellman's writing is weak, her characterization foggy, her conclusions wobbly. Mr. Shumlin's standard of casting and direction has slipped numerous notches. What might have been a penetrating play of a poignant period is just a dull evening in the theater.

Murder Play a Costly Flop on Broadway

By John Chapman.

NEW YORK [Special].—Possibly the costliest failure since Richard Kollmar produced "Dream with Music," was a murder play, "Signature," which closed after one day. It wasn't very good, but it really wasn't that bad. The producers, Richard Skinner and Dorothy Willard, must have decided against tossing away good money on top of what they had already spent.

There were 29 actors in "Signature." There was a nice courtroom set in the period of a Virginia hill town in the 1850s. There were electric fireflies winking outside the window — and the fellow who thought of the gag must have been thinking of electric fireflies when he said, "When you gotta glow you gotta glow." There were sound effects of mobs, choral singers, and wind, and backstage there was a man who howled like a houn' dawg. It seems the dawg was the first one to realize that it wasn't the nice boy who murdered a rich farmer, but the judge of the town himself.

Finally there was a town meeting and the citizens deposed the judge and put him in his own cooler. There wasn't much excitement to any of it, and only one or two of the actors were very good.

Even in these days of three hour movies it often is observed that movie actors can't act, even in movies, and that they should keep away from the stage.

There can't be any hard and fast rule about this, for several Hollywoodians have added generously to the pleasures of the last two Broadway seasons, while some others have smelled more than somewhat.

Margaret Sullivan. [Wide World Photo.]

Jane Wyatt.

Zasu Pitts, who had had no stage training, was highly engaging in a shoddy melodrama, "Ramshackle Inn," which I believe is now successful on the road. Any time Miss Pitts wants to return to Broadway, in another play, she will be welcome.

It is said that even if a movie star was originally a live actor, Hollywood ruins him. Again, sometimes it does, sometimes not. Margaret Sullavan certainly turned in a top flight performance in "The Voice of the Turtle" after a long absence from the stage, and her successor, Betty Field, does pretty well. Every once in a while Miss Field falls ill and they call in Grantland Rice's daughter, Florence. I've not seen her operate, but trusted scouts tell me she is almost as good as Miss Sullavan, and that is praise, indeed.

When Miriam Hopkins, once of the stage and then of the screen, appeared in "The Perfect Marriage," she was accused by some of hamming all over the stage and using eight different techniques. I did not find this so. I thought the play was very bad, but that Miss Hopkins and Victor Jory did all that anybody could do to make it entertaining. Miss Hopkins seemed to be the same Miss Hopkins I used to see.

• • •

Mary Astor, also of no particular stage experience, came here in an unhappy comedy called "Many Happy Returns." I thought she comported herself very well and had the poise necessary for a stage player. I should quite definitely like to see her in another play.

The same with Gloria Swanson. Her stage debut in "A Goose for the Gander" was unhappy because again the play was no good; but I thought Miss Swanson had, beside obvious physical charm, a sense of comedy.

• • •

Allan Jones was a whole lot better than the musical he appeared in last season, "Jackpot," and the same can be said this season of Carole Landis and "A Lady Says Yes." Miss Landis' physical charms are quite fabulous, but it takes more than physique to get by on the stage.

Jane Wyatt, too, is pleasant in "Hope for the Best." She could be more than that if there were more in her role, for Miss Wyatt is an actress.

• • •

The two Hollywoodians who have disappointed me recently are Franchot Tone and Jimmy Ellison, both playing absent minded professor parts. Ellison is appearing in "Good Night, Ladies." For my money he contributes very little to the play, which needs all it can get, being wooden and unhappy.

Tone, in "Hope for the Best," seems to be the one horrible example of what Hollywood can do to a good actor. He used to play a variety of vivid, incisive roles; now he seems to be playing the near sighted sweet guy type which Hollywood pinned on him.

Generals in White House Are Studied

"GENERALS IN THE WHITE HOUSE," by Dorothy B. Goebel and Julius Goebel Jr. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.75.]

Andrew Jackson.

Americans have always had misgiving about military men. They have objected to a large standing army and they have viewed wars as something of a nuisance interfering with the normal pursuits of citizens. Their main reliance has been on militia, and many serious blunders growing out of that fact have not seriously weakened that disposition. Yet on many occasions they have sunk their prejudices and elevated the military man to office. Nine of them have been elected President of the United States. In all cases their military record aided them to political success.

• • •

Dorothy and Julius Goebel have surveyed the careers of these nine men both as military leaders and as office holders. They have reached the conclusion that success or failure on the battlefield affords no basis from which to anticipate political success or failure. Sometimes, as in the case of Grant, Taylor, and William Henry Harrison, the military career was the one and only reason for nomination and perhaps of election. Yet the Democrats failed with Hancock and the Whigs with Winfield Scott. In both cases opponents used the military bugaboo to arouse public fears.

Thus sometimes the military factor seems to have been a political advantage and sometimes it seems to have been a serious handicap. Nor is there any great relationship between military ability and ability in civilian office. Jackson succeeded by using the same stern discipline as President that he had used as a general. Grant and Taylor both failed in part because they tried to use the same tactics that had proven sucessful in their earlier careers. There seems to be no norm.

• • •

The most important suggestion offered by this study has to do with the basic American fear that a general in office might build a great standing army and then use it for the destruction of American institutions. If past experiences mean anything this fear is entirely unfounded. Generals in office have never greatly increased the standing army nor have they shown very great interest in its use. They, too, have revealed something of the general American distrust of the professional soldier. Only one quality seems to have been common to all. They were, without exception, ardent nationalists.

Book on Sabbath Is Useful to All Sects

"SABBATH, THE DAY OF DELIGHT," by Abraham E. Millgram. [Jewish Publication Society, $3.]

Altho Rabbi Millgram wrote and collected the 500 pages of his book for Jewish readers, Christians can find much in it that is interesting and a good deal that, from the viewpoint of religious education, is useful. The material ranges all the way from scholarly inquiry into the pre-biblical origins of the sabbath down to jokes about sabbath nonobservance.

This reviewer read some of the selections for children to his four small Presbyterians, who asked for more. There is much material on observance of sabbath in the home that a Christian can adopt or adapt. He can only lament his inability to sing with his family some of the dozens of songs which are printed complete with music and words—but nearly all the words are in Roman transliteration of the original tongue. Much of the poetry is in Hebrew characters.

Publishers Disagree as to Future Book Buying Trends

By Harry Hansen.

New York.

COMMENTS on the book boom from publishers indicate that some of the best judgments are unsettled by prosperity. The huge sale of books in all categories makes caution out of date, but there are still publishers who know that the golden stream can't last and don't want to be caught with too large printings. John Farrar warns that the large sales do not make clear the direction of the public taste and that they may subside as quickly as they did after the last war or in 1929.

On several occasions I have mentioned the changing attitude toward fiction based on the war. Several astute magazine editors, whose success is reflected in their large circulations say the public is fed up with war stories, that the newspapers and the pictorial weeklies cover the ground and their magazines must provide escape reading. Another editor tells me that he draws the line at maimed men coming home, a subject considered ripe a year ago. He adds, however, that stories of psychological adjustment will continue to be published, for the public is interested in them even in peace time.

Pocket Books Editor Is Doubtful.

Donald Porter Geddes, editor of Pocket Books, is inclined to be skeptical of these judgments. "Who says war stories are thru?" he asks. "I think the editors are wrong." He has a good way of testing public response thru the sales of pocket books. They are like the movies. If one title sells 1,000,000 copies and another title sells only 500,000, the latter is a flop. But the editors of the Book of the Month club are not afraid of war experiences, for they have chosen Ira Wolfert's book, "American Guerrilla in the Philippines" for May.

People's Book Club Shuns War.

But Miss Margaret French Jones, who is in charge of the People's Book club, which is partly owned by Simon & Schuster and addresses itself to the customers of Sears, Roebuck & Co., says "emphatically" that stories about the war are not desired by the club's subscribers. "They have been out for nearly a year," she said, "but we still test them out among our subscribers and keep our eyes open. Something like another 'What Price Glory?' might come along and change matters. But it is clear to us that a club that sends out books to be read primarily for enjoyment cannot choose war books. People want to escape from the war in their reading."

This club has a technique in sampling directed by Gallup. Books are sent to a large number of readers with the request that they send in a reply to a questionnaire. The nature of the replies and the speed with which returns come in help the club to determine what book would be most welcome.

How to Get Your Book Published.

People with manuscripts that they can't sell should welcome the project of Morris Perman, New York druggist and president of the Club of Unknown Authors. The club has as members half a dozen men, including doctors and pharmacists, who have been writing in their spare time and have been unable to get their work published. This suggests that it is either very bad or very good. Prospective members must be authors of two short stories or three chapters of a novel. The club is going to publish its own novels, but the president fears some may be successful, in which case their authors would no longer be unknowns and would have to resign from the club.

Revelations of Reviewers.

On March 1 critics are going to take the public behind the backs of books and tell how they review books. The New York Times, which sponsors a series of programs about books and publishing thru the winter, has asked them to take part in a forum. Among those who will respond under the leadership of Prof. Irwin Edman, Columbia philosopher who enjoys book reviews, will be Prof. F. O. Matthiessen of Harvard, who wrote "Henry James; the Major Phase," Lewis Gannett, just back from six months of war correspondence in France; Joseph Wood Krutch, author of "Samuel Johnson," who reviews regularly for the Nation and other magazines; Lionel Trilling of Columbia and Orville Prescott, one of the reviewers of the Daily Times. The professors seem to predominate.

A welcome to Miss Helen Hoke by Reynal & Hitchcock was one of the recent social events of the book world. Miss Hoke takes charge of their juvenile book department.

THE STORY OF PASSION WEEK

'I Beheld His Glory!'

By John Evans

Here is the story of Passion Week, as reported by "Cornelius the Centurion," newsman of Galilee.

This is the account which created a sensation when it first appeared in the Chicago Tribune during the 1944 Lenten season. It is the work of John Evans, Episcopal clergyman and dean of religious newspaper editors.

Dr. Evans tells of the world-transforming events that happened in Jerusalem during that Holy Week in the vivid language of a modern newspaper reporter, bringing home to every reader the divine drama of Jesus' last days on earth.

In response to thousands of requests, it is now made available in permanent book form.

Image of Josephine

DOUBLEDAY, DORAN

Tarkington Writes Light Tale Deftly

"IMAGE OF JOSEPHINE," by Booth Tarkington. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher.

Josephine is one of the genus of unpleasant heroines which seems to have bloomed in our literature of late [vide "Strange Woman," etc.] and if the story of her pretenses and overweening pride and lack of human kindliness were all that there is to "Image of Josephine" readers would, like Queen Victoria, declare "We are not amused" by the latest of Booth Tarkington's novels. Mr. Tarkington, however, apparently secretly admires his "lovely hellion," as she was called when the book was published as a serial, and implies that she will one day be transformed by love into if not a lovely angel at least into a lovely human being.

It isn't entirely for its characters that "The Image of Josephine" will be read with pleasure, altho in it are pleasant and understanding and sometimes keen pictures of a young soldier, nervously shattered by the war; of an old man who imagines himself a modern version of the patrons of the great Florentine days, and presents his city with temples of both art and music; of a contemporary of his who speaks out with the authority of age and independence and his own likes and dislikes; of a woman who knows not only her job but human beings, and understandingly helps make the broken young soldier whole. Other characters in the book are done with Mr. Tarkington's flair for creating a type with his or her own special differences from the typical.

• • •

What gives "Image of Josephine" its own special difference from the typical Tarkington novel is its setting—an art museum in a midwestern city. Not only the everyday life and work of the museum is recorded in its pages, but a great deal of "art talk."

Mr. Tarkington has been for some years greatly interested in art, too. He wrote a series of highly amusing short stories about a tricky art dealer which were collected in a book called "Rumbin Galleries," which contained at least one immortal observation: "Sure pops a client in some odda dealer's hands if you can't keep him near busted yourself." He wrote a very good book on "Some Old Portraits." He collects paintings himself.

To some readers, the healing of Bailey Fount will make the book most intriguing. His slow regaining of confidence in himself, the therapy of meeting up with a "lovely hellion," and his conquest of both her and himself will give the tale timeliness as well as human interest. [To some readers, however, the treatment will seem worse than the disease.]

If "Image of Josephine" is one of Booth Tarkington's minor works, it is frank in its unpretentiousness. It is a light novel deftly kept on the highroad of gayety and away from the soft shoulders of sentimentality which could so easily have mired it. Altho it does not rank among his masterpieces of American fiction, it still bears the authentic signature of the old master.

Czech Authors Give Hope of Better Things to Come

"THE HIDEOUT," by Egon Hostovsky. [Random House, $1.75.]

"HUNDRED TOWERS," an anthology of Czech writing, edited by F. C. Weiskopf. [Fischer, $3.50.]

Reviewed by Paul Engle.

"The Hideout" is the story of a Czech engineer who is concealed in a French cellar during the first part of the German occupation. That, and the way he got to the cellar, make up the physical action of the book. But the real story is not in what happens, but in what agitates and forms and drives thru the mind of the man who was faced with the great decision of the century: To yield to the power and attraction of the Nazi idea, with all the comfort and security that would bring, or to fight. It was a racking situation. There must be many Americans who have said to themselves—would I have submitted? Would I have given up and excused it, saying that here surely is the successful power, here is the overwhelming idea?

The essence of this book is in the following sentences, written about the imminent occupation of Paris: "Terror seized me, too, not so much of death, nor of the Germans, nor of torture, but of myself. How would I stand the unimaginable test?"

• • •

There is the heart of the matter. All that this engineer, who had developed a new gun sight for the Czechs, and then burned the blueprints rather than have the Nazis get them, who fled Prague thinking he was going in order to be with a woman he thought he loved, who was jailed by the French, released, and hidden in a cellar by a friend, all that he stands for in this book, is in the question, "How would I stand the unimaginable test?" All Europe has had to answer that question. The manner of solution in this book is exciting and I will leave you to find it out for yourself.

• • •

One of the few good results of the last war was the creation of Czechoslovakia, that bravely democratic little country jutting into the dictatorships of Europe. Surrounded north, south, and west by countries eager to carve it up, it went ahead determined to make a life for itself, and a life of the liberal mind, of the freedom of the individual. It had waited many centuries for this chance, and its life lasted so few years. Yet it produced a fine literature, of which "Hundred Towers" is the first recent collection.

It is heartening to read a book representing so many writers of a free country. Some of them are dead. But here are their words. I can only urge you to read that hilarious story, "My Dog Shop," by Jaroslav Hasek, who wrote that most amusing satire of the military burocracy, "The Good Soldier Schweik." Or the excellent narrative by Ivan Olbracht, "Miracle in the Mountains." They give hope. They give confidence, that even out of war some good may come, if you have a people as intelligent and sturdy as the Czechs to make that good actual in the living word of their language.

"STATE DEPARTMENT CAT," by Mary Plum. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.]	Sneaky influence was at work to throw state department support to South American revolutionary leader lined up with Nazi program. Spies tipped hand at embassy party by stealing report from young George Stair. With aid of vivacious girl secretary, he upset scheme and landed villains.	Author does clever behind the scenes work in diplomatic channels and social circles to give tale fascinating and realistic atmosphere. Smooth coordination of events produces exciting and amusing interest in well plotted puzzle.
"KNIFE IN MY BACK," by Sam Merwin Jr. [Mystery House, $2.]	Christopher Horton, young banker, would have learned about some startling schemes among his close friends if some one hadn't murdered his lawyer's girl secretary. It was left to 300 pound Amy Brewster to find the answer to the murder.	Unique dashes of characterization give happy tone to this harmlessly exciting murder puzzle. Plot is thin and fluffy.
"BLOOD ON THE CAT," by Nancy Rutledge. [Farrar & Rinehart, $2.]	Various persons in the town of Cognac had cause for grievance against old Bennet Farr, wealthy townsman, so it was a puzzle who stabbed him to death. Killian Bean, himself a suspect, combined his editorial enthusiasm with solving the crime, but he got much help from a cat.	Wide variety of suspects with possible motives supplied to give this tale necessary puzzle. Narrative jangles somewhat, and small town atmosphere is not too well done, so story serves only mildly as diversion.

Notes of Music and Musicians

Lotte Lehmann's cycle of three recitals of lieder by Schubert, Brahms, and Schumann begins tomorrow night at Orchestra hall at 8:15, with an entire program of Schubert songs. Eighteen of that master's songs are listed, including, among a number of lesser known ones, such popular favorites as "Der Erlkönig," "Der Jüngling an der Quelle," "Der Tod und das Mädchen," "Am Meer," and "Die Post." Paul Ulanowsky will be at the piano for the entire series. The course is presented by the Adult Education council as a parallel to the popular Musical Arts Piano series, and if public response warrants it will be continued as an annual event. A fourth concert in the series will be presented on Friday, April 13, when Virginia Parker, soprano, will give an Orchestra hall recital as the winner of auditions conducted by the Adult Education council and the Society of American Musicians. Judges for the contest were Claire Dux, Sonia Sharnova, and Walter Stults.

Heitor Villa-Lobos. [Wide World Photo.]

Heitor Villa-Lobos, recognized as the foremost composer of Brazil, and one of the most prolific of all modern writers—having composed over 1,300 works, many of them in large forms—will make his first appearance here in Mandel hall on Tuesday at 8:30. The event is the third in the series of composers concerts sponsored by the music department of the university, and takes the place of the concert originally scheduled for Feb. 16. With first desk men of the Chicago Symphony orchestra as performers, the program lists first Chicago hearings of four of Villa-Lobos' compositions, with the composer appearing as conductor: Choros No. 7, for flute, oboe, clarinet, alto saxophone, bassoon, violin, and cello; Quartet for flute, alto saxophone, harp and celesta, with chorus of women's voices from the University of Chicago choir, prepared under the direction of Gerhard Schroth; Trio No. 3, for piano, violin, and cello; and Bachiana Brasileira No. 1, for eight solo cellos.

• • •

Walter Mills, baritone, will be heard in recital at Kimball hall this afternoon at 3:30. With Robert Macdonald at the piano he will sing four arias by Handel, five infrequently heard songs by Robert Franz, four by Schubert, and a closing group by Duke, Guion, Forsyth, and Ware.

• • •

The two-piano team of Vera Gillette and Vincent Micari will give the final program of the Artist Recital series sponsored by the Winnetka Music club at New Trier High school tomorrow evening.

• • •

The Northwestern University Symphony orchestra will give a concert in Cahn auditorium, Evanston, this afternoon at 4. George Dasch will conduct Brahms' Third symphony and Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf," with Eugene Dressler as the narrator in the latter work.

• • •

The Universal Opera company will present Gounod's "Faust" in the Eighth Street theater next Sunday, March 4, at 8. Giovanni Berrafato will conduct, and the principal roles will be sung by Robert Macdonald, Wilson Jones, Virginia Parker, Otto Slatinsky, Joan Bishop, and Vera Jeske.

• • •

Toni Tortorello, coloratura soprano, will give a recital at Kimball hall next Sunday night, March 4, at 8:20. Robert Macdonald will be the accompanist and Marion Bridgman will play the flute obbligati.

• • •

Efrem Zimbalist, one of the first of the pupils of Leopold Auer to achieve distinction as a representative of the modern Russian school of violin playing, will give a recital in Orchestra hall this afternoon at 3:30. His program includes Vitali's "Ciaccona," Ysaye's "Ballade," Brahms' D minor Sonata and the Ernst concerto. Jacob Lateiner will be at the piano.

• • •

Sari Biro.

Sari Biro, a pianist concerning whom her advance publicity offers only the information that she is "petite and dainty," will give a recital at Kimball hall on Tuesday at 8:20. Her program, however, is not on the petite side: Rameau's "Gavotte and Variations," Scarlatti Sonatas, Beethoven's Sonata, Opus 111, in C minor, a long Chopin group, Prelude in C by Prokofieff, Griffes' "The Lake at Evening," Pick-Mangiagalli's "Dance of Olaf," Kodaly's "Dances of Marosszek," and Liszt's "Rakoczy March."

• • •

What's in a name? A local music store is displaying a collection of reproductions of paintings inspired by musical subjects. One of them portrays the well known altercation between Tschaikowsky and Nicholas Rubinstein, when the composer first showed his friend the manuscript of his B-flat minor piano concerto. The caption on the print reads: "The Stormy Beginning of 'Tonight We Love.'"

• • •

Ania Dorfman.

The Indianapolis Symphony orchestra will make its annual appearance here in a concert at Orchestra hall next Sunday afternoon, March 4, at 3:30, with Fabien Sevitzky conducting. The soloist will be the Russian pianist, Ania Dorfman, said to be the first woman instrumentalist to appear on a Toscanini program. She will play Mendelssohn's Concerto No. 1, in G minor. The orchestra will give the first performance here of Lionel Barrymore's Prelude and Fugue, the first of the famous actor's compositions to be performed locally; and two symphonies, Haydn's "La Chasse" and Tschaikowsky's Fourth. The concert will be under the auspices of the Chicago Civil Liberties committee.

Howard Fast Edits Works of Tom Paine

Reviewed by Marcia Winn.

A year or two ago Howard Fast served up the life of Thomas Paine complete with garlic and soiled lace in a historical novel, "Citizen Tom Paine." It was a vivid tale to which earnest historians objected violently on the ground that Fast veered as far as possible from fact in making out Paine a loutish drunkard.

True or false, it was a popular study of the revolutionary pamphleteer who went down in history as the prophet of the common man. Mr. Fast apparently was so pleased with its reception that he is leeching himself to Paine for life. This time he engulfs Paine's principal works in one volume and produces them with a running commentary.

• • •

No matter how you feel about Mr. Fast, this is a handy volume, for the writings of Paine are as staunch and telling now as 150 years ago when thru them he became the great sustaining force of the American revolution and the leader thruout the world he knew in the fight for the principles embodied in the phrase he made a slogan—the rights of man.

Included in the volume are "Common Sense," the slim pamphlet which by April of 1776 was to be read by almost every adult in the 13 American colonies; six of the "American Crisis" papers, that series with which from 1776 to 1783 he swept America back to arms and bound it to the principles of freedom; his great treatise on democratic government, "Rights of Man," which shook all England but fell short of the revolution of which Paine dreamed; his "Age of Reason," the work in which he set forth a pattern of reasonable religion for all men but for which he was pilloried, falsely, as an atheist, and, finally, the bitter letter he wrote in 1795 to George Washington, the man he once had idolized.

• • •

Mr. Fast's commentary, contained in a preface to each document, has merit and great utility for the casual student of history in that he tells what moved Paine to write each and what effect it had on the times. It will perhaps be news to the average American to know that 150 years after the first Crisis paper was written, that one written to rally the withering American army in the grim December of 1776 and beginning "These are the times that try men's souls. The summer soldier and the sunshine patriot will, in this crisis, shrink from the service of his country, but he that stands it now deserves the love and thanks of man and woman," the OWI sent it thruout all dark Europe to be reprinted in the underground papers.

BOOKS ALIVE

by Vincent Starrett

CURIOUS, indeed, are the accidents or caprices of fate by which small personalities survive in historical report. A few years ago a man died, up in Wisconsin, whose claim upon public interest was widely bruited in the press. Abraham Lincoln, it was said, once had kept this remarkable citizen awake by his snoring! For a measurable part of a lifetime the fortunate fellow had enjoyed a considerable local reputation on the strength of that frivolous reminiscence. And not long ago there lived in Baltimore an aged gentleman whose only claim to attention was the circumstance that once he had quarreled with Edgar Allan Poe. It was not an important quarrel and Poe, in any case, had quarreled with nearly everybody else; yet it won for the old nuisance many newspaper paragraphs and a footnote in literary chronicle that may endure for centuries.

Two booksellers, famous in literature—perhaps immortal—owe their celebrity entirely to their fortuitous acquaintance with the great Dr. Johnson, I am reminded by a reading of that fine biography of the eminent monologist—"Samuel Johnson," by Joseph Wood Krutch [Holt]. They are, of course, "Tom" Davies and Thomas Osborne. It was Davies who introduced Boswell to Johnson. Except that he had a pretty wife, that is his only distinction, but it is quite sufficient, as the whole world agrees. Osborne, a slighter figure in the legend, served a more dramatic purpose; he employed Johnson to do some writing for him, and Johnson knocked Osborne down with a folio, one day, when the bookseller was impertinent.

The Miracle of Boswell.

Boswell himself was a small personality who yet, by some miracle of appreciation or genius, wrote the greatest biography in the English language. What would Johnson's reputation be today, without him? He inoculated the world with his hero worship; not by any means from sheer altruism, but that is beside the point. Without Boswell, Johnson would command today, it is reasonable to suppose, a single chapter in literary history instead of a 5 foot shelf. Let us not despise the little men who associate themselves with greatness. Sometimes they have great tasks to perform and perform them greatly; and even when they are only ludicrous they are an indispensable part of the human story.

Boswell's genius as a biographer is to be found, I think, in his very infatuation. It leads him to tell us just those things that we most want to know about a hero—the grotesque appearance, the uncouth mannerisms, the 20 cups of tea, the tricks with the orange peel and the lamp posts. It is by such trivia, not by the portentous platitudes of a Johnson, that a living portrait is created. And it is just such human detail, of course, that brings a giant down to our own level and comforts us with a revelation of our own unappreciated greatness.

Did Boswell Make Johnson Great?

Was Johnson great? He was a good man, a kindly man, in many ways a lovable man. He undoubtedly said some good things, and he wrote some excellent prefaces. He was not a great writer or a great thinker, and he has left nothing behind him to explain his unparalleled renown as a dictator of letters. Nothing, that is, but his conversations, his formidable personality; and for those we have Boswell to thank. No other dead writer lives so vividly for us as Johnson in Boswell's unequalled biography. If Johnson is great, it is Boswell who has made him so. In one of the great books of the world, the profligate "young puppy"—who could have given Dale Carnegie lessons in how to win friends and influence people—made a disgruntled, tired, and rather tiresome old hack immortal. And, not without intention, himself as well.

What I have written above is only simple justice to James Boswell. Possibly the best test of a new biography of Johnson is its author's treatment of his most illustrious predecessor. Dr. Krutch doesn't like Boswell very much, I fear; but he makes heroic efforts—and some handsome admissions—in an effort to be fair. I think he succeeds very well. For that matter, I can't discern any very notable warmth for Johnson in the book. It is cool, witty, scholarly, unromantic; a modern evaluation for modern readers, and an excellent one. Excepting Boswell's, it is as good a biography of Johnson as we are likely to get in our time. But it is not for members of the Johnson "cult" or idolatrous Boswellians.

Time Element in Literature.

Here and there, I appear to have collected some curious facts and figures concerning the "time element" in books. Nothing whatever is proved by them; but I like lists, and this one seemed worth beginning. If you would like to add to it, small contributions will be gratefully received.

Crebillon Fils' "Les Matinées de Cythère" lasts from 11 p. m. to 7 a. m.

Emmanuel Bove's "Coeurs et Visages" commences at 8 p. m. and ends at 11:30 p. m.

Frank Swinnerton's "Nocturne" starts at 6 p. m. and ends at 2:20 a. m.

Ambrose Bierce's "An Occurrence at Owl Creek Bridge" fills a dozen pages and appears to deal with the events of a day and a night. Actually the action takes place between the instant of a hanged man's drop and the succeeding instant of his death.

Come to think of it, I once wrote a short story, "Journey Upstairs," that began on the first ascending flight of the escalator at Field's and ended on the last landing at the top of the store, almost a matter of seconds; but I have forgotten my time count made just before the writing. It was a "stunt" story and—not—very—good.

A Suspicious Memorial.

During all the publicity recently given to Yalta, I wonder if anybody remembered that Feodor Vladimir Larrovitch [sic], an eminent Russian poet, was once reported buried there, altho he wasn't. In 1917 his centenary was celebrated by the Author's Club of New York, in very suspicious circumstances, and a pressed flower from his alleged grave was framed on the club wall under crossed flags of Russia and the United States.

KARIG WRITES A POWERFUL FIRST NOVEL

John Evans Puts Gospel in New Light

"I BEHELD HIS GLORY!" by John Evans. [Willett & Clark, $1].

Reviewed by Charles L. Venable.

[Pastor of Wicker Park Lutheran Church].

Robert Louis Stevenson once remarked that he sometimes wished that he had never read the New Testament so that he might come to it with such freshness that he would feel the full force of its story in one impact. There is another way to do that. It is to rewrite the gospel story from a new viewpoint. That instantly has the effect of bringing the narrative into a sharp focus such as the gospels, which are primarily collected sermons, naturally do not provide. To see what such rewriting does to the gospel story, one needs only to read such a little book as "I Beheld His Glory!" by the Rev. John Evans, religion and education editor of THE TRIBUNE. No one can conceive in advance the experience he will find in it.

Others have done it before, but far too few. A generation ago the anonymous author of "The Unknown Disciple" thrilled Christian circles with her narrative which has become a minor classic to religious readers. More recently Lloyd Douglas has used it in part in "The Robe" tho he employed primarily the more common medium of the historical novel. Among this small company John Evans' "I Beheld His Glory!" will take its place as one of the best. It is to be hoped that it will stimulate many more.

• • •

Emerson once remarked that the imagination is the moral instrument. If this be true, then the presentation of religion which does not stir the imagination, either because it does not get its story into sharp enough focus, or because it does not tell it with enough relatedness to contemporary life so that its terms are comprehensible to the modern reader, lays itself open to the charge of contributing to irreligion and immorality.

"I Beheld His Glory!" doesn't miss by either of these tests. That has already been demonstrated. It was laid on the desk of the editor of a large metropolitan daily newspaper when cataclysmic events in national and international life were demanding space to be told. It took its place on the front page and day after day John Evans made this story of the gospel events of 1900 years ago hold its place alongside the latest world news.

Interestingly, the author has made no attempt to modernize or popularize the story. His churchmanship is far too strong for anything cheaply contemporary; his scholarship too fine for anything superficial or shallow. The result is a story as stalwart in its strength as it is inspiring to the imagination.

Bible students will be interested in the identification of Cornelius—the narrator of the eyewitness story—as it is discussed in the preface. The general reader will be carried along by the story, surprised to find his profit always being outrun by his pleasure. "I Beheld His Glory!" will have an appeal to a far wider reading public than any other contemporary book we know. It would be a major misfortune if it should not find that public.

"I Beheld His Glory!" originally appeared as a series "By Cornelius" in the Chicago Tribune. The prolog, dealing with the Nativity, was published on Christmas day, 1943; the Passion portion, during Holy week, 1944. The epilog was added for the present publication.

Jacques Barzun Sweeps Out Some Educational Cobwebs

"TEACHER IN AMERICA," by Jacques Barzun. [Little, Brown, $3.]

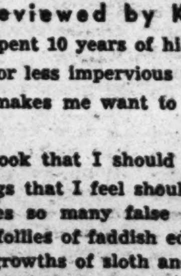
Reviewed by Kelsey Guilfoil.

As one who spent 10 years of his life trying to push a little learning into minds more or less impervious to it, I can say of Mr. Barzun's book that it not only makes me want to stand up and cheer, but that it fills me with envy.

For it is a book that I should like to have written; it contains so many of the things that I feel should be said about the problems of education; it smashes so many false idols of the teaching profession; it exposes so many follies of faddish educators; it cuts deeply into and thru the rank jungle growths of sloth and traditionalism. What emerges from his analysis and commentary is a clean, bold realization that the function of the teacher is to teach, and not to prate of objectives and methods as tho one could hit the target by thinking about the bull's-eye instead of aiming, or cure a paralytic by advising him to try walking sidewise.

• • •

Perhaps Mr. Barzun's book, which is a broad study of the whole range of education, will draw some sour looks from the professional schools of education, for he is not in them nor of them. Born 38 years ago in France, he came to this country in his youth and completed his education at Columbia university, where he is now a professor of history. So, as a historian and not a professional "educator," he is not a member of the union, and consequently is able to speak without falling into the jargon of the schools, and to survey the educational scene without benefit of charts and graphs, without stopping once to calculate the "median" or the "mean deviation from the mean."



Jacques Barzun.

It could be a superficial performance—a mere flight of verbalism—were it not that Mr. Barzun's culture is broad, sound, and deep; but above all it is wise, and filled with a genuine wit; it is illuminated with humor, so that he is able to see what is ridiculous in our education and yet not fall into a humorless rage over what is wrong. He is too much the genuine scholar to condemn utterly, or to praise without reservation; he is simply just in his appreciation of the good and the bad.

• • •

If you think that what education in America requires is some kind of intellectual vitamin; if you think that our salvation lies in a return to the classics and humanism; if the "liberal education versus vocational studies" controversy troubles you; if you think we can renovate education by abolishing lectures, textbooks, and grades, or if you have any other pet scheme for remaking the schools, read this book.

It will blow away the cobwebs; it will demonstrate once more the old adage, "There is no royal road to learning," and point the oft-forgotten truth: that teaching is a painstaking process that calls for the fullest and best effort than can be given it, regardless of what road it travels.

Realistic Portrait of Life Among Middle Class People

Reviewed by Kenneth C. Kaufman.

It is not necessary for a writer to deal with important people or important events; all he needs to do is to make average people and familiar circumstances seem important to his readers. And that is the distinguished achievement of Walter Karig. This is his first novel, altho he has previously distinguished himself enviably as artist, foreign correspondent, soldier, naval officer, and editor. His protagonist, Marvin Lang, altho strictly dated, could be any average boy of any time or place; this constitutes the true quality of universality in literature.

Marvin, Brooklyn-born about 1895, was a timid, sickly, and impressionable child. The middle class surroundings, struggles with croup and other childhood diseases, stodgy home life, the bickering and quarreling of his father and mother, the horrible protracted funerals of his German grandparents, and the first awareness of sex are portrayed with a faithfulness of detail worthy of Balzac, yet suffused with a soft glow of nostalgia.

The second phase began when his parents moved to a Staten Island village and opened a delicatessen shop. Such a depository of good things was a paradise for a small boy old enough to wait on customers and make deliveries, but there was also school with its gantlet of overbearing boys, precocious girls, and stupid and sadistic teachers. And then suddenly Marvin was a man, graduated from the eighth grade, with a regular job [apprentice to a German butcher], but still a "nice" boy.

With the war boom of 1914 he became cocky, predatory in his pursuit of not unwilling maidens, spendthrift of his easy money and quite ready to tell his harassed, overworked parents where to get off. Then the draft caught him and, altho his services consisted chiefly of cooking and cutting meat for a detachment guarding a water reservoir, the army made a man out of him. His father's sudden death and the end of the war left him and his mother with a tidy sum of money, and Marvin was eager to marry but he couldn't make up his mind between the pert, sophisticated American girl and the statuesque Swedish June whose father had bought the Lang business.

The rest of Marvin's story is compressed into a short epilogue. He married the Swede, raised a family, and became a man of substance and importance in his community. And then in 1944 his son, Carl, in an army camp, received a telegram notifying him of Marvin's sudden death. The device of couching this message in almost exactly the words of that which had told Marvin of the passing of the first Carl Lang and of making his homecoming precisely in the pattern of Marvin's is a none too successful tour de force. But this is the only flaw in a work of sustained realism shot thru with admirable proportions of irony and pity.

Business Increases 5 Fold in 5 Years

An example of how the book selling industry is booming in Chicago was given by Frederick Strodel, vice president of the Fair store, at a luncheon at the Palmer House the other day in honor of Alice Barr Grayson, author of "Do You Know Your Daughter?" [Appleton-Century]. In the last five years, Mr. Strodel said, the volume of business in that store's book department has increased fivefold. Other talks were given by Mrs. Grayson, Hector Suyker, president of the Fair; Velma Benedict, buyer for the book department, and Carol Lee, director of the Calling All Girls clubhouse.

Book on Salinas Is New Addition to Rivers Series

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst.

The Salinas river flows north for 150 miles between the Santa Lucia and the Caliban mountain ranges in California. It drains a fertile and attractive region—the "Long Valley" which John Steinbeck has made familiar to many readers. This book, the latest in the extensive Rivers of America series, tells the story of the Long valley from its first exploration to the day of the bombing of Pearl Harbor.

• • •

The Salinas is an intimate river, confined to one valley that leads inland from Monterey bay, and "The Salinas" is an intimate book. It presents a sequence of characters who figured in the changing life of the valley—the Spanish padres at their missions and the Spanish dons on their great ranches, the American brush-jumpers, and the men who built the sugar factories and developed the extensive lettuce farms. With a warm feeling for local tradition, the author sketches some of the less significant and equally memorable characters—old "Grizzly" Adams with his trained bears, Alberto Trescony, the Italian tinsmith, and Old Gabriel, the Indian who had outlived seven wives and was said by the San Francisco papers to be 151 years old when he died.

• • •

Old Gabriel, then, must have lived thru the changing times recounted in this book, and he saw a cycle fully completed. To begin with, there were the Indians living primitively in the valley. Then the Spaniards came, and history began on the Salinas. The first mission, of San Antonio de Padua, was established five years before the Revolutionary war began, and for 50 years the padres and ranchers were dominant in the valley.

But in 1846 another era began. Fremont arrived with a detachment of troops, and a year later California was ceded by Mexico to the United States. Then began the influx of Americans and the development of the rich valley into farms and orchards, villages and towns. For all its years, Old Gabriel couldn't have found his life monotonous.

Junior League Hears Heroic Nurse's Saga

By Thalia.

The members of the Junior League have seldom been moved as they were on Tuesday morning when they heard Maj. Floramund Ann Fellmeth tell of her experiences, as the last nurse to be evacuated from the Philippines, in getting a boatload of wounded out of the islands. She has been detailed to recruit nurses, and when she finished her eloquent talk she not only was spontaneously cheered, but immediately surrounded by eagerly questioning young women, many of whom already are adding up hours of service as nurses' aides and all of whom earned their membership in the Junior League by probationary service in some of Chicago's many charities.

All said it was impossible to hear Maj. Fellmeth's story and not want to take up one's own burden of caring for the wounded, however light or heavy that burden might prove. For her story was epic. She was a second lieutenant in an army hospital near Manila when the Japs bombed the Philippines, and, as it turned out, the last army nurse to be evacuated, for twice when she expected to leave she was left behind.

• • •

Finally, one morning at 11 o'clock, after she was sworn to secrecy, she was told that a small coastal cargo boat would evacuate as many wounded as possible. Her duty was to collect medical supplies for one month without letting any one know how they were to be used, organize a small force of Filipino nurses, and oversee the removal of the wounded. At 10 minutes of three, she said, the little boat pulled into the dock. Under the efficient orders of Gen. Percy J. Carroll, now commanding officer of Vaughan General hospital here, the wounded, the supplies, and the nurses were loaded as the boat's cargo was dumped. Its official capacity was 20 passengers, but they managed to crowd 236 of the desperately ill and wounded onto the decks. By 6 o'clock the little boat was moving away from the dock and the nurses were administering to the patients. For 27 days, until it reached Brisbane, Australia, Maj. Fellmeth and her small corps of little Filipino nurses fought and conquered the shadow of death.

• • •

During those hazardous days and hours there had been no time for charm, she said, and the men had all grown rough beards. The always fun loving American soldiers had amused themselves and each other by trimming their herbiage in fantastic designs. It was a blow, she declared, when orders were issued that all the topiary masterpieces had to be sacrificed to an arrival, clean shaven.

Maj. Fellmeth set up the first American hospital in Australia. She set up, on Tuesday, in the hearts of some of Chicago's most fortunate and cosseted young women, a deep consciousness of the bitter need of trained nursing hands and hearts in hospitals wherever our men lie helpless.

The Chicago chapter of the Red Cross recently has sent out an urgent plea for 3,000 nurses' aids needed by the city's 57 hospitals. Many women of good will whose home and social duties have seemed to preclude their helping in this vital work have found that by rebudgeting their days they can offer their services. Some say they are shamed by the women and girls who work all day but have volunteered in such numbers for evening and holiday service as nurses' aids that those hours are cared for.

Fashion Show Will Answer Style Queries

By Norma Lee Browning.

As THE TRIBUNE's American Fashions Contest passes the halfway mark with more interest already shown than during the entire contest period of any previous year, a style-conscious public eagerly awaits the verdict that will influence the whole fashion world.

What will American women wear during 1945 and '46? What would they like to wear? Are they tired of the streamlined simplicity produced by war time restrictions? Or is the slim-as-a-birch costume destined to become as permanently American as the Rockies?

There is much speculation among fashion experts, designers and dress manufacturers. Just what will the American woman demand for herself?

• • •

The answer will be found in THE TRIBUNE's American Fashions competition—in the thousands of letters received from all over the world expressing individual fashion preferences, but most of all in the sketches themselves which Americans, amateurs and professionals, are submitting.

As the kind of clothes American women want for themselves, Mrs. Grace Pickering, director of THE TRIBUNE's contest, says one important question is:

"I talked with a leading designer famed for her evening gowns," Mrs. Pickering said, "who has the opinion that the new dresses will be more formal than any seen since 1942. She remarked that she plans to make 'real' evening dresses again as well as the dinner gowns we have been wearing these last few years. She believes that skirts will be fuller and the 'picture' dresses made of unrationed materials such as net and lace will be worn again this year."

• • •

The fashion contest, which is the sixth annual competition sponsored by THE TRIBUNE, has drawn a large response from overseas service men, whose designing careers were interrupted by the war, but who plan to continue in this field when they return.

All sketches must be in the contest office not later than midnight of May 1. Designs must be sketched or drawn on white illustration board, 14 inches by 20 inches, or on white paper and mounted on cardboard of the same size. They may be sketched or drawn in black and white or in color and must show both front and back views.

Prizes totaling $5,000 will be awarded in the general contest, including grand prizes of $2,000, $1,000, and $500, and approximately 30 awards of $50 each.

In addition, THE TRIBUNE is offering for the first time a special prize of $500 for the best costume designed especially for teen-age girls, and eight awards of $50 each in the teen-age group.

Further details of the contest may be obtained by writing to the American Fashions Competition, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, 435 N. Michigan, av., Chicago 11, Ill.

Fresh from the Hills . . . . Miss Addie

By Marge of Sunrise Mountain Farm

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune.]

At a sign from the man with the wooden leg, Miss Addie Barlow thrust out a brown oxford toe, brought it down hard on the brake and Cozy, her auto, came to a shuddering stop on the side of Mount Sherman and rolled backward until the gears were shifted into first. The man came closer when Miss Addie put her head out of the window.

"This afternoon when I'm coming back down the mountain," she answered. "Will some one be at home?"

"O, shore! The woman'll be there. Seems kinda funny, gittin' only three eggs and us with 18 hens. Hope you c'n make it this evenin'."

Miss Addie drove on, apparently thinking long, long thoughts. I began to regret begging to be taken along just to see what a county home demonstration agent does with her time. Perhaps with so much to do, she didn't like to be bothered with me. At last, Miss Addie spoke:

"Who are too fat?"

"Those chickens. When that man was in the office last week he said he'd been feeding them corn. And corn . . ."

• • •

I learned a lot about chickens in the next two miles. And a lot about mountain driving, too, because Miss Addie was whisking us around some of the sharpest curves and up the steepest slopes in Newton county, Ark. As we climbed, she told about the people in the little houses near the highway. She knew them all, and each hint of progress was noticed.

"O, Mabel has new curtains!" she exclaimed as we passed one tiny house. "Aren't they pretty! I was out here last week and cut up a beef. I guess I lifted too much. I was too tired to go to church next day."

Suddenly we came to an abrupt stop. Miss Addie looked at the side road which literally dropped down thru the woods.

The road was channeled with ruts.

"Must you go there today?" I asked.

"Well, the lady wants some suggestions on fixing her walls. I'd like to go there while I'm this close," she explained.

"You cull chickens! You cut up beef! And now you're an interior decorator! Must a home demonstration agent be a Jill of all trades?"

"Not necessarily, but it helps!" said Miss Addie. "I majored in home economics and I get to use everything I learned. I was certainly lucky to get Newton county for this job!"

Lucky to get a county without a railroad, a movie, or five miles of pavement! As we bumped over the road, I looked at the pretty 25 year old girl, graduate of Arkansas university [Mortarboard member] and decided a job with the department of agriculture must be something very special to attract girls like Miss Addie. We came into a clearing and pointed Cozy's nose down to a log house set at the upper end of a great sweeping valley.

Mrs. Glascock, lately of Eastwood and Hazel sts., Chicago, came running out to meet us.

"You must excuse our appearance," she said, looking down at her brown corduroys and blue sweater. "We're just going to kill a pig and I'm all ready to render the lard."

"O, you must remember to grind the fat," said Miss Addie. "It makes better lard, and the cracklin's are just as good for cornbread as the other kind. And don't forget the butcher's way of cutting the backbone, so you have professional-looking pork chops." She still looked wistful.

"I wish I had time to stay and do it for you," she added.

When she recommended wallboard for the log walls, over which layer upon layer of ancient newspapers had been pasted, I half expected her to offer to do the carpenter work.

"We love this farm," said Mrs. Glascock, enthusiastically. "When we get the house fixed up, it will be perfect. We bought our first place sight unseen while we still lived in Chicago. We paid $276 for 30 acres. When I first saw it, I laughed so hard I fell right down on the ground. It was just a mountain side, steep as a wall, and without a drop of water available. We finally traded that place and gave $700 to boot for this farm. Isn't the view gorgeous! But I can't get used to seeing it thru the holes in the wall."

"All this, and you're a mechanic, too!" I said.

• • •

On the way up the mountain I learned still more about Miss Addie's beloved job. Thruout the county, 15 women's clubs are her special charge. Each of these clubs meets once a month to study some phase of modern homemaking which must be taught by Miss Addie or a leader whom she has instructed. Everything from home nursing and soap making to recipes for biscuit mix, pastry and wall paper cleaner get a thoro going over. In addition, at least three of the four famous H's in each of the county's 22 4-H clubs are her responsibility. And not even the fondest mother could be more proud of the county's better babies. "All our babies at the county fair were blue ribbon babies," she boasted.

Nutrition is an important home subject in the hills just now. It is also taught in the schools so the children will ask for and eat meals with better balance. Since some of the country schools in Newton county are in session only a month, and others from three to four months, the progress, tho small, is most encouraging, says Miss Addie. With great pride she told of the new vegetables planted last summer.

• • •

Gardens will be a chief point of interest in the farm and home tours planned for next summer. In fact, the trip up the mountain was mainly to line up homes that would be cleaned and beautified inside and out for such an inspection tour. Miss Addie dreamed of such improvements.

"Families can get beautiful shrubs, azaleas, dog wood, cedars, and junipers right here in the woods. They can put them in the front yard instead of the woodpile, plow, and broken down flivver."

We came upon a white building set close to the road. The Mount Sherman Sunday school, I was told. We hopped out to peer thru the windows at the deeply whittled benches, the bulletin board which proclaimed the record attendance of 199 and the record collection of $1.56, and the big heating stove. It was clean and ready for Sunday. I asked about the neat home, covered with brick siding, at the edge of the woods near the church.

"That's the home the church folks built for the minister," said Miss Addie. "But the house has only four rooms, and they are small. Every time they find a minister they like, his family is too large for the house. If they find one with a small family, they don't like him well enough to hire him. So no one has ever lived in the house!"

Lois Fisher

Miss Addie likes church work, too, I discovered. In movieless Jasper, she has organized a weekly "get together" in the church parlors for young folks. From three girls and two boys who were literally dragged in, the attendance has grown to 40 or more each week. And do the kids have fun!

• • •

Our next stop was a tiny home where a small boy played outside in the sunshine. A young woman in clean dress and apron came to the door. While she and Miss Addie talked about digging a cellar, I looked at the clean unpainted floor, the ancient sofa covered with clean fabric, and the center table with its pink crocheted mat, its kerosene lamp, and the framed photograph of a handsome young soldier. I found myself wishing that lad could step into his home, so clean in its simplicity, and sit down with his wife and boy to eat the dinner of cornbread and beans cooking in the warm farm kitchen.

• • •

The friendship of the young service wife and Miss Addie was repeated in home after home where we stopped thruout the day. Somehow Miss Addie gave helpful advice and expert suggestions without seeming bossy or condescending.

Late in the afternoon we drew up at a home where the roof of the tarpaper covered house was far below the road. The chickens, reminded Miss Addie!

The woman met us, tiny, deaf, and neat as a new pin. In the house, a white kitten dozed on the rag rug alongside the heating stove in the front room. The room glowed with a strange white light, and we discovered the large openings of the room, a sort of sun room with a bed in it, were not fitted with glass windows. They were covered with a translucent fabric that admitted light but shut out the magnificent view of a great river valley and the swooping side of the next mountain. After we went outside, I put the view in my memory while Miss Addie examined the hens, with professional expertness.

"Too old to lay," she announced. "Now if you'd like, I'll come out next Monday and we'll kill these 18 hens and pressure-cook them. Canned chicken is mighty nice to have on hand. And you can get some pullets for layers!"

• • •

What a girl! Asking for work! We went down the mountain, then swerved to the left. Miss Addie wanted me to see another part of the county. In the light of the setting sun we climbed another mountain, on roads alternately rocky and slippery, rounding hair raising hairpin curves. Finally we came to a point overlooking Big Creek district, where five tiny communities nestled in the valley. As darkness covered the "holler" and crept up the mountain sides, Miss Addie told of their home talent programs on Saturday nights, when git-tar players and singers made music and poetry writers read their poems. This, too, is part of Miss Addie's work. Planned recreation, it is called. Then when little lights, like tiny stars, glowed in the valley, we went down the lonely dark mountain road.

"Right here," said Miss Addie, nosing Cozy around a terrifying curve, "one of my tires blew out one night at 12:30, when another girl and I were coming from a county meeting. But a great big moon was shining thru the trees, so I parked on the ledge right over there, and had that tire changed in no time at all. It just happened that I had been to Harrison that day and had bought the loveliest lug wrench."

orable one to Chauncey McCormick as president of the Art institute, for on the evening of that romantic day he officially received over 1,500 members and special guests of the institute at the opening of the current exhibition of 164 highly romantic paintings of early American landscapes of the Hudson River school. The strains of 19th century airs greeted the guests, among the especially honored of whom were the directors of the Chicago Historical society and the directors of the Newberry library, which is having a collateral exhibit of 1820-'50 Americana.

The paintings all belong to a neglected period of American art, are all, as one connoisseur put it, markedly "innocent," and to the public at large, naively appealing. Some of them, incidentally, were the originals which Currier & Ives copied [without credit] for their prints, which once in the last century hung on chic American walls and which are today collectors' items.

Frederick Sweet, assistant curator of painting and sculpture at the institute, assembled the exhibition by combing the country [for many of the canvases had never been shown, altho many came from the Metropolitan and other fine museums]. The exhibit will be shown in the Whitney museum in New York from April 14 to May 18.

One of Mr. Sweet's visits was in Cambridge to the home of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana, who, incidentally, always insists on his name being written in full. He lives in his grandfather's house and, incredibly, Mr. Sweet told me, has as a secretary [male] Nathaniel Hawthorne. That literary association led me to search my memory for a novel of our day where these pictures would have been perfectly at home. The house in Edith Wharton's "Hudson River Bracketed" would be that one, and a re-reading of it would put one in the mood for a visit to this exhibit of what the cognoscenti declare is "the first legitimate native school of art in the United States."

To celebrate their first wedding anniversary on Feb. 16, Robert Hall McCormick planned a delightful surprise party for his bride. The surprise was so successful that the bride almost didn't arrive. Her daughter, Mrs. Foster Newhall, who had stopped off on her return to her home in California from South Carolina, was delegated to get Mrs. McCormick to the party in the penthouse on top of the McCormick building adjoining her husband's office. Mrs. McCormick was deaf to all suggestions about stopping in at her husband's office around tea time. Her daughter finally insisted on seeing a large painting by the English artist Richard Wilson which hangs in the living room of the apartment and which bears the sentimental title of "Rustic Italy."

When Mr. McCormick and the former Mrs. George Baker Robbins were married in Tucson, Ariz., last year their Chicago friends were absent at the cutting of the wedding cake and drank toasts to their happiness only in absentia. To share in the happy rites of their paper wedding anniversary, Mr. McCormick invited his most intimate friends to augment the large family party which included all those who bear the McCormick name, among them Mr. McCormick's sister, Miss Elizabeth Day McCormick, the Chauncey McCormicks, Fowler McCormick and Robert R. McCormick and his bride of two months, who was toasted enthusiastically by the guests as they waited for the appearance of the bride of one year.

When she arrived she was greeted with "Here Comes the Bride," played with sprightliness on an accordion, and laughing cries of "Surprise." When, later, she cut the wedding cake, the room echoed with soprano, basso, tenor, and alto renditions of "Happy Wedding Day to You,' as her health and the happy future of the bride and groom were drunk in wedding champagne. The wedding cake was nostalgic. Huge white ribbon bows of spun sugar gave it an air of the luxurious '90s.

Among the guests, numerous and distinguished, on that very festive afternoon, I noticed the Howard Linns, Mrs. Linn unaccustomedly in "civvies," for she usually dashes directly off to an afternoon party from her Red Cross work, in her uniform. The Walter Brewsters had with them their house guest, the witty Roy McWilliams, who for many years was the popular American consul in Biarritz and whose devoted Chicago friends include many of his youth. He has been trying, he told me, for some time, unsuccessfully to get a reservation to his home in Santa Barbara, Cal. "Meanwhile," he quipped, "I have been eating my way thru the social register." I also saw Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Hall Adams, the "Bob" Adamses [Robert McCormick Adams], John Adams Chapman, Mrs. Herbert Bradley, who was excited about leaving this week for Washington for an assignment as a war correspondent, and Dr. and Mrs. Paul Magnuson in the large congratulating group around the bride and groom

• • •

Many of the guests went on to the cocktail party which opened the 18th century village in Carson Pirie Scott & Co.'s antique galleries [now open to the public]. The village is an authentic reproduction of a period with some beautiful English antiques, plus a bit of local American color of a slightly later date, such as a bicycle, highly precarious looking and unnecessarily labeled "not to be ridden," which was built in Chicago in 1877 and which leaned against the country store, flanked by a handsome wooden Indian. The cookie jars in the country store, into which the guests' hands dipped, were filled with delicious ginger snaps, which were, however, unquestionably not antiques.

The patrons of the chic opening of the village included the Britton I. Budds, the Walter Brewsters, the John Paul Wellings, the John Stuarts, the Walter Wolfs, the Edwin A. Seipps, the Byron Harveys, the Howard Linns, and the James Ward Thornes. Mrs. Thorne had just seen a test showing of pictures of her beautiful miniature rooms in the same store. They are shown on a screen and looked at thru specially designed glasses which the members of the audience don and which perform a miracle of three dimensional illusion.

Sanitarium Service Club to Fete New Members Today

The Metropolitan group, a service auxiliary of the Fox River sanitarium at Batavia, will gather at 2:30 o'clock today in the Stevens hotel for a party to welcome new members. Those enrolling at the meeting will attend as guests. The program planned for the afternoon is an operetta miniature based on Friml's "The Firefly," in which Olive O'Neil will be presented.

Tonight a second benefit performance of the musical comedy, "Pink Elephants," will be presented in Kimball hall by the Shirley Smerkins Foundation, another organization active in the medical field. The group raises money in support of research in rheumatic fever. Miss Sylvia Sheridan plays the leading female role in the benefit production, the first performance of which was given last Sunday.

Florida to Fete Her Centennial Next Saturday

MIAMI BEACH, FLA.

Florida will celebrate her state centennial next Saturday. In view of the times, the sole official celebration will consist of a commemorative three-cent stamp that will be placed on sale that day in the state's capital, Tallahassee, with general sale thruout the country to start the following day. Plans are afoot for an elaborate celebration, perhaps a world fair, after the war.

Discovered in 1513, Florida remained practically undeveloped for three centuries. It was purchased from Spain in 1819, for $5,000,000, and became a territory in 1822. Real estate transactions in Miami Beach alone in each month of last year equaled the original purchase price of the entire state. As late as 1869 there were considerably less than 200,000 people in the state, and Greater Miami alone now has a population four times as large as the whole state had in 1845, the year Florida was admitted to the union.

The oldest tradition of the Miami area was celebrated for the 59th time Thursday when the Biscayne Bay Yacht club members held their annual Washington's birthday chowder party and flag-raising ceremony. In pre-war years this annual event was held on Key Biscayne, and a flotilla of yachts and other craft carried members and guests to the key. This year, for the third time, the ceremony was held at the clubhouse. About 300 attended.

Washington's birthday also was celebrated at the Surf club, when approximately 400 attended the weekly informal party, which featured patriotic decorations and a gigantic statue of our first president.

Wednesday fashion revue luncheons at the Surf club are setting new records. Upon their resumption this season they have been attracting so many resorters that it is necessary to close the reservations almost a week in advance, and latecomers go on a waiting list for cancellations. Mrs. James T. Igoe, wintering at the near-by Seaway, was hostess at the fashion luncheon last Wednesday. Mrs. Eugene B. Clark, who occupies one of the Surf club villas, entertained recently at luncheon in the patio of the club, honoring her house guest, Mrs. Horatio B. Hackett, also of Chicago.

A colony of Chicagoans are wintering at the Coronado in Surfside. The group includes Mr. and Mrs. David Andrew Bennett of Evanston and their daughter, Mrs. Byron Tull, and her young son, Byron Jr. The Bennetts are undaunted by the recent disaster of their 50-foot yacht Caroline, and are about to acquire a new craft. The family and guests were rescued from the burning yacht only moments before it exploded and sank. Others at the Coronado include J. A. Amos, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Keogh and Mr. Keogh's mother, Mrs. Frank Keogh, Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Fox, all of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Butler, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Lammers and daughter, Miss Gertrude Lammers, all of Evanston, and Mr. and Mrs. William Rowley and son, Kenneth, of Oak Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry D. Crooks are at the North Shore again this season, accompanied by their daughter, Mrs. Charles A. Mortimer and her 5 year old son, Charles A. Jr., of Wilmette. The Crooks will return to Chicago during March, by way of Washington, and Mrs. Mortimer and her son will remain here until the first of April.

Paul Galvin of Evanston, who is wintering at the Sea Crest Manor, near Hollywood, was a dinner host at the Brook club a few nights ago. Guests included Vincent D. Sill of Chicago, also staying at the Sea Crest, and Mr. and Mrs. Edwin J. Brach of Winnetka, who are in their winter home at Miami Beach, the Brach's house guests, Mr. and Mrs. George O'Callahan of Wilmette; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Lanning of Chicago, who have a home on Sunset Island, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. McKiernan of Winnetka.

Mr. and Mrs. Cleaveland B. Putnam and Mrs. Stevenson Clark are charter members of the newest club at Miami Beach, The 101 club. Membership consists of winter residents who are troubled with the servant problem, and meet for dinner and dancing at one of the night clubs every Thursday, maid's night out.

Mrs. Elwood B. Low of Highland Park is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Walter T. Schutt. Mr. and Mrs. Albert W. Wigglesworth of Kenilworth entertained with cocktails yesterday at their La Gorce Island home. Among those assisting was Mrs. Wigglesworth's sister, Miss Eileen McCarthy of Omaha, Neb., who is spending the winter with them.

Fashions and Fancy

By Judith Cass

Miss Joan Van Buren.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Twelve soldiers, all former prisoners of Germany and Japan, who are touring 30 American cities for the war department and the Red Cross, took time off from their work of addressing next of kin meetings and identifying prisoners' pictures, to attend a cocktail and buffet supper party given for them recently in the Polo room of the Ambassador East hotel by Ernest Byfield. Their partners for the evening were a group of post-debutantes who exchanged their Red Cross volunteer uniforms for their most glamorous clothes. The party, which began in quiet groups of conversation, ended in a gay evening of jitterbugging and group singing around a piano, which fairly jumped with boogie-woogie played by a professional pianist. One of the most solid rug-cutters was Miss Joan Van Buren, who was wearing a black crepe dress with a sash of black satin printed in royal blue coin dots tied around her hips. She wore a skull cap of the same print. Another hepcat taking her turn with the service men on the small space cleared for dancing was Miss Adrienne Ely, who wore her brightest and gayest frock, a dashing, swinging one of raspberry red crepe. The men were all from the army air forces with the exception of Corp. Willard E. Hall of Baker, Ore., who served with a tank battalion on Bataan and participated in the death march. All wore the Purple Heart on their beribboned chests, but were reluctant to talk of their own wounds. It was not until one young woman finished a strenuous session of jitterbugging that she discovered her partner had no right shoulder. She was told of this by one of his companions. Two of the young men, who were shot down in the same plane over the Emden submarine pens in Germany, were each minus a leg, and two others had lost an eye. Because of the seriousness of their wounds, which made them ineligible for further combat, 10 men in the group had been exchanged from German prison camps.

• • •

However, during their internment they did not forget the words to old familiar melodies, which they requested the pianist to play. Giving out with parodies on such songs as "Working on the Railroad" were Miss Ginger Elwood and Miss Connie Klaner. Miss Elwood's black dress had cap sleeves bordered in aqua embroidered with gold threads and tiny colored beads. The neckline of Miss Klaner's aqua wool frock was outlined with gold threads. Seen talking with Sgt. Donald I. McPherson of Lincoln, Neb., who escaped from the Japanese when the ship on which he was a prisoner was torpedoed on the way to Japan, was Miss Lucia Winston. Miss Winston was wearing a simple black crepe dress with a high neckline and long sleeves. Among the decorations on Sgt. McPherson's army blouse was the rarely seen Philippines defense ribbon, three tiny white stars denoting three islands in the Philippines group, on a red background. Sgt. McPherson was stationed in the islands at the time of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. Gold embroidery, which is so popular in this season of high colors and glitter, covered Miss Anne Ryerson's small, off-the-face fuchsia hat, which she wore with a basic black dress. She had pinned a fresh gardenia to the frock. The army nurse corps uniform worn to the party by Lt. Marie Merrill Hubbard evoked a round of spontaneous applause from the returned veterans when she entered the room, for all of them had reason to be grateful to wearers of that uniform. "O's" and "Ahs" were heard when the young people lined up for "chow," which the men said "was a far cry from the wormy cabbage soup" they had been served daily in German prison camps. The two men who had been Japanese prisoners shunned the rice and creamed lobster, however, having had enough rice in Jap prisons to last them for life. The party, scheduled from 5 to 9 p. m., continued later into the night. The only service man to depart early was one who went to meet the incarnation of a "dream girl" he envisioned during the dreary months he spent as a captive. He had met his fancy's absolute likeness on the tour. She is blonde.

Annual Benefit of Big Sisters Set for April 7

Committees have been assigned and preparations are well under way for the annual spring card party of the Big Sisters. Further plans will be discussed by the board at a meeting with the president, Miss Jane A. Magan, at 10:30 o'clock Thursday morning in the organization's Red Cross workroom at 203 N. Wabash av. Saturday, April 7, is the date set for the money-raising event, which is to be held in the Stevens hotel.

General chairman of the benefit is Mrs. Richard Nash Jr., and Mrs. Charles E. Caestecker is co-chairman. Mrs. Joseph P. McKeown and Mrs. Peter Cole have their ways and means committee members engaged every Friday until the party are making cocktail aprons for table prizes and for a sales booth. Mrs. F. Tighe Woods, chairman of door prizes, is gathering her group for a conference at a St. Patrick's day tea on March 17, and Mrs. Leo P. Finn, who is chairman for the fashion review to be staged at the benefit, and her co-chairman, Mrs. Marshall V. Kearney, have set Wednesday, March 21, for a general meeting to discuss final arrangements.

International Day Planned by Club Group

By Irene Steyskal.

Any misgivings the office of war transportation may have had that it was inviting an epidemic of "cloisterfobia" among club women by curtailing travel to conventions this spring may be dismissed with a clear conscience, insofar as this city's demobilized delegations are concerned. The ladies have discovered that Chicago has the world at its doorstep.

Only an invitation from the program committee is needed to bring to home meetings foreign educators, students, visiting artists, consular diplomats, experts in world economics and trade—all eager to tell the American woman about their respective countries, to discuss with her their immediate and post-war problems.

Typical of several home town meetings on the week's calendar of women's activities is the International day Mrs. Victor C. Munnecke, chairman of education, has arranged with the assistance of other department heads for the conference of Club Presidents and Program Chairmen. Conference members, representing some 200 women's organizations in the Chicago vicinity, will hear an East Indian philospoher, a former South African colonial rancher and lawyer, and the local press attache of the French provisional government on Mrs. Munnecke's program. The assembly will convene at 10:15 o'clock Thursday morning in Fullerton hall of the Art institute, with Mrs. Charles S. Clark presiding.

• • •

The Indian speaker to be presented on the International day program is the distinguished Dr. Sunder Joshi, lecturer in comparative religion in University college of the University of Chicago. He will talk to the women about the Asia of today. Dr. Joshi is the second of his family to lecture in Chicago. Mrs. Munnecke recalls when he and his late father, who was the first Carnegie exchange professor from India to this country, gave a series of lectures a decade ago at the Chicago Woman's club.

"Land of Tomorrow" is the title Austen West gives to his movie illustrated travelog on South Africa, where, son of British parents, he was born, practiced law, managed a ranch and did extensive exploring. From James W. Walsh, press attache for De Gaulle's government, the conference will hear a story of "French Women in War." Neppie Melton, appearing in costume, will add, both pictorially and vocally, a Russian note to the program, and with Nacmi Watson, contralto, and Antoinette Zebrowski, violinist, will contribute a group of American Indian compositions.

• • •

The spirit of brotherhood week just past, with its thought for interrace amity, is reflected in the conference program in two readings, "Black," and a companion poem, "White," by Constance Jane Hinton.

Mrs. Munnecke, serving the Chicago Woman's club as program chairman, directs the attention of that organization also to the international picture this week. She has arranged for a lecture appearance of Welthy Honsinger Fisher before the club at 2 o'clock Wednesday in Curtiss hall.

Miss Fisher, travel lecturer and author, will give a post-war picture of "World Neighbors."

• • •

In similar vein is the current events breakfast meeting planned by the Chicago Woman's aid for noon Friday in its rooms at 185 N. Wabash av., when Dr. Walter Johnson will address the club on "Blue Prints for a Bright Future." Dr. Johnson is professor of history at the University of Chicago.

The Woman's University Club of Chicago, following thru on a previous Russian program, will give a second town meeting to the soviets Wednesday night in its rooms in the Fine Arts building. Four of its own members have been assigned to prepare reports for that session, which is set for 7:30 o'clock. Miss Florence Knight will review the Controversial story of William L. White on his visit to Russia with Eric A. Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, and Miss Martha Capper will amplify the commentary with a talk on the business man in Russia. Mrs. Sarah Gilbert Street will talk on the children of Russia, and Miss Marion Fisher, who is in charge of the meeting, will give a report on the people of Siberia.

Another group of college women, the Greek Women's University club, has invitations out for a reception this afternoon for the consul general of Greece, Dr. Anthony Poumpouras. The party is to be held in Ida Noyes hall at the University of Chicago.

• • •

At the Chicago College club, 30 N. Michigan av., it is China that takes the spotlight. Cheng Pao-Nan, director of the Chicago office of Chinese News service is to be club's dinner guest Wednesday evening, and he will discuss with the group "The Current Situation in China."

Another distinguished Chinese resident in Chicago, Consul Gen. Chang-Lok Chen, will address a luncheon meeting next Friday of the Daughters of Colonial Wars in Illinois. He will talk on "China's Part in This Global War." The meeting will be held in the Fine Arts building.

International affairs are given important place on the program for the two day educational seminary which opens tomorrow in Chicago chapter headquarters of Hadassah, women's Zionist organization. Hadassah supports large medical, educational, and social welfare projects in Palestine, and has taken a leading part in the rescue of European Jewish refugees.

Mrs. Israel Efros, national chairman of the organization's educational field work, will be here from New York to direct the seminar, which is directed to means for implementing Hadassah educational programs. Setting the background for the meeting at the opening session tomorrow morning, Mrs. J. J. Molner will review the work of the American Jewish conference commissions, Mrs. Samuel Nieder will summarize the Dumbarton Oaks conference, and Mrs. Maurice Nagle will give a report on the Zionist political scene. Mrs. Evelyn Hattis Fox will be the presiding chairman. In the afternoon, Mrs. Sam Seltzer will preside at a session dealing with the history and philosophy of Zionism; the program will be given to two books, "Rome and Jerusalem" and "Palestine, Land of Promise," which will be reviewed respectively by Mrs. Robert Berg and Mrs. Morey Gross. An evening session also will be held tomorrow.

Tuesday morning a round table on Hadassah activities is scheduled, with Mrs. Edwin Berensen presiding. Participating will be Mrs. Alvin Horwitz, Mrs. Benjamin Lourie, Mrs. Solomon Rivlin, Mrs. William Gordon, Mrs. Sol Blum, Mrs. Robert Porte, Mrs. Julius Cherney, and Mrs. Efros.

The meeting will move to the Morrison hotel in the afternoon to accommodate the large audience anticipated. Dr. Chaim Yasskey, director of the Hadassah Medical organization in Palestine, who is visiting in this country, will address the assembly. Mrs. Efors also will speak.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to Her Friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Feb. 27, 1897.

Dear Julia: That was an intensely interesting catalog you sent me of the exhibit of John Trumbull's miniatures at Cole's gallery in New York. How I should have loved being with you as you visited the gallery! You know so much about art it would have been an education. But even if I have little knowledge of the subject, I would have thrilled to the sight of the paintings of Revolutionary heroes. Naturally, Washington's likeness would be of greatest interest to all Americans. I like reproductions of the painting of Washington much more warm and human than most pictures of him. I think that is because Trumbull loved him so dearly, admired him so unfeignedly. I noticed that under one of the sketches of the first President, Trumbull had written: "Beloved by all!"

Anna L. Stacey.

Next to the miniatures of Washington in interest are those of his wife—twelve, I counted, in the exhibit, as listed in the catalog. The one I'd like to see most of all is that carried by Washington thruout the Revolutionary war. It is described as glass covered, framed in a narrow gold rim, with some of her hair when it was a rich, bright auburn, arranged on the reverse side, in three plumes held in place by a dainty band of pearls.

Next to the pictures of our first president and his wife, I should like to see the one called "Battle of Bunker Hill," which he did before doing the large painting so well known. Then, perhaps would come, in interest, a group of American generals—Washington, Benedict Arnold, Wayne, Greene and Putnam, in Continental uniform. The notation on the back gives it a deep interest—"All favorite friends. J. T." He was, I know, a great friend of Benedict Arnold, and this always seemed strange to me, for he himself was a true patriot. Then the miniature of Napoleon and Maria Louisa couldn't fail to interest one, and that of Lafayette, on the back of which Trumbull had written: "Done at La Grange, his home in France, 1809. J. T."

I love miniatures, but I have come lately to feel that I'd rather spend my money for landscapes if I were buying. I remember with keen pleasure a mountain landscape by J. F. Kensett which was exhibited at our Chicago World's Fair of 1893. Mt. Chocorua, N. H., was the one he depicted, and as we had spent a few days in that region of the White mountains shortly before I saw the painting it roused pleasant memories. Do you recall this picture? It seems to me you were with me the day we saw it, but perhaps not.

I know you have several large and beautiful landscapes in your private gallery. Will and I were discussing your paintings the other evening, and he was sure you owned a Bierstadt and a Moran. Will you set us right on that when you write again? I thought Frederick Church was the one who painted the landscape on the right, as one enters your gallery. Will says it was Bierstadt. Do help me to win the argument, if you can!

I know that Frederick Church painted the Catskills, then went to South America, then on to Labrador and to Europe and Asia, where he found grand and sublime scenery to reproduce on his great canvases. Somehow, the latter ones don't interest me so much. I like paintings of American scenery — New England mountains; the Hudson river; the Catskills; the prairies of Illinois. All these scenes mean much more to me than lands beyond the seas.

I have found myself in quite an atmosphere of art the past week, for one of the large women's organizations [perhaps I should explain that I mean large organizations of women, not a group of ladies whose avoirdupois is noticeable] the West End Woman's club, has been holding an exhibit of paintings by Chicago artists, with prizes for the best. Altho I don't belong to the club, I was invited by Mrs. William J. Chalmers to visit the gallery of the Illinois club, where these paintings are hung. Pauline Dohn received the first prize of $100 for her painting "What The Stork Brought" and Anna L. Stacey received a prize of $50 for a water color portrait of a young woman. It is thrilling to see our young artists receiving recognition. And now I must close. Much love.

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOTNOTES.

Readers of this column will enjoy the Hudson river artists' exhibit at the Art institute, especially as the very canvas Martha mentions in her letter, by J. F. Kensett, is among them.

Chicago Song Writers.

Here's a thought for some solvent Chicagoan! Earl Hoover, recently quoted here on the subject of B. R. Hanby, author of "Darling Nellie Gray" and "Old Shady," writes: "Some day some Chicago civic organization should seek out the spot where stood the publishing firm of Root & Cady and there place a monument. George F. Root was the greatest Civil war song writer. If some Chicago millionaire would get back of Root, as a hobby, as Eli Lilly of Indianapolis got back of Stephen Foster, today Root would be as well known, as a person, as is Foster. . . . About 1865, Root [the Irving Berlin of his day] recognized the genius of Ohio's Hanby and brought young Hanby to Chicago to collaborate with him. There Hanby conceived the idea of a musical quarterly for children. The two collaborated on it. Root & Cady published it. It was called "Our Song Birds." Four issues were published before Hanby's death. In the paper-backed fourth issue [October, 1866] called "The Dove," appeared two of Hanby's songs which were to attain world wide fame after his death: the famous child's song, "Up On The House Top," originally called "Santa Claus;" and the hymn, "Who Is He in Yonder Stall," a classic in the British empire. A third Chicago song writer of the period was Henry C. Work.

Club to Study Labor Laws at Joint Session

Proposed legislation affecting children and youth draws club women to two meetings tomorrow for study and discussion. A joint afternoon meeting of the legislation and the law observance departments of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs will focus on labor laws related to minors and also women workers. Respective chairmen of the two departments are Mrs. Harry W. Raymond and Mrs. R. C. Mann.

Mrs. H. W. Raymond.

At the Woman's City club tomorrow afternoon school legislation now being studied by the house education committee of the Illinois legislature will be discussed at a round table, the purpose of which is to crystalize opinion and define the club's stand.

• • •

The bills posted for discussion at the City club meeting relate to the codification of laws governing the free school system in this state and deal specifically with elected boards of education, rather than appointed bodies; the establishment of a four year college in Chicago, and the appropriation of funds to support such an institution. Participating in the discussion will be Mrs. Laura Hughes Lunde, the club's chairman on legislation; the president, Mrs. Harry M. Mulberry, and Mrs. Henry C. Dormitzer, who will serve as chairman of the panel.

Mrs. Laura H. Lunde.

Tomorrow's meeting, which is set for 2 o'clock, follows a gathering last Friday of delegates from local civic organizations at the invitation of the Woman's City club. Opinions expressed at that meeting will be reported to the City club members at the round table. Mrs. William E. Duffell and her social committee will provide tea after the discussion.

The meeting at federation headquarters will convene at 1:30 o'clock. Two speakers are scheduled—Miss Agnes Nestor of the Women's Trade Union league, who will discuss the "equal pay for equal work" law, and Mrs. Edwin Eels of the Illinois Child Labor committee, who will explain her reasons for proposing a new child labor law for the state.

• • •

Two other divisions of the federation, Mrs. W. Glenn Suthers' post-war planning committee and the American citizenship department headed by Mrs. Wyllys W. Hagen, also will gather at headquarters in joint session this week, their meeting being called for 2 o'clock Thursday. Two speakers have been invited to give their opposing views on the question, "Should We Have Universal Military Training?" The program will not take the form of a debate, but both speakers will answer questions from the audience. Anthony H. Hilgers, past district commander of the American Legion, will speak in favor of general military training, and the Rev. Jack Mendelsohn Jr., minister at the Beverly Unitarian church, will tell why he takes the opposite stand.

Service Group Is Commended by Red Cross

Considerable impetus recently was lent to activities of the American Camp and Hospital Service on behalf of hospitalized service men with recognition of the organization's outstanding work in the field by the camp and hospital committee of Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross. In addition to written commendation concerning the group's service program, invitation to membership on the Red Cross committee has been extended to the society's president, Mrs. Louis Green.

Under the direction of Mrs. Green, the group now is mapping plans for its most ambitious benefit to date—a St. Patrick's carnival set for 8 o'clock the night of March 17 in the Grand ballroom of the Parkway hotel. Proceeds from the fete will be used for furnishing a recreation room for the orthopedic ward at the Fort Sheridan hospital, and for continuing its monthly parties and gift contributions for disabled and convalescent service men in military hospitals of the Chicago area.

At 8 o'clock Tuesday night members and friends of the society will gather at headquarters, 540 Briar pl., for an evening of entertainment, which has been arranged by Mrs. Walter Goldsmith, with Mrs. William Koelle and Mrs. Jerome Niederman assisting. The program will include dramatic readings by Mrs. Billie Hyman.

• • •

The business girls' group of the American camp and hospital service is planning to launch an intensive membership drive with a large tea on Sunday, March 18, in the clubrooms. Miss Bess C. Myers is president of the unit, and Miss Ethel Eisen is membership chairman.

Miss Gwen Desplenter of Chicago has been chosen president to succeed Mrs. DeLilah Giertz of Elgin; Miss Margaret Reed of Harvey and Miss Mary Flannigan of Bellwood, vice presidents, and Mrs. Helen Wett and Miss Marie Dus, both of Chicago, secretaries.

Mothers of Flying Army Officers will hear a book review by Mme. Luella Canterbury at a party scheduled for 12:30 o'clock tomorrow in celebration of the society's third anniversary. The program will be held in the auditorium of the Y. M. C. A., 19 S. La Salle st.

Chicago members of Silver Wings of America will gather at 8 o'clock Thursday night in room 500 of the Fine Arts building for a program by Mrs. Harvey C. Daines, singer, with Mrs. Arthur Lincicomb as accompanist. Invitation is extended to mothers, wives, and sisters of men who have won their silver wings in army air forces.

Jewish Women Will Hear Book Review Next Wednesday

Mrs. Moses L. Purvin. [Ward Photo.]

Program and reviewer for the Wednesday book hour at Chicago section headquarters of the National Council of Jewish Women are a happy combination that assures a capacity audience. Mrs. Oscar Newberger, chairman of the book talks, has prevailed upon Mrs. Moses L. Purvin to make one of her infrequent lecture appearances before the council, in which, a veteran with progressive ideas, she holds a unique place as unofficial mentor. Mrs. Purvin's critique will be on the new Oliver Wendell Holmes biography, "Yankee from Olympus," by Catherine Bowen. Her talk is scheduled for 2 o'clock. Mrs. Purvin, active in many civic and philanthropic organizations, is a trustee of the Chicago public library.

All members of the council's career group who have completed their $15 "earning funds" are gathering at 1 o'clock today for a luncheon party in the Sherry hotel at 1725 E. 53d st. Chief beneficiary of the current money raising drive is a summer camp maintained by the council for underprivileged mothers and children.

Personal Card Messages Make Unusual Show

By Eleanor Jewett.

The Chicago Galleries association, 215 N. Michigan av., offers an unusual exhibit this month. Mahrea Cramer Lehman, an artist of ability and humor, lost her mother some eight years ago and conceived the pleasant idea of cheering her father by sending him a card each day, illustrated with whatever of importance or unimportance happened that day. She dashed the cards off with vigorous enthusiasm and achieved in many cases a miniature picture which could easily slip into a compartment labeled "Art." Mrs. Lehman is showing several groups of the cards and in them one may read of the ups and downs of the Lehman menage, including the black cat, Bombsight.

The exhibit is drawing a host of amused visitors who linger and chuckle over birthday occasions, late hours, a dash to the beach, the torments of a battered car, and black kittens or cats in fascinating and mischievous pursuits. "Daily Cards to Pop" make as amusing a diary as could ever be imagined. Also, in close conjunction, are sketches so direct, so able, and so right that were Mrs. Lehman so inclined she could make larger drawings from them with the pleasantest results.

In the larger gallery at the Chicago Galleries are paintings by Carl Hoerman and Julius Moessel. Carl Hoerman is an architect turned painter—and excellent in both professions. His exhibit covers a wide range of territory from the dunes of Michigan to the tile roofs of Mexico. One of the most beautiful of his paintings is of an enormous branch of dogwood blossoms in a window; another effective painting is of a huge and ancient tree, stripped of all foliage. Two snowy landscapes are pleasing and a California coast scene with water lapping high between two cliffs is gorgeous.

Julius Moessel offers a number of decorative paintings of birds and flowers, and of odd still life, such as a collection of butterflies. He is a meticulous painter of great skill. His work has color, life, and beauty. The panel of three young monkeys trying to investigate a stuffed bird in a case is very amusing. The battling cocks make a stunning effect and his paintings of white cockatoos and parrots are magnificent. To our regret we did not care for the paintings on the "Gold Star" theme, which, we understand, Mr. Moessel considers of great importance. We thought them stiff, trite, and cold. The Statue of Liberty behind banked flowers has no value at all in our estimation compared with the portrayal of an idealized mother with a little boy running back into her arms.

The exhibitions will continue to March 10.

• • •

Another interesting new exhibit is that at the clubwoman's bureau, Mandel Brothers, where the 17th annual exhibition by the Swedish artists of Chicago is on view. Frederick Remahl shows two attractive water colors and Thomas Hall has a stunning oil. An artist who is missing is Signe Palmblad, whose work — particularly her Swedish peasant decorations — is always charming. Mrs. Palmblad will be 75 years old on March 12. She is not well, but her spirit is far from broken. At 60 she took up ballet dancing—to keep young—and she learned to paint with her left hand when she broke her right arm. Today, with rheumatic fever, she is playing Beethoven to keep her fingers from stiffening. Even tho a painting by her is not in this current show, because of the many beautiful paintings she has exhibited in other years we can do no less today than wish her good health, friendship, good cheer, and —Happy Painting!

• • •

Robert Von Neumann of Milwaukee has an exhibit of oils, water colors, and etchings at the Lenabel F. Pokrass gallery, 5533 Hyde Park blvd.

• • •

A new exhibition has been installed in the room of Chicago art, Art institute. Laura Van Pappelendam and Jean Crawford Adams share the gallery. Their work is very different, which makes for a lively show. Both artists are well konwn. Miss Van Pappelendam is an instructor at the Art institute as well as a constant exhibitor. Miss Adams is known thru her exhibited work. Jean Crawford Adams paints farm scenes, with particular emphasis on country roads; still life in brilliant color is another of her favorite subjects.

Laura Van Pappelendam paints with a freer brush and more delicate color. Her work is sensitive and often almost bodyless. She suggests rather than defines supporting objects and stable backgrounds. A flood of color and the impression of space signalize her work. Her brushwork is elusive and subtle, but usually the result she obtains justifies the means. There is feeling and imagination in her painting, and warmth and charm. Among her pictures in the current show is a delightful "Back Yard" with a morning glory covered pole topped by a cozy little white birdhouse, half hidden in the flowers. Another enchanting scene is the "A Country Home Buried in Trees and Foliage."

• • •

Florence White Williams has a delightful little exhibit of recent work in the Chicago Woman's Club gallery, fifth floor, Fine Arts building. The majority of the pictures are water colors; there are four oils, one a large picture with boats which Miss Williams painted last summer at Gloucester. Flowers and gardens fill most of the canvases; the scraps of gay colors are fascinating.

Curfew Edict May Fence in Palm Beach

By Helen Van Hoy Smith.

PALM BEACH, FLA.

Indications are that Palm Beach will be somewhat "fenced in" by the midnight curfew, in spite of the fact that the state already has a law that says no liquor may be sold after midnight. Just how and to what extent private clubs will be affected remains to be seen. This is no roaring city, and has never fostered the fabulous night life for which Miami is famous, but at that, P. B. never has been geared to an early to bed schedule.

The black-out was rigidly enforced and well managed. The brown-out also is observed. It takes all the joy out of window shopping along Worth av. Outside of private clubs, night life here centers about intimate little bars where lights, discreetly dim, catch the gleam and sparkle of cocktail glasses that glow forever amber, and the wine flows like tears.

But Palm Beach can meet any emergency. Grim visaged war has already caused certain private clubs to issue an edict of their own; hereafter only one dessert will be allowed per person. You may have either pie or ice cream, but no pie a la mode.

Washington's birthday was observed with another cozy little dinner dance at the Everglades club attended by about 600. Vaudeville acts were introduced during the dinner, with dancers, a violinist, a chanteuse, and a skating team among the entertainers.

• • •

In the good old days the Washington birthday ball was the crowning event of the season. By that time trunks were packed and return tickets purchased. Everybody was ready to seek greener pastures. The birthday ball always was held in the old Royal Poinciana, long since razed, and was a charity event. It was the only occasion at which the all and sundry were able to see the people they read about in the papers, in evening regalia and war paint.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Spalding III. have as their guests at Sandy Loam farm, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Ammidown of New York.

Mrs. Richard W. Stephens has come from Eugene, Ore., to join her parents-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Louis L. Stephens, and Mr. and Mrs. Britton Budd of Chicago at the Breakers. Mrs. William J. Snyder also arrived early this week at the Breakers.

Mr. and Mrs. Le Ray Berdeau gave a dinner party at Villa Today honoring Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Cummings of Chicago. In the party also was their house guest, Mrs. Jacob Baur, also Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Meiggs, George A. Dobyne, and a number of smart New Yorkers. Mrs. Berdeau entertained at the Everglades Tombola on Wednesday for her mother, Mrs. William Quinn, and on Tuesday night participated in a discussion on modern art at the Norton Art gallery in West Palm Beach.

• • •

The Russian art exhibition, which will continue thru March 12, has created widespread comment. It is the most colorful show the Four Arts has yet had, and, in the opinion of many, by far the most arresting. Le Ray Berdeau, chairman, has been showered with congratulations. Pictures lent by the Chicago Art institute are Genin's "Thirst," Kandinsky's "Troika," Soutine's "Dead Fowl," Ferat's "Green Circus Riders," Gluckmann's "Nude," and Yacovleff's magnificent Chinese actor. An Orloff bronze, "Woman with Basket," also is from the Art institute.

Mr. and Mrs. John Alden Carpenter, who are spending the season at Hobe Sound, were honor guests at a luncheon given by Mr. and Mrs. William B. Hayward of New York at the Everglades club.

The concert by Chicago's Russian trio, held in connection with the Russian art exhibition, was another musical milestone in resort annals. A capacity crowd, glamorously gowned and jeweled, attended. The members of the trio were house guests of the Charles S. Davises, who entertained for them with a buffet supper after the concert.

Another walking garden tour is scheduled for today with the Davis garden included, also the garden of the Hon. Mrs. Frederick A. Guest, which contains a Grecian temple.

Donald Nelson and his bride were glimpsed on Worth av, and then, to all intents and purposes, evaporated into thin air.

Lady of the House

How Do You "Keep" Sunday?

Replying to Aunt Ella's challenge [Feb. 4], one contributor speaks for many when she says, "I have felt so keenly the way we all do not keep one day a week apart from the others as we were accustomed to do, but have felt powerless to do differently."

Working in a war plant, like thousands of other women, then taking care of the home and the combined families while her daughter takes her turn at war work, the man of the house working on shifts, they "scarcely know when Sunday comes . . . so different from old accustomed ways."

Another recalls childhood years of living with Grandma, "when we could scarcely lift a finger on that day—couldn't bounce a ball—usually we sat in stiff chairs while visiting with grownups, who made boring [to us] conversation while we longed to be up and away'"

Still another, reared in the tradition of a rigidly kept Sabbath, has "happily escaped from too much restraint by rearing three wonderful boys in these modern times."

Anent "A Lot of Mending" [Feb. 11], Helen Virden reminds us of—

The Good Physician.

I'm glad we have a doctor like our God
To take care of this world when war is done;
The ground where tyrants' feet have walked rough-shod
Will need mending when victory is won.
Then He will put splints on each broken heart
He'll mark each one and enter on His chart
The individual needs His microscope
Has found. He'll cut away the hate and greed
With skilful hand for He has been well trained
By other wars . . . He knows how to proceed
When lands and homes and hearts have been bloodstained.

Not satisfied till all our wounds are healed
Like He made poppies bloom on Flanders field.

The Children's Farewell.

But I remember, too, their glorious youth.
Within the caverns of my lonely heart, the echoes of Their laughter still resound; and I remember.

Haunting yesterdays—how could I forget the wond'ring eyes
That first saw a circus parade?
The park, the bright red swings—and even
And skipping legs, and bonnets in the sun . . .

Thru them I sensed the joy of wading thru
Lucid pools of summer rain . . .
And games in grass that grew waist-high,
And wind that laid it flat.

I see the length'ning shadows, and twilight;
I hear the crickets' lays,
The children calling, coming home,
Their evening prayer, and from their trundle beds
Their tired, sleepy goodnights.

Youth one day, the next, minds ponderous with worldly cares,
Eyes from which the laughter is gone.
The world is waiting! Youth goodbye!
Yes, I remember the children's farewell . . .

Sophia T. Zufa.

Frost.

The little fence on which
Birds rest when winging,
And when refreshed give thanks
In pulsing singing;
Shone out today in all its Radiant beauty,
Forgetting that its one
And only duty
Was penning chikens from Their wanderings—
Instead of wearing bands
Of snow white rings.
Tomorrow it will be
Just chicken wire,
But today its facets
Set the world on fire.
Wrapt in a mantle
Tapestry of foam
God's handiwork makes
It a glorious poem.

Stella Krumfuss.

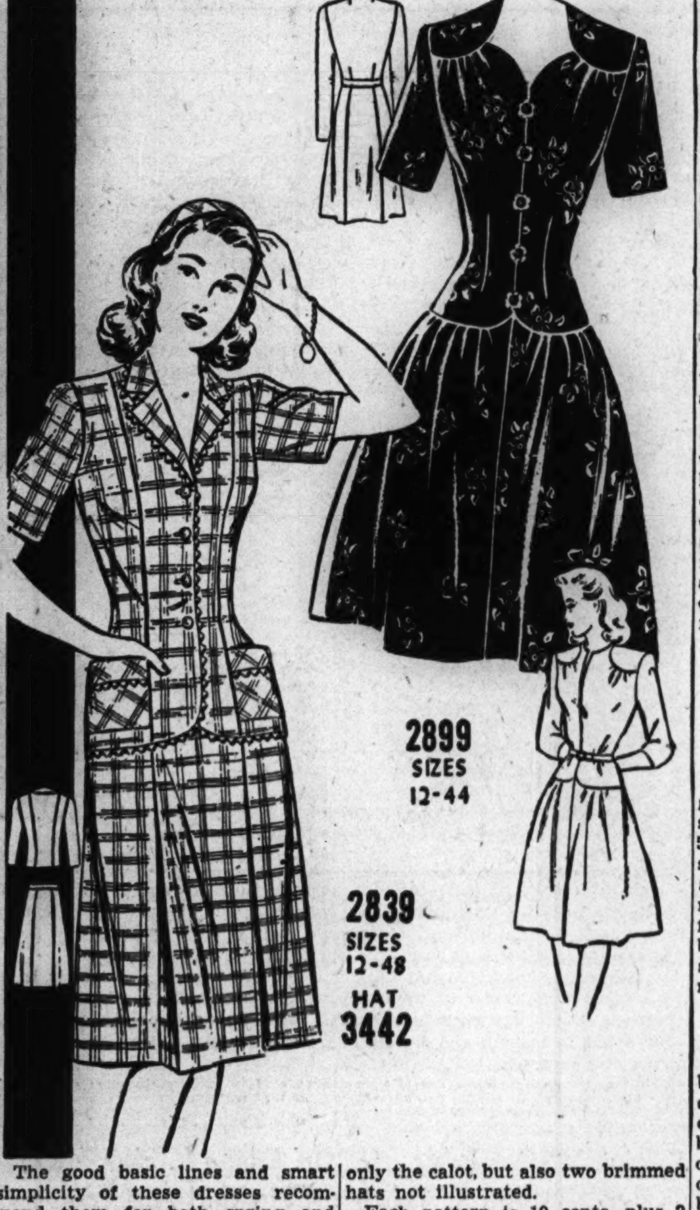
Patterns by Clotilde



The good basic lines and smart simplicity of these dresses recommend them for both spring and summer fabrics. They're especially attractive fashions for today's busy women who want things easy to wear and keep in good condition.

The first of the patterns creates a two-piece model for woolens, crepes or washable fabrics. The jacket is moderately tailored, and may be plain or bound with braid or trimmed with ready-to-use rick-rack.

The second dress may have either a high or heart-shaped neckline. Its yoke shoulders are graceful, its bodice hits well below the natural waistline, thus assuring a long, flattering line, and its skirt is full. Both prints and plain shades are handsome in this spring dress.

The third pattern makes a tiny calot to match the two-piece ensemble, or any other tailored outfit in your wardrobe. A scrap of material left from the sewing, or purchased especially for the hat, does the trick.

Style No. 3442 is designed for one adaptable headsize, and makes not only the calot, but also two brimmed hats not illustrated.

Each pattern is 10 cents, plus 2 cents for mailing.

The spring edition of The Chicago Tribune Book of Clotilde Fashions now is on sale at the Public Service offices, 1 S. Dearborn st. and Tribune Tower lobby for 15 cents. The cost is only 12 cents if the book is ordered with a pattern from the address in coupon.

Nutritious Fish Helps to Save the Red Points

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune.]

More and better fish recipes are what homemakers are seeking these days. Even when Lent does not affect the family menu pattern, use of fish is found to be a red point saver. What's more, fish is a protein and mineral rich food, valuable in every person's diet.

Frozen fish, such as cod and whitefish fillets and codfish cakes are available in package form to supplement the supplies of fresh fish which markets are carrying. The variety is good, including many kinds of broilable fillets in the moderate price range, and such delicacies as lobster, lake trout, salmon, shrimp, oysters, and halibut for more money. Smelts are in now, and other low priced fish are mackerel, carp, pickerel, sheepshead, buffalofish.

Grilled Mackerel with Roe.

[Serves four.]

1 4-pound mackerel with roe
Salt, pepper, margarine
4 strips bacon
2 tomatoes, halved

Place cleaned split mackerel on greased broiler, skin side up. Season with salt and pepper and broil 5 or 6 minutes. Turn carefully with spatula, brush with margarine, and add roe, bacon, and tomatoes to rack. Broil until bacon is crisp and fish slightly browned. Turn roe and bacon once. Total broiling time shouldn't be much longer than 15 minutes.

Baked Fish with Cream and Watercress.

Use fillets of any fish. Season both sides with salt and pepper, dust over with paprika, and place close together in greased shallow baking pan. Place a slice of onion on each fillet. Pour 1 cup light cream or top milk over fish and bake uncovered at 350-375 degrees until fish is tender, basting occasionally with cream in pan. Fish should be done in 25 or 30 minutes. Place on hot platter and sprinkle with chopped watercress. Pour remaining sauce around fillets.

Olive and Mushroom Stuffed Fish.

[Serves six.]

1 3-4 pound fish prepared for stuffing
¼ pound mushrooms, sliced
¼ cup margarine
4 large ripe olives, chopped
¼ teaspoon thyme
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2½ cups toasted bread cubes

Brown mushrooms lightly in margarine and mix with olives, seasonings, and bread. Stuff fish cavity which has been seasoned with salt and pepper. Sew or skewer opening, place fish in greased shallow baking pan and bake at 375 degrees for half an hour or until tender. Serve with lemon or cucumber sauce.

French Fried Fish Cutlets.

Cut fish fillets into squares, strips, or slices and season with salt and pepper. Dip into a mixture of 1 beaten egg and 2 tablespoons cold water, then coat with fine cracker or toast crumbs. Drop into deep hot fat at 380 degrees and fry golden brown. Drain on soft paper and serve hot with tartar sauce.

Fish Flake Salad.

[Serves six.]

2 cups flaked cooked fish
1 cup diced cucumber
1 cup minced celery
3 radishes, sliced thin
3 tablespoons vinegar from sweet pickles
½ teaspoon salt
Mayonnaise to blend

Have all ingredients cold. Combine thoroly and serve on lettuce with a sprinkling of paprika on each serving.

To prepare flaked fish for salads, fish loaves, croquettes, and casseroles, use any of the low priced fish, and cook by steaming or immersing in simmering water in a frying basket or piece of cheesecloth which will keep the fish together. When fish is tender, remove, cool, flake, and remove any bones and skin.

Fish Pie.

2 cups flaked fish
1 cup cooked vegetables [peas, carrots, celery]
¼ cup margarine or bacon drippings
¼ cup flour
2 cups milk
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
Sprinkling of mixed herbs [optional]
Mashed potatoes

Combine flaked fish and vegetables. Blend fat and flour, add milk, and cook to smooth sauce. Add seasonings. Add fish and vegetables to sauce. Place in greased baking dish, sides of which have been lined with a thin layer of fresh mashed potatoes. Top with more mashed potatoes and bake the dish at 400 degrees until potatoes are lightly browned and fish mixture is bubbling.

For Joyful Cough Relief, Try This Home Mixture

Saves Big Dollars. No Cooking.

This splendid recipe is used by millions every year, because it makes such a dependable, effective medicine for coughs due to colds. It is so easy to mix—a child could do it.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its soothing effect on throat and bronchial membranes.

Then make a syrup by stirring two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Put the Pinex into a pint-bottle and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of cough medicine, very effective and quick-acting, and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and is very pleasant—children love it.

You'll be amazed by the way it takes hold of coughs, giving quick relief. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Money refunded if it doesn't please in every way.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 diamond	Pass	1 spade	Pass
2 spades	Pass	3 spades	Pass
4 spades	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead, king of clubs.

An interesting problem in percentages was presented to the declarer in today's hand. The final contract of four spades was a proper one and the "stagger" system of getting there happens to be about the only proper one. North is able to offer only a single raise after opening the bidding, and South's bid of three spades says in effect, "Partner, I am unable to go to game myself lest you have a close raise. If however, you have a good raise, I hope you will take a chance."

The king of clubs was opened and West shifted to the jack of hearts. This was permitted to go to South's queen, East signalling with the nine. Apparently everything depends upon the spade finesse, inasmuch as one trick must be surrendered in each of the side suits. Holding 10 spades, percentages favor the finesse over the play for the drop, and if there were no other considerations, that would be the proper procedure. However, the advantage in favor of the finesse is only slight and the chance of dropping the single king is not at all remote.

There is another plan of attack. If the king of spades fails to drop there is a chance to make the hand if the player holding that card has no more than two diamonds. Declarer therefore prepared for such a case by returning the hearts at once. East won with the eight, and played the ace, which South ruffed. He then ruffed the remaining club, completely eliminating hearts and clubs. Then followed the ace of trumps, and when nothing sensational took place, the ace and king of diamonds were cashed and then a trump was led. West won the trick and was helpless. Either a heart or a club would permit South to ruff in dummy and discard the losing diamond from his hand.

Coat Dresses, Suits Feature Clever Details

By Rea Seeger.

Begin a spring wardrobe with a coat, add a suit and a simple coat dress, and you have three pieces that will, with the aid of proper costume accessories, make a complete wardrobe of mix and match perfection. Next to the selection of a good foundation coat, a trim, slim basic suit is of ranking importance. Many of the neat, uncluttered suits double for street, business, town wear, and for casual duty.

The sleek tailored models are far from the masculine, Spartan plain affairs of former years. This spring they're slim and neat without losing a feminine soft quality, a trick that is achieved with unusual details, such as tab bands, contrasting pockets and tailored bows, unusual yokelines, wide curved shoulder seams, and jackets that look soft without loosing a bit of their simplicity of silhouette.

Coat dresses, too, have a spring appeal. They're practical without looking functional. They're streamlined without looking sheath-slim, and this season they flaunt contrasts of print and solid color for neckline, cuffs, or pockets. Some are almost copies of real coats with the buttons down the front or extreme side. Some have short sleeves, and there are long sleeved models to sustain the coat idea.

• • •

All are unmistakably spring, 1945, for they are sleek, distinctive, smart, and ready for wear from dawn till dusk. They can be worn immediately under short or long fur coats, or with topcoats of brilliant colors, the first coats of spring. Later such coat dresses become smart town and street costumes with fur scarf and, still later, a daytime uniform with white or bright colored accessories.

The most exciting are those of yarn dyed gray wool, frosted with white, or the black and white checks of infinitesimal size. Note the many new models with double rows of buttons or the sideline of buttons of either bone, plastic, or large self-material covered discs. Tailored details are outstanding because of meticulous accent of stitchery. Action plaits are legally allowed.

• • •

Spring suits are legion. From the uncluttered models to the dress parade affairs, there are dozens of smart colors and patterned materials from which to choose. Neutral gray and beige tones, the perennial favorite of navy blue, and the snappy checked materials, lead the list so far for shopping records. Gray rates even with the navy blue for the first spring suit. There are most unusual gray suits with a definite dressup manner, also many distinctive tailored suits of chalk striped gray or solid gray, ranging from pale misty tints to steel and almost black oxford gray. All are top fashion.

Sketched are four distinctive new spring models: two coat dresses and two suits. All are from a superb collection of new spring fashions to be found in a Chicago store. For further information call Superior 0200.

It seems I've erred again in recommending one of my BUY-LINES primarily for feminine buyers ... for yesterday, a woman told me that her husband had asked her to send several jars of AMOLIN Deodorant Cream to him overseas. "He uses it"—she said—"to rub on his feet as well as underarms . . . and says it's the very best thing he's ever used to keep down disagreeable perspiration odors that are so common overseas when the problem of getting clean clothes often is so terrific!" You, too, will find AMOLIN Deodorant Cream the most DEPENDABLE deodorant you've ever used . . . for it helps prevent perspiration odors from forming. In addition—AMOLIN is so smooth . . . and vanishes quickly when you rub it underarms. Ask your Druggist for AMOLIN Deodorant Cream . . . good for women AND men!

For many months I've been telling you about VICEROY CIGARETTES, —the SMART cigarette for SMART women. And now I've been called to task by several men readers who defy me to tell them a reason why this fragrant blend of domestic and Turkish tobaccos doesn't make a SMART smoke for SMART men as well. A million pardons, gentlemen . . . of course, VICEROYS, with that unique filter tip that checks out resins, tars and other throat irritants and gives such a mild, clean smoke, are liked by men, too! I didn't mean to imply that there was anything sissy about a VICEROY ... to the contrary . . . a VICEROY is firmly packed, compact, and there's no chance of loose tobacco crumbs slipping out into cigarette cases or pockets. The filter tip acts as a "stopper" to keep tobacco IN the cigarette for perfect smoking pleasure. So take it away, gentlemen . . . VICEROYS, the SMART smoke for BOTH women AND men!

Pomanders (dried, perfumed oranges stuffed with pungent cloves) were introduced to England from France when Elizabeth was queen! Pomander Balls from THE HERB FARM SHOP make wonderful gifts . . . lovely to look at, nice to sniff! . . . $1, $1.25 and $1.75 (plus taxes) at Mandel Bros. or Marshall Field's.

Probably no one has ever said to you "Don't be fat." They wouldn't be so rude to speak the obvious . . . but surely if you suffer from normal excess weight you have felt their eyes saying it. So why not do something about looking slim and smart . . . buckle down and take off a few pounds? The famous WELCH Way of reducing needn't sap your energy . . . for it requires no strenuous exercises, harmful drugs nor stringent menus. All you do is mix three-quarters of a glass of WELCH'S Grape Juice with a quarter glass of water and drink before meals and at bedtime. In this way you have less desire to eat rich, fattening foods so that caloric intake is reduced without giving you hungry moments. Most amazing, however, is the fact that the natural dextrose in WELCH'S is quickly consumed so that nature is aided in consuming excess fat . . . while at the same time you are provided with increased energy. Be sure that you use only genuine WELCH'S Grape Juice . . . for this WELCH Way of reducing, established by Dr. Frederic Damrau of New York, has been tested over and over!

Police-Parent Often Misses Joy of Child

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

"We went to a party the other night. A small group of friends gathered for a quiet dinner and an evening of talk," said a woman I know. "Among the guests were a husband and wife who were new to town. They were pleasant people; the husband was one of those natural, unself-conscious men who are a thorn in the side of a certain type of wife.

"All the evening she was explaining him—trying to nudge him, or apologizing for him—constantly aware of his appearance and his manners, and making herself sort of a social buffer for a very nice husband. It reached the point where we were all embarrassed, but what a lesson it taught me! I'll never apologize for Jim if he commits all the social errors in the calendar. I'm never again going to be my husband's keeper; he's going to sink or swim socially all by himself."

• • •

I wonder if what occurs to me from this tale occurs to you—namely: That parents often fall into a similar trap. To be sure, we are necessarily our children's "keeper," because they're only immature and learning young things. But we get too tense about it, and usually we're on the job in that way when we don't need to be. We get tense socially, and tenseness never did get a mother anywhere.

Obviously, watching a child every minute of the day and night for every act that doesn't measure up to our standard of perfection defeats its own end. Being frightfully conscientious about the smallest details of behavior means a supervision that is irking to both child and mother. Carried to an extreme, it often leads to an overlooking of bigger and deeper principles of character or relationship.

It's pleasant and wholesome to step out of your role as a dutiful parent, and for a while, to look at your child and listen to him and treat him as a person, some one for whom you are not socially responsible.

Just detach yourself now and then and try to see your son or daughter [large or small] with different eyes—for example, as a personality of interest.

• • •

Set yourself and your child free occasionally of the demands of the dutiful parent.

Try not to be your child's keeper as far as being on the alert for every mis-step is concerned. Play it as a sort of game at first if you want to, and you'll find out a lot of attractive, interesting, and even surprising things about your child that you'll never sense at all if you think only of correcting and trimming him or her to a pattern. Get out of that kind of parent rut.

When you're too constantly on the job as policeman-parent, you miss a lot of valuable "angles," often things like these I've been quoting.

Fashions

By Angela

"Separates" are recent additions to the fashions these days, and they refer to skirts and blouses made to be worn with a variety of tops or skirts. There are many sleek, black crepe skirts and a large number of cleverly styled and brilliantly hued crepe blouses which combine to create an illusion of a one piece dress. The blouses lend themselves dramatically to these dark skirts, since they may be of either vivid stripes, luscious flower prints, or in high, solid colors with dashing lines.

Another combination is the black crepe skirt with two unpressed box plaits in front and a straight back, worn with a soft pink crepe blouse splashed with bold black flowers. The neckline is high, tied with a bow, and trimmed with pearl buttons down the front.

Thru the Looking Glass

Right up at the top of the list of essentials for skin care is the "good" cleansing cream. It's the rock we women lean on to help us keep our complexions clear and bright come winter or summer, at home or at work. Whether we're giving ourselves a complete facial treatment or merely want to do a quick cleanup job in the middle of the day, the cream cleanser is part and parcel of the job with most of us.

If you're not one of the regular users of cleansing creams and are dissatisfied with your skin because it lacks the fresh brightness you envy in others, we suggest that you join the happy throng and see how much regular use of such a cream can do for your complexion.

The nightly face cleansing ritual that begins with the application of cream is off to a good start. The oils in the cream help loosen dirt and grime, unmooring the stubborn soil that wants to stay imbedded in the skin. And one of the most effective creams that we can recommend for this purpose for the dry skins so prevalent in this area is one that contains a special lubricating ingredient.

It's a pink and pretty concoction that smooths on in a twinkling, soothing and comforting the epidermis that is tired and taut from the rigors of wind and weather while it is accomplishing its main task of banishing dirt. This is the sort of cream you'll want to be deliberate and relaxed about using. Work it around with sure strokes, letting it settle in all the corners and crevices.

You'll feel the skin lessen in tension as you stroke it over the face and throat, and when it's tissued off you'll be pleased at the effectiveness with which it carries dirt away with it.

Excellent as it is, this is not an expensive cream but modestly enough priced so that the business girl or homebody won't feel extravagant about using it for a quick cleanup during the middle of the day. It's as good for this purpose as it is for the leisurely cleansing, and because it is not overly heavy or greasy, it can be applied and wiped off in a few seconds when you're in a hurry. Young Artists of Mexico Show Great Promise

By Edith Weigle.

It would be interesting if some day in the near future Chicagoans could see an exhibition of the work of the younger Mexican artists. It would be a lively and varied show, for most of the men whose work we saw last December in Mexico City are proficient in more than one medium, and do not confine themselves to any one type of subject matter.

Young Raul Anguiano, for example, still in his twenties, is a skilled maker of lithographs, and he paints in oils and water colors. A former art teacher in a provincial school, he returned to Mexico City a few years ago and is at work there now.

All the examples of his art which we saw were characterized by great simplicity and sincerity; by rich, somber color, and by excellent line and form. One was a large portrait of a woman gowned in black; another of the head of a girl carried out in tones of terra cotta, both being thoughtful and quiet in feeling.

There were several line drawings of recumbent figures, and two or three delightful circus paintings of dancers and a clown.

Ricardo Martinez is about to have his first one man show in Mexico City. We saw several of his oils at the Galleria de Arte Mexicano in Calle Milan. This young painter has a sensitive feeling for texture, form, and design. He gives careful attention to detail.

One canvas of two boys in a friendly tussel had the richness of color and the fine detail one finds in the old Dutch masters. Martinez is fond of a certain light tint of yellow—a soft, radiant hue that is unusually beautiful and that was here used to depict the blouse of one of the figures.

Another painting, called "El Flautista," owned by Mrs. Marta Regaldo of El Salvador, is of the head and shoulders of a child playing the flute. The hands are remarkable for their grace and the feeling of movement they portray as they finger the stops of the slender instrument. They are more important, perhaps, than the face, which with childish intensity is bent toward the sheet of music nearby.

Still another of the younger Mexican artists is Delfino Garcia of Taxco. He started drawing at the age of 13 and showed such ability that Kitagawa, a Japanese painter employed by the Mexican government to teach in its schools, took him into his home and taught him. This was in 1931.

In 1934 Garcia had his first exhibition in Mexico City. He was represented at the annual International Exhibition of Water Colors in 1941 at the Art institute here, and also at the San Francisco World's Fair. He works mostly in tempera on paper, and his subjects are the everyday ones found about him in the picturesque mountain village that is his home. His style is highly individual and has great dignity and pleasing feeling for composition.

Juan Soriano, whose work we saw at Ines Amor's gallery in Mexico City, was born in Guadalajara. We recalled an unusual picture of his, "Children Dancing," that had been shown here in the International Water Color exhibition at the Art Institute in 1941. Unusual because the two little children depicted had such tragic faces.

Miss Amor showed us an interesting still life in which Soriano had painted an arrangement of coral and blue flowers with a plain board floor for background. In the midst of the flowers was a white hand. Another canvas had for its subject a child, nude, holding an apple and sitting under an apple tree. Gouache on paper, it is owned by Dr. MacKinley Helm. Still another canvas was a still life of flowers in a blue pitcher.

The work of young Soriano shows much promise, combining as it does a sensitive quality with originality and a fine use of color. None of these youthful Mexican painters we've discussed in this and two previous articles breaks away from tradition completely, yet all are distinctly modern. It will be interesting to watch their progress during the next few years.
